Family Friend Declares Ransom Was Not Paid, Despite Rumor.

Parents' Actions, Heir's Fate Veiled

Secrecy Also Surrounds Trip by Weyerhaeuser, Second Man.

By the Associated Press.

Tacoma, Wash., May 29.—The deadline fixed by the kidnapers for raising $200,000 to ransom 9-year-old George Weyerhaeuser passed tonight without yielding any indication of the fate of the little lumber heir.

The only clew to the carefully veiled maneuvers of the distracted lumber family was a remark by a close friend indicating no ransom money had been paid.

This information came suddenly through the pall of silence surrounding the activities in the case and in the face of rumors that the ransom already had been paid.

The source would not enlarge upon the information given, but this was taken to indicate Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Weyerhaeuser, jr., supposedly willing to pay the sum asked for the life of their son, had not been advised of the boy's whereabouts.

Activity of watchers at the Weyerhaeuser home, meanwhile, centered around attempts to learn the destination of two men who drove away in a motor car later in the afternoon.

Man Not Identified.

One of the men resembled J. P. Weyerhaeuser, father of George, but identity of the second man was not known. Weyerhaeuser returned to the house about noon after another trip he refused to explain.

A postman walked into the yard of the Weyerhaeuser home in mid-afternoon and deposited a large stack of mail in the box, in resuming service which had been stopped for more than 72 hours.

Although little George had been missing for five days at noon today, there was no telling exactly when the abductors would consider the end of the "zero hour" set by them for payment. The first ransom note reached the Weyerhaeuser family shortly after 6:30 p. m. (Pacific standard time) Friday and specified a 5-day limit for the ransom payment.

It hinted George would come to harm if payment was not made in the five days. Mrs. Weyerhaeuser and her three children were at home tonight. What other persons were inside the large white residence overlooking Commencement Bay could not be determined.

Elizabeth, 2-year-old sister of the kidnaped lad, was brought out into the yard for a breath of air and the children's black spaniel dog scampered about on the lawn.

Mother Shows Strain.

To all appearances, normality ruled at the house, but Mrs. Weyerhaeuser plainly showed the strain of days of uncertainty concerning her son's fate. He vanished while en route home from school.

One police official, who declined to be named, said he believed there might be no "break" in the $200,000 ransom abduction of the curly-haired boy before Friday.

"Original plans of the kidnapers

Scaffa Seized By U.S. Agents On Gem Case

Detective Questioned Behind Locked Doors in New York.

By the United Press.

New York, May 29.—Federal agents tonight secretly held and questioned Noel Scaffa, famous private detective and gem retriever.

He was seized by Justice Department operatives at 5:30 p. m. and closeted in the Bureau of Investigation.

Attorney I. Bregoff, counsel for the noted sleuth, charged that Scaffa was held illegally and threatened to institute habeas corpus action.

Some three hours after the agents brought Scaffa to their offices, one emerged from the locked chambers to purchase a tray of food.

"Is he bleeding yet?" asked Bregoff, ejected from the bureau's headquarters even when he appeared with a uniformed policeman.

Quizzed in Jewel Theft.

Scaffa recently was examined by the Federal grand jury in connection with the $185,000 jewel robbery in Miami last January of Mrs. Margaret Bell, former Follies dancer.

Charles Call and Nicholas Montone, Brooklyn hoodlums, were convicted of robbery in the case after peculiar circumstances in connection with the return of the gems. Scaffa was credited with their return.

Bregoff said that he had made a "deal" with Francis W. H. Adams, newly appointed acting United States district attorney, to surrender Scaffa at any time.

When his client was "kidnaped" late today by the Federal men, according to the lawyer, he communicated with Adams, who assured him that no indictments or warrants had been returned against Scaffa.

J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice, last month named Scaffa as the man who arranged for return of the Bell jewels.

The Justice Department has in-

Flandin Fails In First Step To Aid Franc

Gold Still Flowing Out Steadily as Chamber Unit Balks Plan.

Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press.

Paris, May 29.—A steady golden stream, uninterrupted despite strenuous efforts to halt the flight from the franc, flowed out from the Bank of France's vaults today as Premier Pierre-Etienne Flandin suffered the first major setback in his battle for dictatorial financial powers.

The Chamber of Deputies' finance committee voted 25 to 15 against his bill requiring far-reaching authority to balance the budget and defend the franc, emphasizing open hostility developing in Parliament to the government's program. Some quarters said they believed Flandin might have to resign.

Unimpressed, however, Flandin said he would carry his appeal directly to the chamber tomorrow. Prosecution of persons speculating against the franc is contemplated, he announced, and evidence gathered has been sent to the ministry of justice.

Billion Francs Daily.

Meanwhile the Bank of France's gold losses continued to average about 1,000,000,000 francs ($65,800,000) daily, with total losses since the movement began late in March estimated at some 11,000,000,000 francs (almost $718,000,000).

The bank succeeded, however, in keeping the French currency unit pegged at around 15.19 to the dollar (6.58 cents to the franc) by selling dollars to all comers.

After rejecting Flandin's demand for dictatorial financial powers, the chamber committee asked the government to prosecute speculators and take over measures to defend "the integrity of the franc" against them.

The vote was interpreted in the chamber lobbies as representing the majority parliamentary opinion against devaluation, although the committee refrained from taking an outright stand on the issue, because, its chairman explained, currency stabilization negotiations with the United States and England might thereby be hindered.

"The committee did not want to take a stand for or against devaluation," he said, "because stabilization negotiations seemed imminent and they might be hindered by France's internal situation."

Two Rumors Circulated.

Unconfirmed rumors circulated here tonight that Germany was preparing to devalue the mark and that the Bank of France was preparing to raise its discount rate again, from 6 to 7 per cent.

Financial quarters read in the latter report another warning to speculators, while devaluation of the mark, they said, would help bring fleeing capital back to Paris.

The Aquitania sailed from Cherbourg today with 178,000,000 francs (about $11,000,000) worth of gold aboard. Another $29,700,00 worth was in the holds of the Normandie, which sailed from Le Havre on her maiden cruise to New York.

Much of the gold sent abroad during recent weeks was shipped by the bank, officials of which expressed confidence gold buying soon would halt because francs were becoming scarce.

Even should France's hoards suddenly present their billions, it was pointed out, the bank would be able to redeem them, since it would be technically impossible for enough francs to be gathered to exhaust the reserves, constituting 97 per cent coverage of currency in circulation.

Future Offers Problem.

The devaluation issue remained, however, because—should Flandin be defeated in the Chamber of Deputies—an empty treasury might induce his successor to devalue the franc as the only way of getting money.

Flandin, his fractured arm keeping him out of the battle, himself forced the devaluation issue by sending word to the recalcitrant

Il Duce Moves To Bring Army Up to Million

Mussolini Prepared for 'Eventualities' in Europe, Rome Reports.

By the United Press.

Rome, May 29.—Premier Benito Mussolini was reported tonight to be preparing to call additional military classes to the colors, bringing more than 1,000,000 men under arms in Italy by Saturday.

Authoritative sources said Il Duce regards the European diplomatic and political situation so disturbed he decided abruptly to mass his armies in preparation for eventualities.

It was learned Mussolini has become tired of constant discussions of armaments, as well as Adolf Hitler's mild assurances on Austria's independence.

Il Duce also wants to demonstrate to Europe that Italy is perfectly able to pursue her own policies without waiting for the other powers.

Mussolini also was represented as desiring to show that the disturbed European situation will not deter him from any project he has in mind in Abyssinia—and that any Abyssinian threat will not be allowed to go unchallenged on the ground of trouble on the continent.

Move Seems Inevitable.

He is prepared to muster sufficient men under arms to put two armies in the field, if necessary.

Already 700,000 men have been called to the colors. The premier feels Italy will need the service of at least another conscript class.

The new class, together with large contingents of Fascist Black Shirts, will put more than 1,000,000 men in service shortly.

The Fascist militita could supply enough trained men to reach 1,000,000, but it appears that calling of other classes is inevitable under Il Duce's scheme.

Mussolini was believed finished with empty talk regarding the Austrian frontier and territorial integrity and determined that any nation disturbing the peace of Austria must reckon with the Italian army, which he intends to make large enough to meet any emergency.

A year ago, when the Nazis in Austria became violent, Mussolini offered to put the Italian army at Vienna's disposal to subject them and prevent their seizing control of the government. He seems prepared to do likewise should the emergency arise again.

Young Fears 'Radicalism' In Bank Bill

Calls Pending Measure Threat to Return of Prosperity.

By Robert C. Albright.

Warning against "radical new departures," Owen D. Young, chairman of the board of the General Electric Co., yesterday advised a Senate Banking sub-committee "to do nothing and to threaten nothing" if it wishes prosperity to return.

He was opposing the Administration omnibus banking bill, for increasing Federal Reserve Board control over currency and credit. Passage of the measure, he said, would retard economic recovery.

"I say that the way to get recovery today is to do nothing more to shake the confidence of business men," the New York financier, a director in the New York Federal Reserve Bank, told the Senate group.

"It is careful conservatism, not radical new departures, which will get now the activity which we so sorely need."

A similar note was struck by H. Parker Willis, New York economist and professor of banking at Columbia University, who followed Young before the committee. He said the proposed banking measure represented "a complete negation of everything fundamental in the Federal Reserve act."

Proposes Study.

Willis proposed a six-month study by a special commission set up by Congress to sound out the views of experienced business men. There should be 5 to 10 years intervals between banking legislation in this country, he insisted.

Young, often mentioned among conservative Democratic presidential prospects, read deliberately from a prepared statement, then answered a round-table cross-fire of questions.

Intimately acquainted with most members of the sub-committee, the tall, greying, but still youthful appearing banker, spoke easily and joined in committee banter.

"You think we should adjourn and go home," Senator James Couzens (Republican), Michigan, asked him.

"That might be a good thing," the witness replied.

Couzens wanted to know if he agreed with former Vice President Charles G. Dawes that recovery is due by July.

"I talked with Gen. Dawes," replied Young, "and I told him it was all right to be a prophet, but he shouldn't attempt to fix the date."

Fears Inflation.

The General Electric executive said he was "apprehensive" of inflation, but did not believe it was here and saw no urgent danger of its early arrival. He saw a basis for such an expansion, however, in authority of banks to exchange Government obligations for new currency.

His fear of inflation, he said, was that of a man disliking to entrust his "safety to a chauffeur who is a morphine addict."

Young said America now has "perfectly sound" banks.

"The people have confidence in them," he said. "The only question now is to get business to use the $25,000,000,000 operating credits in these banks. Business will never use it so long as confidence is impaired. We should take a breathing spell."

The witness declared there has been much "piece-meal banking legislation and a great deal of emergency legislation, and the prudent

President Backs NRA; Price, Pay Cuts Begin; Johnson Asks New Act

Says Act Can Be Drawn Within Limits Set by Court.

Sees 20 Per Cent Of New Jobs Gone

Pledges to Keep Codes Called 'Beautiful Gestures.'

Declaring that "one explosive thunder from the Supreme Court" had destroyed the NRA, Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, in a radio broadcast last night, contended that a new law could be drafted which would avoid the faults of the first act and would be clearer and more effective.

He argued this could be done within the limits of the Supreme Court decision, which, he said, "the Administration will respect as a law from Sinai." Whereas it would have been impossible to do this two years ago, he explained, Congress, because of the experience of NRA, is now in a position to specify a standard, as required by the high court.

In characteristic language, the creator of the Blue Eagle and its first administrator denied that the Supreme Court ruling had "wrecked" the New Deal. He said it is only "a temporary halt" and that the President's program toward greater social and economic justice will continue.

Familiar Epithets Used.

The general's address was sprinkled with the usual Johnsonian epithets: "Chiselers"—a word he made a household term—"ghouls of industry," "wolves eating sheep" and similar terms. Throughout the speech he referred to the Schechter poultry case, on which the Supreme Court decision was based, as "the sick chicken case."

After making a spirited defense of what had been accomplished under NRA and conceding its faults—for most of which he assumed responsibility—the blunt-spoken former Army officer contended that as result of invalidation of the act "decent living standards for labor are running out like sand in an hour glass."

Price-slashing had started in every direction, he asserted, adding that in the whole of industry tomorrow or the next day "the labor chiseler is going to offer his product at a 20 per cent reduction."

"20 Per Cent of Jobs Gone."

"The high-minded employers are going to have to meet that cut or go out of business," he continued. "There is only one way they can meet it—to do the samethngs themselves. Twenty-per cent of all jobs in that group are on their way out. The same thing is going on everywhere tonight."

This was true in spite of the "many beautiful gestures" which have been made, including appeals by the Chamber of Commerce and the Manufacturers Association to all industry to live up to code standards voluntarily, he declared.

"It is a commendable and sincere thought," he asserted. "But for the reason I have just stated, and the President stated two years ago, it is utterly impossible. The chiseling fringe—the selfish 10 per cent—under our competitive system, can always kill the wages of the high-minded 90 per cent down to their own level unless somewhere there is power to protect decency.

Warns of Turmoil.

"NRA did that and nothing else has ever been discovered which could do it—but that whole system, that high ideal, has been destroyed by one explosive thunder from the Supreme Court. The pieces of it have gone up into the air. Some are beginning to clatter down around our ears but the big pieces have not yet struck the earth.

"Every nickel's worth of reduction in price can come from one place only and that is from the hours, wages and jobs of workers. Some large groups are highly organized. They will not calmly

Big Industries Act to Uphold NRA Standard

Voluntary Observance of Price Codes Urged by Steel Men.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 29.—Scattered breaks appeared today in the ranks of the NRA army of industry and business—mustered out by the Supreme Court—but re-enlistments on a voluntary basis continued the general rule.

While great corporations and trade associations throughout the country added their pledges to a mounting pile of promises that NRA standards would not be precipitately discarded, several defections occurred in isolated sections.

Price cutting in New York was coupled with a charge that virtually the entire fur industry here had abandoned the 35-hour week and was working unlimited overtime. The charge, voiced by James F. Hodgson, executive director of the code authority, was promptly denied by a spokesman for the Fur Workers Union.

Textile Mills to Change.

While labor leaders repeated their determination to hold the ground they gained under NRA, three Southern plants informed their employes of changes in wage and hour schedules.

The Piedmont Shirt Co., of Greenville, S. C., employing 250 workers, announced a wage reduction averaging 25 per cent and an increase in working hours from 36 to 40 and 44 a week. The McNutt Battery Co., of Knoxville, Tenn., cut the pay of its five employes and increased their hours, and the Boger & Crawford Spinning Mill at Gastonia, N. C., was notified by Philadelphia headquarters that a minimum wage of $16 a week and 50-hour shifts would go into effect next week.

With the removal of code restrictions, price cutting spread from New York to Kansas City, where cigarettes were being sold at 10 cents a pack, and to Los Angeles, where W. H. Loughry, executive secretary of the food and grocery code authority, said some prices had been slashed as much as 50 per cent.

Loughry warned that "price cutting will result in wage reductions and an increase in the hours for labor."

In New York, the retail cigarette

Roosevelt Stresses Fear Voluntary Codes Will Fail.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Apparently without any plan formulated to meet the situation created by the Supreme Court invalidation of the NRA, President Roosevelt yesterday made it clear he is waiting for the reaction of industry, business, labor and the country generally before he decides on a course of action.

Mr. Roosevelt further indicated that he does not believe a system of voluntary codes will meet the situation, since the crux of the problem has been the refusal of small minorities in industry to cooperate by maintaining wage scales and price levels.

Meanwhile, Mr. Roosevelt explained, he is examining every aspect of this crisis in the New Deal and seeking to determine what is feasible and possible. In breaking his silence at his semi-weekly press conference, he declined to reveal what, if any, conclusions he has reached regarding the effect of the high tribunal's ruling on his social and economic reform plans.

Proposes New NRA.

Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, sponsor and first administrator of NRA, who twice conferred yesterday with President Roosevelt, in a Nation-wide broadcast last night contended that it was possible to draft new NRA legislation without "most of its objectionable features" and leaving it "clearer, stronger, better and more permanent than it ever was before."

Disclaiming that he spoke for anyone or that he had been summoned here to write a new statute, Gen. Johnson, however, used language similar to that employed by the President when he expressed skepticism at efficacy of voluntary code observance.

The blunt-spoken former NRA chieftain contended that the appeals of trade and business associations—which greatly increased in volume yesterday—to industry to live up voluntarily to the codes were "beautiful gestures" but "utterly impossible." He said that the "chiseling fringe—the selfish 10 per cent under our competitive system—can always kill the wages of the high-minded 90 per cent down to their own level unless somewhere there is a power to protect decency."

Capital Is Skeptical.

Gen Johnson, however, exhibited an optimism regarding drafting of future legislation not shared by many within the Administration or on Capitol Hill. Particularly in the latter place the view grew yesterday that for the New Deal to go on with any effectiveness a new definition of Federal power over industry and business would have to be written into the Constitution.

Even if the best legal minds in the Administration ultimately take that view after a thorough analysis of the Supreme Court decision, it is expected that some kind of an effort will be made to obtain temporary legislation or arrangement as a stop-gap until the lengthy procedure of amending the Constitution can be achieved.

Mr. Roosevelt yesterday called to his assistance one of the best legal minds in the country, apparently to advise him regarding the exact meaning of the Supreme Court decision, when he conferred with Prof. Felix Frankfurter, of Harvard Law School. Incidentally, the visits of both Gen. Johnson and Prof. Frankfurter were veiled in secrecy until after their departures—both men arriving and leaving by back doors.

Many Back-Door Visits.

Apparently many others have slipped unnoticed into the Presidential office in the last two days, because Mr. Roosevelt at his press

Ship Feared Sunk With Forty Aboard

By the Associated Press.

The loss of 40 fishermen on the French schooner Marechal de Luxemburg was feared last night after a French naval cruiser searched the Grand Banks, off Newfoundland, for the boat which was reported in distress May 18.

The steamship Point Lobos, of the Gulf Pacific Mail Lines, was reported hard aground, but with little damage, 25 miles south of Powell River, British Columbia, and a salvage tug was believed to be standing by.

The Marechal de Luxemburg, out of St. Malo, France, had been reported leaking and trying to make St. Johns, Newfoundland. The captain of a French trawler brought news of her distress to St. Johns.

The bare hope of survival of her crew lay in a belief the men might have taken to small boats and have been picked up by a ship without wireless to report their safety.

By the Associated Press.

La Havre, France, May 29.—Slight damage to the cargo of the United States liner Manhattan by a fire at sea May 26 was reported when the ship reached here today.

The fire was discovered in the hold Sunday night. It was extinguished in 40 minutes, the officials of the line said, with only a few passengers aware of what had happened. The cause of the blaze was not determined. The ship proceeded to Hamburg at 7 p. m.

III.

As a matter of fact, Bob La Follette was never considered the brainy one of the family. Phil, now 38, was always the white-haired boy of the La Follettes. He was to inherit the crown. Good-old Bob was the plodding, dependable one. Bob went through college creditably enough, but Phil's record at the University of Wisconsin was positively brilliant, and he was the dynamic member of the family who was designed to succeed his father in the United States Senate. But the elder La Follette died in 1925, when Phil was too young to take a senatorial seat legally, and the dynasty had to be represented at Washington by Bob.

Phil is a dramatic "chip off the old block," where Bob is a refined splinter. Phil has short, bushy hair in typical La Follette pompadour style, where Bob's is slicked back. He is fiery, impassioned, like his father, whereas Bob is more sober and informative. Phil was an honor student in the University of Wiscon and in its law school, where he subsequently taught; Bob got along all right, but had neither the outstanding scholastic nor the personal abilities of his brother. Phil is political paprika; Bob is the salt of the earth, and, human nature being what it is, the majority of people get along better with Bob and his policies, while they have greater enthusiasm for Phil and his ambitions.

Phil campaigned with his father in 1924, when he was 27 years old. Since it had been impossible for Phil to run for the Senate after his father's death, and since Wisconsin would probably not cherish two La Follette Senators, if only to avoid confusion, it was finally decided that Phil should run for Governor in 1930. He did, and was

Normandie Seeks Speed Record On Maiden Voyage to New York

By the Associated Press.

Aboard S. S. Normandie, at Sea, May 29.—The 79,000-ton liner Normandie, France's new queen of the seas, sailed from Le Havre at 6:30 p. m. (12:30 p. m. Washington time) on her maiden voyage to New York.

A new record for the transatlantic crossing was the superliner's goal as she swung away from her pier with 1,070 festive passengers, including the wife of the President of France, aboard.

Intensely proud of the liner's performance in trial tests, French shipping men call her "the biggest and fastest" vessel afloat. That claim will be disputed in all probability, however, when Britain commissions her huge Queen Mary.

The 1,030-foot French floating palace, which cost $53,000,000 to build, has rung up speeds of better than 30 knots in trial runs, and Frenchmen say the British vessel will be hard put to it to better that figure.

If Capt. Rene Pugnet's belief that his ship can do the distance across the Atlantic in just four days is realized, she will collect for France ocean speed records held by Germany's Europa and Bremen and Italy's Rex.

The record is 4 days, 17 hours and 6 minutes, an average of 27.92 knots.

Planes Rush Troops to Block Uprising in African Mine Riots

By the Associated Press.

Bulawayo, Southern Rhodesia, May 29.—Hundreds of troops were rushed to the copper belt in northern Rhodesia to protect whites, including many Americans, in the wake of fierce riots in which six natives were killed and many wounded at the strike-torn Roan Antelope Mine.

Some of the troops were dispatched to the scene in four available Royal Air Force planes to stave off a possible uprising of the natives against a comparative handful of whites.

The mine manager's staff and their families were reported safe for the time being, according to word received here, but the fear that disorders would spread led to the mobilization of whites as special constables.

The blacks appeared to be well organized, and it was believed there were agitators in a subversive momement. The strikers are demanding increased wages on the ground that the government had raised the poll tax by 5 shillings.

Kingston, Jamaica, May 29 (AP). A strike of banana carriers that started Monday erupted into violence today and one woman was killed as police fired into hostile crowds on the waterfront.

Sticks and stones hurled by the demonstrators injured four policemen. Quiet was restored after the police fusillade.

NRA Loss Fails To Stop Action On Utility Bill

The shadow of the Supreme Court's constitutional blow at New Deal legislation reached into the Senate yesterday, but it failed to check a speedy decision to take up the Wheeler-Rayburn bill to abolish "unnecessary" utility holding companies.

The drastic control measure, to regulate closely all operating utility concerns and eliminate holding companies which can not justify their existence to satisfaction of the Securities and Exchange Commission, weathered the first legislative blasts.

Despite warnings from three members of the Senate that the Supreme Court decision in the NRA and Frazier-Lemke cases directly affected legality of the utility holding company bill, the measure was made the Senate's unfinished business by a roar of "ayes."

Hastings, White Oppose.

Senator Daniel O. Hastings (Republican), Delaware, vainly argued that the measure not only would violate the fifth amendment by threatened confiscation of property without just compensation but would invade commerce powers of the several States.

Senator Wallace H. White (Republican), of Maine, who said he had gone over the measure with an outstanding constitutional authority, insisted the bill was so contrary to the Constitution "that a wagon and team of horses could be driven through it seven different directions."

Senator William H. Dieterich (Democrat), of Illinois, said the bill should be recommitted first to the Interstate Commerce Committee, then to the Judiciary Committee, in the light of the Supreme Court's action.

Fears Another Upset.

"We had better give it more consideration or we'll find ourselves in the same position we were the day before yesterday," Dieterich said. "If this bill means the end of private ownership of the utilities dealt with in its provisions, we should be careful."

Dieterich offered a number of amendments to eliminate all authority to destroy holding companies but giving the Securities and Exchange Commission power to iron out "unnecessary complexities" in organization.

Senator Hastings served notice he will make another effort to send the bill back to committee.

Senator Hastings charged the Interstate Commerce Committee had resorted to extraordinary procedure in reporting out the bill. Various committee amendments were added to the original measure, then the revised draft introduced as a new bill. The Senate was thus prevented from passing upon amendments individually, he said.

Propaganda Charged.

Senator Burton K. Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, co-author of the measure, retorted that opposition to the bill was inspired by "power trust" propaganda. He said he personally had received more than 3,000 letters opposing it. He denied there was any attempt at deception.

Benjamin V. Cohen, Government attorney and reputedly one of the authors of the bill, sat beside Wheeler in the Senate. In the gallery was Thomas G. Corcoran, another Government attorney, who collaborated with Cohen and who appeared before the committee in support of the measure.

Answering Hastings' charges of unconstitutionality, Wheeler insisted the Securities and Exchange Commission would exempt any holding companies which are wholly intrastate. Hastings replied he was willing to grant no such assumption.

Foresees Confiscation.

"This bill undertakes arbitrarily to confiscate the securities held by millions of persons in utility corporations," the Delaware Senator said. "Because a corporation, directly or indirectly, holds as much as 10 per cent of the voting stock of another corporation, it is here proposed by congressional fiat to say to such owner, 'Give up your stock, give up your voting rights, on that which you have lawfully acquired under the laws of a sovereign State shall be destroyed.'"

Norris Defends Bill.

Wheeler acknowledged fears as to constitutionality had been aroused by the Supreme Court's decision, but insisted one reading of the court's opinion would show there was nothing in the bill "remotely affected." He argued it was not possible for the States adequately to regulate holding companies.

Senator George W. Norris (Republican), Nebraska, joined in the Wheeler assault on holding companies, contending holding company charges to operating subsidiaries for "services" were "out of all reason."

Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, said he thought recovery should be put ahead of reform, and raised a question as to probable deflationary effect of the bill. Wheeler denied the bill would wipe out millions in investments.

Operetta to Be Given By Friendship House

Between You and Me

By Raymond Clapper

Administration leaders have been conferring almost continuously since Monday afternoon, but appear to have been unable as yet to find a satisfactory answer to the problem raised by the Supreme Court's NRA decision.

Discussion concerning the immediate future appears to take two principal lines. One is that voluntary code procedure should be developed. The other is for obtaining specific legislation dealing with a few basic industries largely interstate in their operations. Neither line of discussion has developed satisfactorily and the outlines are sketchy.

* * * *

Roughly, the proposal for a plates modification of the anti-trust law to the exient that it voluntary code system contemwould be waived for concerns abiding by fair trade practices, as determined by the Federal Trade Commission. Even assuming general co-operation in industry, many troublesome questions of monopoly and prices would arise. Mr. Roosevelt appears to have considerable doubts about the workability of a voluntary system such as this. He recalls that it was the chiseling 10 per cent which undermined prices before NRA and led to the demand for compulsory action against recalcitrants.

* * * *

An attack on the problem through legislation dealing with selected basic industries also offers great obstacles. In this group would be industries such as coal, rubber, textiles, steel, automobiles and lumber. The Supreme Court has indicated that mining and manufacture as such are not interstate activity and are therefore beyond the control of the Federal Government. However, in distribution these industries are interstate in character and the idea is that the control might be exercised over at least a part of the activity of such industries.

Yet if a purchaser locates an agent within the State of origin, the interstate character of the distribution vanishes. And there is no way whatever of controlling wages and hours. The child labor law, prohibiting transportation in interstate commerce of goods manufactured by child labor, was invalidated by the Supreme Court on the ground that this was a subterfuge to enforce a regulation through the interstate commerce clause.

* * * *

On the long-range view many here believe the country is entering a cycle through which most modern industrial nations already have passed. Those who have studied industrial organization abroad say that voluntary control through cartels and other means has broken down because of chiseling and been replaced by compulsion regardless of the political atmosphere of the country and regardless of whether it was on or off gold, whether it had a favorable or an unfavorable balance of trade, whether it was a creditor or a debtor nation. In the United States we skipped the voluntary cartel stage and leaped straight into the method of coercion of recalcitrants.

Perhaps the country was not prepared for that leap. As some in the Administration see the problem, we will give the voluntary system a trial and will find that it can not stand up and then, more convinced than we are now that it is necessary, we will go back to the stage of coercion which has just been abandoned by the Supreme Court's decision.

These matters get down to fundamentals. They have nothing to do with political labels. To discuss them in terms of fascism, communism, Hitlerism, democracy or dictatorship confuses rather than clarifies the problem.

They can be considered more sanely if thought of in terms of economic forces and with the thought that government is not an abstraction with a label on it but merely an attempt by men to handle problems which come up out of everyday life. The trouble is that we set up something that seems appropriate to those problems and give it a name, and then when the problems change, we have become so obsessed with the label that we can not give rational thought to what is inside the bottle.

* * * *

Anyone sitting down in the cool of the evening out of reach of the political orators, and thinking out loud among inimate friends, will recognize frankly that great fundamental changes are taking place. They have been working gradually since the rise of the machine and big business. These changes have been world-wide. But in addition we have some changes peculiar to America.

The disappearance of the frontier and decline in the rate of population growth through restriction of immigration particularly are working vast changes. Anti-trust laws which were applicable to a pioneer country with a rapidly rising consuming power are outworn after the population becomes more static. We had a speculative expansion, and it is unfortunate that the aftermath of that complicates the consideration of more permanent problems with which NRA sought to deal. Our position has been further complicated by the collapse of European buying power, which has backed up surpluses in this country.

All of these coinciding factors have confused the problem. But that only makes it harder to deal with and makes it even more ridiculous for persons to be saying that the Supreme Court has cleared up everything and we can go back where we were and that everything will work out if just let alone.

Try to build yourself a house that way sometime and see how it works out.

* * * *

A friend was walking to work down Nineteenth street when he noticed something on the sidewalk in front of the residence of Associate Justice Pierce Butler, of the Supreme Court. It looked like a child's handwriting but afterward he wondered if perhaps some New Dealer, exasperated over the NRA decision, had written it.

There in large chalk letters, so plain that Justice Butler could read it without his glasses, someone had written: "Nuts."

Leopold, in Jail, Continues Studies

Slayer Takes Correspondence Courses of College.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, May 29.—Hieroglyphics and higher mathematics occupy the keen mind of Nathan Leopold as he serves his life term at the Joliet Penitentiary.

The University of Chicago disclosed today that Leopold had resumed the scholarly career interrupted 11 years ago with his conviction of the "thrill murder" of young Bobby Franks. The convict has subscribed to these correspondence courses: "Introduction to hieroglyphics" and "elementary theory of equations."

He has also renewed his quest for a master's degree, based on a study of the question: "Do paroled convicts make good?"

Leopold was known as a precocious student at the university. He studied Romance languages and Sanskrit. He read papers on ornithology to meetings of scientists.

But he closed his book temporarily in 1924, when he and Richard Loeb were sent to prison for the sensational Franks slaying.

The learning of the youths was taken into consideration by penitentiary officials. Leopold serves as librarian. Loeb prepares some of the papers circulated in the intra-penitentiary correspondence school.

Army Center to Receive Two Portraits Today

Old portraits of Capt. John S. Marshall, first dental officer of the Army, and Col. Robert Todd Oliver will be presented to the Army Medical Center at 10:30 a. m. today. New York dentists donated the Marshall picture, while the Oliver portrait is the gift of officers of the Dental Corps. Both pictures were painted by Bernard Godwin.

Lieut. Col. John L. Peters will present the picture of Capt. Marshall, and Col. Stone will present the Oliver portrait. Lieut. Col. R. H. Mills will preside and will accept the two pictures on behalf of the Army Dental School. Ceremonies will be held in the Medical Center auditorium.

Baptists to Hear Alliance Leaders

World Activity of Church Is Topic Tomorrow.

"The Baptists and World Affairs" will be the subject two Baptists leaders will discuss at a mass meeting of Washington members of the denomination tomorrow night in Calvary Baptist Church.

The speakers will be Dr. George W. Truett, Dallas, Tex., president of the Baptist World Alliance, and Dr. J. H. Rushbrooke, London, England executive secretary of the alliance.

Dr. Truett, who was president of the Southern Baptist Convention three years, has been pastor of the First Baptist Church of Dallas since 1897.

Dr. Rushbrooke, who as executive secretary of the Baptist Alliance, has visited many countries, will describe conditions under which the denomination is working throughout the world.

Move to Scrap All Tariff Pacts Made in Senate

Five In Operation Invalid Under NRA Decision, Vandenberg Says.

A resolution proposing that "hereafter no foreign tariff agreements be entered into" was introduced in the Senate yesterday by Senator Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan. The resolution provided that any such agreements heretofore entered into be terminated at the earliest possible date.

Senator Vandenberg contended that under the NRA decision Congress had exceeded its authority in delegating the treaty-making power to the President. Trade agreements have been concluded with Cuba, Brazil, Belgium, Haiti and Sweden. Others are being negotiated.

Foreseeing possible treaty fractures, Secretary Hull voiced his "serious objections" to proposed Federal regulation of rates, fares and charges of foreign ships using American ports.

Hits Water Carrier Bill.

His stand was backed by a resolution of the Interdepartmental Committee on Commercial Policy declaring such regulation would prove "injurious to American foreign trade"

Hull's opposition to foreign ship regulation was directed specifically against sections of the pending ship subsidy and Eastman water-carrier regulation bills. He wrote Senate and House committee chairmen, saying in his letter to Senator Wheeler, of the Interstate Commerce Committee:

"I do not feel that an attempt by this Government to prescribe minimum rates which may be charged by foreign vessels on the cargoes which they carry between American and foreign ports would be in harmony with that basic principle in our treaty structure under which we have granted to foreign shipping the right of free access to our ports and in return have obtained for our ships the right of free access to foreign ports.

Bill Draws Protest.

"Certainly such regulation would be in conflict with the generally accepted practices of international law. * * *

"As you are doubtless aware, the proposed code of fair competition for the shipping industry failed to receive the President's approval, and one of the principal objections raised against it related to the provisions for regulation of rates in foreign commerce. * * *

"In my opinion, a most serious objection to any unilateral attempt by this Government to fix rates in foreign commerce lies in the fact that this procedure would add one more form of restriction to the entangled and conflicting mass of nationalistic restrictions from which our foreign trade is suffering today.

"The impracticability of such unilateral regulation can readily be appreciated if one considers the impasse that would result if another government should adopt the same practice, but should prescribe rates covering its trade with us differing from those our authorities prescribed for the very same trade."

Hull said in his letter that the Danish minister already had made representations to this Government against provisions in the Eastman bill.

Barbara Asks U.S. To Set Aside Tax

Deductions Erroneously Disallowed, She Claims.

By the Associated Press.

The former Barbara Hutton, Woolworth heiress now honeymooning with the Count Haugwitz-Reventlow, brought action yesterday to set aside an additional 1932 income tax assessment of $28,432.

A petition in the name of Barbara Haugwitz-Reventlow was filed with the Board of Tax Appeals. The Bureau of Internal Revenue had addressed the deficiency letter to Barbara Hutton Mdivani at 250 Park avenue, New York, but the petition pointed out "the petitioner's name was changed, by virtue of marriage, on May 14, 1935."

The document charged the bureau erroneously disallowed deductions from taxable income for guardian's fees and business expenses of $79,379.

Treasury Asks Fund to Probe Income Taxes

'Little Fellows' Returns to Be Studied as PWA Project.

Income tax returns filed by the "little fellow" will be subjected to minute scrutiny by the Treasury Department under a plan revealed by the Works Relief Administration yesterday. The Treasury, it was stated, has asked for $6,559,100 to employ relief workers for this purpose. It also asked $7,983,725 to employ relief workers to investigate excise tax payments in 20 large cities.

At the same time, the Works Administration revealed requests had been made by the War Department for a total of $8,316,885 for improvements in the District of Columbia and vicinity. These include $3,513,019 for new buildings and other work at the Army Medical Center; $1,233,253 for reconstruction, new buildings and other improvements at Fort Belvoir and $1,570,613 for reconstruction, new buildings and other improvements at the Quartermaster Depot.

In all, the War Department asked $43,926,771 for 72 Army construction projects in 23 States. The Geodetic Survey of the Department of Commerce requested $7,038,409 to carry on surveys in coastal States and for topographical and seismological investigation.

War Department requests included the following Maryland projects: Fort Meade, $475,000; Curtis Bay ordnance depot, $158,200; Fort Howard, $466,000; Edgewood arsenal, $3,685,748; Fort Hoyle, $279,800.

In asking for money to finance investigation of income tax returns, the Treasury explained that of 700,000 returns filed annually, only about 350,000 are examined. Those examined are the larger returns.

The excise tax investigation would cover furriers, manufacturing jewelers, sporting goods manufacturers, manufacturers of cosmetics, and those taxpayers subject to levies on admissions and dues. Cities in which this investigation would be conducted are New York, Buffalo, Chicago, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Detroit, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Cleveland, Cincinnati, St. Louis, Kansas City, Baltimore, Washington, Boston, Milwaukee, Minneapolis, New Orleans, Newark, and Seattle.

Wide Area Swept In Honduras Fire

Americans Lose Banana and Timber Lands.

By the Associated Press.

Tegucigalpa, Honduras, May 29. A tremendous fire, of unknown origin, today was sweeping the isolated Black River district of the Mosquitia zone where the United Fruit Co. and other American companies own large banana and timber interests.

Starting Monday, the blaze already had destroyed many farms, several hamlets, railroad bridges, several miles of railroad track, thousands of acres of banana plantations, mahogany forests and timberlands, camps and farmhouses, said meager advices reaching here.

There was no estimate of the damage, nor did the dispatches mention any casualties.

Naval Officer Sues Over Promotion

Running Mate Exchanged, Comdr. Hel mCharges.

Seeking to regain 450 "files" he lost when his "running mate" was exchanged for another, Commander James P. Helm, Navy Supply Corps, yesterday asked the District Supreme Court to require Secretary of the Navy Swanson to restore the former "mate" and thus permit him to regain his early chance for promotion.

Under a recent Act of Congress, officers of the line of the Navy were coupled with "running mates" of the same grade for the convenience of official records. Commander Helm said he was originally given Captain (then Commander) David W. Bagley for his mate, but when the latter was promoted a junior officer was substituted.

Under this arrangement, he said, he had lost the files which may jeopardize his promotion, and he insists that the Secretary restore Capt. Bagley to his list. Rees B. Gillespie, an attorney, filed the petition, which was in the form of a "mandamus."

Court to Hear Lyddane Plot Charge June 10

Woman to Go on Trial Before a Full Bench in Rockville.

Mrs. Anne Lyddane, blonde bank clerk, will go on trial before a full bench of the circuit court in Rockville on June 10, it was announced yesterday.

The strange case of plot and counter-plot, in which Mrs. Lyddane is charged with conspiracy to murder her husband, Francis Lyddane, will be heard by Chief Judge Hammond Urner and Associate Judges Arthur D. Willard and Charles W. Woodward.

It was predicted that the trial would take about a week. The date was set after conferences between the circuit court judges and attorneys representing the State and the defense.

Four men, Washington police characters, also are under indictment and will be tried at the same time. In addition to conspiracy to murder her husband, Mrs. Lyddane has been indicted for conspiracy to murder Mrs. Josephine Beall, of Darnestown, Md.

Those who will be tried with Mrs. Lyddane are John A. Carnell, Harry Thomas, Edwin Davis, and John Boland.

Japanese Rule In North China Appears Likely

Immediate Settlement of 14 Points Demanded by War Lords.

By the Associated Press.

Tokyo, May 29.—Japanese military domination of all north China today apparently was foreshadowed in Rengo (Japanese) News Agency dispatches from Peiping, which said Japanese army officers there had demanded China's immediate settlement of 14 disputed points.

The list of demands was said to have been presented in connection with stern protests against alleged anti-Japanese movements in the Peiping and Tientsin regions and warning that such activity must cease.

A war office spokesman here, shown the dispatch, said it "incorrectly described" what had happened at Peiping, but the Rengo advices said the Chinese had been warned Japan's military forces in Manchuria might be forced to move south unless anti-Japanese sentiment were stilled.

Military Rule Seen.

Dispatches from Shanghai quoted Rengo as saying Chinese authorities had been advised that "the Japanese army may be obliged to place Peiping and Tientsin within the demilitarized zone, as most anti-Japanese activities in north China are originating in the two cities."

It was officially announced here that Col. Takashi Sakai, chief of the Japanese garrison at Tientsin, and Lieut.-Col. Masao Takashashi, Japanese resident officer at Peiping, visited Gen. Ho Ying-Chin, China's war minister and chairman of the Peiping military committee, Wednesday.

A protest and warning were handed to Gen. Ho, it was learned reliably, the contents of which were not divulged here.

Rengo's Peiping correspondent, however, said the Japanese had asserted another punitive expedition would be sent south from Manchuria unless anti-Japanese terrorism in North China ended quickly.

He said the 14 points, existence of which could not be confirmed officially either in Peiping or Tokyo, included these:

1. Immediate dismissal of Gen. Yu Hseuh-Chung, chairman of the provincial government at Hopei, whom the Japanese early this month accused of moving troops into the demilitarized zone.
2. Obtaining of Japenese consent before appointing principal Chinese officials in North China.
3. Abolition of the Peiping Military Committee.
4. Withdrawal of all Kuomintang (national government party) organizations from North China.

Indications that the Japanese Army was ready to deal firmly with North China were strengthened by the fact that Lieut. Gen. Yoshijiro Umezu, commandant of Japanese garrisons in North China, went to Manchuria Wednesday and conferred with Gen. Senjuro Hayashi, Japanese war minister, now touring Manchukuo.

Afterward he entrained for Peiping and there was much speculation as to what would follow his return there.

'Mystery House' in Tacoma Kidnaping Case have been upset," he pointed out, "by authorities and publicity."

Many commentators expressed fear the boy would not be returned alive.

There were occasional flurries of activity at the Weyerhaeuser home. Drawn shades were lifted slightly and someone peeped out now and then.

Once a motor car registered by the late J. P. Weyerhaeuser, sr., drove up to the house and an unidentified man carried a small cardboard box inside. None of the watchers could learn what the box contained.

Tension in City.

Tension of the city was reflected in the increased guard over children of wealthy parents. All were being "chaperoned."

Police disclosed a watch had been kept at three schools since last October as the result of an incident reported by a 14-year-old girl student at Anne Wright Seminary.

She said she was approached in the hall by a young man who told her:

"Your father has been seriously injured and is at a hospital. He wants me to bring you to him."

Repeatedly cautioned against heeding strangers, she ran from him and subsequently found the report untrue.

Massed Department of Justice agents, remaining on the sidelines for the time being on the fervent plea of the family, shifted their forces as if making ready to go into action.

Police from San Francisco to the Canadian border were running down "clews" in the spectacular crime. Local authorities checked up fruitlessly on one "lead" after another.

Frenchmen Rush to Buy Gold As Bank Peddles Yellow Bars

Citizens Shed Francs, Lug Away Ingots; 'Slices' Sold Peasants.

By the United Press.

Paris, May 29.—Gold ingots sold like loaves of yellow bread across the counters of the Bank of France today as investors sought safety in holding bullion until certain the franc is safe from devaluation.

In accordance with the bank's policy of full adherence to the gold standard, the ingots were sold from its huge vaults to all comers.

They sold at the current rate of 215,000 francs for a 25-pound bar. The bars were not glittering, as gold is supposed to be, but gleamed a dull yellow color, like an old bread crust.

Frenchmen carrying all sorts of suitcases, handbags and even market bags lined up before the bank counters all day and hurried way with fortunes under which some staggered.

The gold rush was so great an extra staff had to be assigned to "cash gold sales" counters.

Officials of the bank insisted, however, that "while there is a heavy flow of gold, there is not a panic situation. There is no grave danger in the bank's loss of gold if Parliament intervenes rapidly."

The United Press learned that gold withdrawn Monday by foreign banks and French foreign ingot buyers totaled 1,123,000,000 francs (about $74,005,000). Hence the bank's reserves were estimated to have dropped to about 70,000,000,000 francs ($4,613,000,000).

Enterprising gold bar brokers sold ingots in the countryside where the 25-pound bars were cut into slices to fit the peasant pocketbooks—with a 10 per cent margin for the slicers.

Berkeley Springs High School Closes

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Berkeley Springs, W. Va., May 29. Marking the close of public school finals in this section, 39 students were given diplomas from Berkeley Springs High School at exercises in the State Park outdoor theater. Nearly 1,000 gathered for the ceremony. The address to the graduates was delivered by Dr. W. H. S. White, president of Shepherd State Teachers College, Shepherdstown, W. Va. Troubles in France White House Topic

By the Associated Press.

Financial troubles in France were the subject of a White House conference yesterday that hinted of planning by this Government for any action demanded by developments abroad.

President Roosevelt talked with George L. Harrison, governor of the New York Reserve Bank, which is the Treasury's fiscal agent in international transactions. Mr. Roosevelt would say only that the discussion was about the French situation.

Harrison then visited the Treasury and conferred with Undersecretary Coolidge. Later he went to Reserve Board headquarters.

None to Comment.

No one concerned would comment. But in official quarters there was intense interest in the huge outward flow of gold from France, and Premier Pierre-Etienne Flandin's fight for dictatorial powers to defend the franc.

The devaluation issue raging in the French government held the special attention of officials here, who noted also Canadian plans to seek powers for revaluing gold.

In some quarters it was felt that devaluation of the franc, key unit of the European gold bloc, might spur international stabilization steps which already have been encouraged openly by Secretaries Hull and Morgenthau.

China Silent.

Since their public utterances Hull and Morgenthau have refused to discuss the money question, declining to say whether overtures have been received from abroad. The State Department chief replied at a press conference today that China has not approached him recently about the Treasury's silver-buying program. In the past she has protested.

Harrison has been a key figure in all Washington conferences preceding monetary action. While he joined with other Reserve Board governors in opposing nationalization of Reserve bank gold, the New Yorker has been consulted constantly. His bank executed Government gold purchases abroad prior to devaluation.

Hoboes See America—U. S. Pays—Says Official

Danville, Va., May 29 (AP).—"The present transient system has failed to offer anything genuinely constructive in treatment of the transient problem," D. L. Buchanan, who was elected chairman of the board of directors of the Danville Transient Bureau to succeed the late F. W. Townes, declared today.

The transient program of the Federal Emergency Relief Administration is "simply one that is permitting the old tramps and hoboes to see America half a dozen times over at Government expense," he said.

Norfolk Firm Given Front Royal Contracts

Front Royal, Va., May 29.—The Peters Construction Co., Norfolk, was awarded contracts today for both the new Warren County courthouse and new Front Royal municipal building as low bidders.

The bid for the courthouse was $47,375 with the board of supervisors agreeing to deliver the stone on the ground for construction. The Peters Construction Co. bid $33,627.45 for the erection of the municipal building. The total for the two buildings is $81,002.45. The Federal Government made a 30 per cent grant for both structures under the Public Works Administration.

Kidnap Note Signature Is Title of a Novel

By the Associated Press.

Seattle, May 29.—Librarians noted today that the "Egoist," the signature affixed to the ransom note in the kidnaping of 9-year-old George Weyerhaeuser, is the title of one of George Meredith's novels, published in 1879.

Search of fiction characters, however, failed to disclose "Percy Minnie," specified as a code signature.

Search for the name "Percy Minnie" was started by a student who recalled it as appearing only once or twice, as a comic character, in a Meredith book.

Dealer Acquitted Of License Breach

Hershey Branch Sustained in Cumberland Case.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., May 29.—The contention of the Hershey Ice Cream Co. that it did not violate the city's transient business licensing ordinance in that the ordinance did not become effective until after the company opened its branch store here, was sustained yesterday in People's Court by Magistrate Paul M. Fletcher.

The magistrate did not rule on the validity of the licensing ordinance. He did comment that the law under wich business men post bond of $2,500 to guarantee remaining in business at least 12 months "would completely discourage citizens of Cumberland from engaging in small businesses."

Leonard Thomas, manager of a Hershey branch store, Baltimore avenue, was arrested May 11 on a charge of violating the ordinance.

Annapolis Faces Fight In Mayoralty Primary

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., May 29.—That the Democrats will face a city-wide fight in the municipal primary election in June was assured tonight when Dr. Gordon H. Claude, former mayor, filed as a mayoralty candidate. He will oppose Louis N. Phipps, who entered the field several weeks ago, and is understood to have the backing of "organization" leaders. Dr. Claude served a term as mayor 30 years ago. The party also has another contest for city counselor, the rival candidates being William J. McWilliams, the incumbent, and George W. Haley.

There is little or no dissension among Republicans. T. Roland Brown filed today for mayor. He is unopposed. Nor is there any opposition to Noah H. Hillman, for counselor. Charles H. Sherman, Republican, filed today for alderman for the Second Ward. Sherman, at one time, was urged for mayor. Today was the last day for filing.

Scaffa, Famed As Gem Finder, Is Questioned

augurated a campaign to enforce the national stolen property act, making it a crime punishable by a 10-year prison term to transport stolen property worth more than $5,000 from one State to another.

The line "Noel Scaffa, private detective, is investigating" appeared with almost monotonous frequency in accounts of major jewel robberies of the past decade.

An unobtrusive, thin-faced man, with a thick black moustache, he usually arrives in the wake of the police and sets in motion his own mysterious influence. Although he deprecated his amazing ability to find stolen gems with a remark that he was successful in only "a small percentage of cases," police more than once looked askance at his prompt return of valuable jewelry.

One such instance concerned the $683,000 theft of gems from the hotel suite of Mrs. Jessie Woolworth Donohue in 1925. While police got nowhere, Scaffa stepped into the case and produced the jewels. It developed he had paid a "Sam Layton" $65,000 for the gems with no questions asked.

The district attorney's office obtained his indictment for compounding a felony and he stood trial twice. Both trials ended in disagreements.

Again Scaffa was questioned by Nassau County police in 1926 when he reported that he "found" $26,655 in jewels allegedly stolen from the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Willock, at Oyster Bay. The gems were "found" in a closet, where they had been mislaid, according to one of Scaffa's assistants, but authorities insisted a robbery had taken place.

In 1930 Scaffa was called before the grand jury in New York to explain his part in the round-up of a band of jewel robbers and the recovery of gems valued at $1,300,000. He disclaimed credit, saying he had gotten only minor information from "my usual underworld sources."

Scaffa was also active in the $300,000 Glemby jewel robbery of 1932, when the slaying of one of the suspects in the case brought reports he was a stool pigeon for the investigator. In 1933 Miami Beach police gave Scaffa a share of the credit in the round-up of the Sitomer gang and the recovery of $500,000 in jewels.

A few others of Scaffa's numerous cases were the $200,000 S. Stanwood Menken robbery in New York in 1931; the recovery of $100,000 in jewels by Mrs. Edgar Luckenbach the same year and the $400,000 Carson jewel robbery in Buffalo in 1929.

New Law A'm As FACA Loses Liquor Control

Code Members Told Permits Will Be Enforced for Time Being.

By Leon Dure, Jr.

Congress will be asked to create in place of the shattered FACA a new and permanent agency to control the liquor, wine and beer industries, it was indicated in Administration quarters yesterday.

The precise nature of this new machinery has not yet taken shape, but officials regarded it as self-evident that most of the checks formerly used by the Federal Alcohol Control Administration must be continued in some form or other.

The Supreme Court decision that upset the NRA automatically put the FAC out of business, since this agency is operated entirely on the code principle. Unless something is done in the early future, the situation may easily get out of hand, it was conceded.

Temporarily Eforced.

Immediately after the court decree, the FACA informed all code members that permits could not be enforced "for the time being." In reply, the FACA has received several score telegrams promising cooperation and agreeing to abide by the code restrictions.

To what extent the liquor industry voluntarily will obey the invalidated rules and regulations was admittedly debatable, but the general opinion in informed quarters was that the established producers will attempt to carry on as long as possible.

An epidemic of price-cutting was looked upon as one likely result, and retail price wars already have broken out in several cities. "Destructive price cutting" is one of the unfair trade practices outlawed distilled spirits code, but the FACA has never attempted to regulate retailers.

Two Possibilities.

One possibility advanced was that the Administration will seek to center new liquor control in the Treasury as an adjunct to taxation. Elsewhere it was considered more likely that a separate agency, similar to the FACA, will be asked of Congress. At all events, the entire FACA framework, with its 16,000 permits, will have to be overhauled.

Ruefully, officials recounted that the FACA "rode the NRA bandwagon" entirely by accident.

Congress adopted the national recovery act in June of 1933. Repeal was in the offing, but Congress had little idea it would come before the next session. As a result, it was said, the Administration was forced to turn to the NRA code system as the only available means of controlling the new liquor industry.

Six codes were effected by Joseph H. Choate, jr., administrator of the FACA, embracing the distilled spirits industry, rectifiers, importers, vintners, wholesalers and brewers. A host of unfair trade practices were forbidden liquor manufacturers—including false advertising, misbranding, failing to live up to standards, commercial bribery, sales to unauthorized vendors and shipments to "dry" States.

Several of these outlawed methods are covered by the pure food and drug laws, Treasury and Federal Trade Commission rulings, it was pointed out. But new legislation will be needed if the Government is to maintain the strict control over distilleries exercised by the FACA, it was declared.

Several days will be required before definite plans are worked out, it was indicated. After a decision has been reached, Administration leaders are expected to go before the House Ways and Means Committee, which already has studied enforcement of the liquor laws.

Trade Commission Gets New Responsibility

NRA Reaction Being Awaited By White House

conference said he had consulted with 75 industrial, labor, legal and newspaper leaders since Monday night. He declined to name them, except that Paul Block was identified as one of the newspaper publishers.

Mr. Roosevelt explained he had made free use of the telephone, calling persons in all parts of the country to get their viewpoints. What these persons have told him was not revealed, but apparently they persuaded him that voluntary observance of codes was a frail reed to lean upon. The President pointedly indicated this in his press conference.

Referring to widespread desire of business to keep the NRA and citing hundreds of telegrams to that effect received by him, he picked up a resolution from the Cotton Textile Industry Committee, adopted a few minutes earlier. This resolution called on that industry to maintain all code provisions and asked the President to make an appeal to that effect.

Forecasts Wage Cutting.

He pointed out this had been done in the Richberg statement on Monday by the Administration and that he had no plans to speak to the country at this time. He said the appeals of business groups to observe codes were fine and it was well enough for the major groups to pledge such observance, but, he asked, what will happen when the 10 per cent who hit below the belt refuse to play the game with the other 90 per cent? All will be forced to resort to wage cutting in order to retain business, he added.

There were reports that Gen. Johnson had been called back into the se[illegible] the New Deal and had laid before the President the tentative outline of a plan of action. Mr. Roosevelt, however, cautioned against emphasizing Gen. Johnson's participation in his canvass of the situation, asserting he had consulted him because of his vast knowledge of the NRA and industrial conditions just as he had consulted 75 others. He said he was not picking out any one individual at this time.

He said he had no plans for bringing Gen. Johnson back into the Administration and that, indeed, at this stage, no personalities had entered into his consderations, although they may later on. The President emphasized that the story—the spot news— of this situation was not in Washington but throughout the country. Let observers and reporters look there to determine what was happening, he said.

He said the real news was what would happen if the garment manufacturers today cut wages or a mill informed its girl workers as they prepared to quit work for the day at 5 o'clock that due to a rush of orders they would have to work until 8 o'clock. In brief, he asserted, the situation would be shaped by what industry and business do in the next few days.

His attention was called to the threatened strike of 450,000 bituminous coal miners when their wage and working hour contract, a part of the NRA coal industry code, expires at midnight June 16. Mr. Roosevelt said this incident illustrated what he meant by looking elsewhere than Washington for the news.

Guffey Bill Is Mine Hope.

The coal situation was a typical result of the court's decision, he said, adding that the industry had been making progress without labor troubles for almost two years. He did not elaborate on this point. John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America, earlier in the day said negotiations to maintain the wage and hours contract failed because the producers had nothing to offer—thus, he added, "the industry is in the attitude of discharging 450,000 miners."

Lewis made this explanation of the threatened strike after the international policy committee of the United Mine Workers of America met and mapped final plans for a general walkout. Instructions formulated by the committee will be sent to 6,000 local unions by end of the week.

The president of the mine union said enactment of clarifying legislation, meaning the Guffey coal stabilization bill, between now and June 16 might alter the situation. In some quarters the view prevailed that the present bituminous coal situation resulted from tactical moves over the last several months to force action on the Guffey bill. But the threat of a strike is more than a bluff, because the mine workers will be left without any wage contract after June 16.

Constitution Change Talked.

Meanwhile, on Capitol Hill agitation was launched for a constitutional amendment clarifying power of the Federal Government to regulate wages, working conditions and production of all industry. But it did not assume serious proportions. Perhaps later on such a movement will be pushed with vigor.

A group of House members describing themselves as "liberals" issued a joint statement declaring that the Supreme Court's decision, not only in the NRA case but also in the Frazier-Lamke case and that of the railroad retirement act, served notice on Congress that "the Constitution is not a flexible document to be interpreted liberally and in the light of present-day conditions."

Big Industries Act to Uphold NRA Standard

market fluctuated as nervously as an active stock exchange listing. Lines formed 500 deep in big department stores as thrifty customers sought to take advantage of prices that dipped as low as 77 cents a carton.

One big tobacco chain store group joined in the competition, cutting prices and resuming the distribution of premium coupons, a practice outlawed by the NRA.

Books, cosmetics and liquors also were being sold at subcode prices by some stores.

Deploring the slashes in cigarette prices, a tobacco executive who withheld the use of his name, ascribed them to a desire for publicity by department stores.

"We had hoped," he said, "that the NRA had wiped out this sort of thing permanently."

Steel Industry May Adhere.

Belief that the great steel industry would adhere to present wage standards was expressed by Tom Girdler, president and chairman of Republic Steel Corporation. While saying he could speak only for his own company, Girdler voiced the hope and belief that the industry as a whole "will stand solidly together for a continuance of a wage standard and the method of fair competition developed under the steel code."

At the same time Charles R. Hook, president of American Rolling Mill Co., declared that "every business executive owes it to his stockholders and the employes of his company to exert every effort to secure the co-operation of all elements of business in an endeavor to work out a constructive program and prevent the cutting of wages and the demoralization of markets."

The United States Steel Corporation announced through its president, W. A. Irvin, that it would continue to pursue policies in the interest of stable conditions.

President Frank Purnell, of Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co., said: "We believe in the maintenance of the present wage scale and hope that nothing will be done to disturb it."

Voluntary Action Urged.

Announcement that no changes were contemplated also were made by President Harry Sheldon of Allegheny Steel Co., and heads of the Standard Oil Co. of Ohio, Colgate-Palmolive-Peet Co., Montgomery Ward & Co., Bigelow Sanford Carpet Co., Inc., with plants in Amsterdam, N. Y., and Thompsonville, Conn.; the Duplan Silk Corporation, with mills in seven Pennsylvania cities, and numerous other firms.

A committee of the cotton textile industry, first major group to come under a code, urged that no change be made in textile operations and suggested that President Roosevelt "exercise the prestige of his office in a direct appeal to all industries to accept this policy."

Another committee, representing 47 oil trade associations, called on the President with a request for continuance of the oil code and legislation permitting voluntary agreements within the industry.

An interstate commission formed recently to discuss problems common to Massachusetts, Connecticut, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware and Maryland, planned to take up the NRA situation at a meeting late in June. Uniform proposals to regulate wages, hours and working conditions by State law will be considered.

A warning that "labor will not take this lying down" was voiced by Sidney Hillman, president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, in New York.

"We will fight to a finish," he said. "We will strike to protect wage scales and hours and we control 80 per cent of the workers who manufacture men's clothing today. This case is another Dred Scott decision and history may repeat itself."

Bullet Goes on Spree And Wounds 4 Men

By the Associated Press.

Poplar Bluff, Mo., May 29.—It was a versatile bullet.

It shattered as it struck the sidewalk after being ejected by Policeman Eli Sliger from an automatic pistol and this is what happened:

Sliger's feet were burned. City Fireman Barney Lieumkuehler was injured in one eye; Fireman Kirkpatrick was wounded in the leg, and Fireman Jack Verble was struck in the right cheek. The firemen were watching Sliger pursue his hobby—"mess with guns."

Steel Industry Favors NRA Rules

Copyright by the United Press.

New York, May 29.—Leaders of the Nation's $5,000,000,000 steel industry tonight unanimously upheld the wage and hour principles of NRA and promised to adhere to them and to the fair trade practices set up under the codes, now defunct by Supreme Court decree.

Their adherence to NRA rules reflected the general tendency among the Nation's largest industries. Reports coming to the United Press from all sections of the country indicated deviations from code practices in few instances and most of these in the so-called consumer industries.

While heads of the large steel companies, including the giant United States Steel, spoke as individuals for their own companies, their comment was learned to reflect the views of the industry as a whole.

Sloan Urges High Wages.

The National Association of Manufacturers will hold a board meeting on Tuesday, when some definite policy on the future procedure of its members will be worked out.

Alfred P. Sloan, jr., president of General Motors Corporation, largest automobile company in the United States, said: "The highest wage scale is the best scale, providing it is not out of balance with other factors in the national economy."

In a prepared statement issued tonight Sloan hailed the Supreme Court decision as the most important contribution toward eliminating some of the obstructions to recovery. He was convinced there would be material readjustments downward in the automobile industry. "Certainly, General Motors is not contemplating any such thing," he said.

No Cuts in Utilities.

S. Bayard Colgate, president of Colgate-Palmolive-Peet Co., said in Jersey City his employes would not suffer loss through the Supreme Court's decision. Present hour and wage schedules would be maintained, he said, and no one under 16 years of age would be employed.

Harvey D. Gibson, president of Manufacturers Trust Co., announced no changes were contemplated in salaries or working hours for the bank's staff of more than 2,600 persons.

No comment was forthcoming from the giant utility industry, but it was believed it would not make any change at this time. Many of its leaders favor retention of present wage and hour schedules. A wholly erroneous report circulated last night that Wichita Gas Co. had ordered an increase in working hours was traced today to a practical joker. The company has made no change and does not contemplate any, its officials said.

suffer the loss of what was promised by this Administration and faithfully given them—to be snatched out of their hands overnight. There will be strikes and turmoil from one end of this country to another, unless something is done to stop it.

"The three million jobs created by NRA were more jobs than have been made by all the billions of dollars the Government has spent to make employment, plus all it intends to spend.

"The effect of the opinion is to blow away, at one puff, far more reemployment than the Administration has projected or even imagined in its Public Works program."

Harrisonburg Plans 2 Memorial Services

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Harrisonburg, Va., May 29.—While there will be no local observance of Memorial Day here tomorrow, there will be two memorial exercises Sunday afternoon, one honoring the dead of the Confederacy and the other the dead of the World War.

Sponsored by Turner Ashby Chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy, the Southern exercises will be held at the Confederate Monument in Woodbine Cemetery. Rockingham Post of the American Legion is sponsoring the program at the Legion War Memorial in memory of the 34 county World War veterans who died in service or since the war.

Presbyterian Leader Warns Board Critics

Moderator, Closing Rally, Hints They May Be Called to Church Courts.

By the Associated Press.

Cincinnati, May 29.—Critics of leaders in the Presbyterian Church in the United States were warned today that they may be called to judgment before the church courts.

The warning came as the 147th General Assembly—supreme legislature of the church—ended a week-long session disturbed by differences arising from fundamentalist charges of departure from the basic tenets of the faith.

"The man who circulates such charges without establishing them, by the church's own constitutional procedure," asserted Dr. Joseph A. Vance, of Detroit, moderator of the assembly, "lays himself liable to charges of slandering his brother.

"Our church has been patient, almost infinitely patient, with the circulation of these unestablished charges, and if I do not mistake its temper, has about reached the place of calling those circulating them into court."

Board Defended.

His comment came only a few moments before the assembly voted to meet next year in Syracuse, N. Y., and then adjourned. It followed a report of the standing committee on foreign missions commending the "diligence and trustworthiness" of those associated with the church board of foreign missions—center of fundamentalist attack—and asserting "some of the propaganda which is troubling the church, is anonymous; some of it is small; some of it is misleading; some of it is false."

A protest from the floor brought from Dr. Vance the reminder that "the Presbyterian Church is a constitutional church. If any missionary or any of its secretaries or any member of its boards is guilty of unorthodoxy or immorality, it is the privilege of anyone to bring charges of it before the presbytery. If the presbytery action is not satisfactory, appeal may be taken from it to the synod; and if the synod action is not satisfactory, appeal may be taken to the general assembly."

Cautioned on Teachings.

The assembly approved commendation of the work of the Foreign Missions Board and voted "full confidence" in Robert E. Speer, for 45 years secretary of the board, but cautioned the board "to exercise due care" against "teachings unsound or injurious to the evangelical faith" in union or co-operative enterprises.

The more than 800 elected commissioners voted to go to Syracuse next year although advised it would cost $9,000 more to take them there than if they again met in Ohio. The assembly met in Cleveland last year, and was invited by the Broad Street Presbyterian Church to meet in Columbus, Ohio, 1936.

Bids In on Extension Of Charlottesville Road

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., May 29.—Bids were received here today for the extension of Route 5 from Free Bridge, on the eastern edge of the city limits, to Locust Avenue.

The specifications provide for approximately four-tenths of a mile of surface-treated macadam, extending from the bridge to the intersection of Long street and St Clair avenue, thence along Long street to its intersection with Locust avenue. From the bridge to St. Clair avenue there will be a 30-foot pavement and from St Clair along Long street to Locust avenue the road surface will cover 40 feet.

Fines Totaling $135 Imposed on Motorist

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., May 29.—Clyde Boden, of Piney Grove, was fined $135 yesterday in Police Court by Judge Paul M. Fletcher, on the following charges: Driving without a registration card, driving without a license, reckless driving, driving with tags issued to another person, and exceeding 60 miles per hour.

Boden was arrested Sunday by Sergt. John Kries, of the State police. Boden's car crashed into a bridge after ignoring Kries' orders to stop.

nominated in opposition to Gov. Kohler by 100,000 votes. Formerly, like his father, he had been the district attorney of Dane County, in which capacity he had been amiable and conscientious—characteristics which mark his official personality as Governor. In 1928 Hoover carried Wisconsin by 90,000 votes, and Phil ridiculed him unmercifully in the 1930 campaign. Phil won by 100,000. Since his election, voices have been raised protesting against this family monopoly of high office, to which the Progressive—the family pep sheet—has replied that nobody criticizes the Mayo Brothers for running a clinic. And nobody criticizes the Marx Brothers for staging their act, either. As a matter of fact, Wisconsin likes the La Follette act, on the whole, and doesn't object to the family half-nelson on the Wisconsin Idea.

Began First Term As Governor at 33

In his first term as Governor, at the age of 33, Phil had control of the Assembly (the lower house in the Wisconsin State Legislature) and held 15 Progressive seats in the Senate against the 16 of the opposition, with two independents holding the balance of power. Phil La Follette may be credited with the first State "Brain Trust," for, as a youthful Governor, he did not hesitate to bring expert help in from the outside. For example, he named as chairman of the Wisconsin railroad commission, David Lilienthal, now on the Tennessee Valley Authority.

As a youthful Governor, Phil proposed several enterprises during the 1931-33 term, which sound remarkably like New Deal propositions. For instance, he suggested that unemployed, unmarried men be put in scarlet makinaws with corduroy trousers and hip boots and sent to winter cantonments where courses in adult education would be available. In summer they were to reforest the areas which the Wisconsin lumber barons had denuded. This plan was never undertaken—possibly because of the scarlet mackinaws in a State which still responds to Hearstian yammerings about "reds" and "radicals." Phil's public works project to eliminate grade crossings raised the gasoline tax from 2 to 4 cents a gallon but only 6,071 men were employed for an average of seven weeks during the first year of its operation—a lesson which might well have been called to the attention of the New Dealers in 1933.

Eliminated the State Tax on Real Estate

During his first term, Phil did eliminate the State tax on real estate, which was a great help to farmers already burdened with local taxes, and he persuaded most of the counties to suspend the sale of farms for delinquent taxes. Moreover, the "waiver plan" of his State banking department saved many banks from failure. The thing which probably beat him in the 1932 Republican primary for the Governorship was his proposed income tax law by which a State tax started at 1 per cent for corporation and private incomes and ascended progressively — in the manner dear to Progressives—to 30 per cent on incomes over $100,000, with all dividends taxable and no capital losses deductible. This income tax reform was eventually adopted, in a milder form, with the elimination of the surtaxes on high incomes. For some reason, Progressives seem unable to get away from the notion that the purpose of taxation is to punish people for having taxable incomes instead of raising revenue—a fact which generally leads to their overthrow before they have accomplished the social purposes for which they levy the taxes.

Decided to Go After Governorship Again.

In his first campaign, Phil emphasized the necessity of unemployment insurance and a rather clumsy law for that purpose was passed, although its application was delayed until 1935. Phil lost out in 1932, however, although he voluntarily reduced his salary as Governor from $7,500 to $6,000. In that year, the Democratic landslide, abetted by the La Follettes, carried Schmedeman into the office of Governor, as a New Deal Democrat. As seems to be conventional in such cases, he promptly became considerably more conservative than the "stalwart" Republicans whom the La Follettes had fought for a generation. Phil took the opportunity of making a trip abroad, including a visit to Russia, and was offered, according to a public statement by his brother Bob, eight important Federal posts and refused them all.

In 1934, Phil decided to tackle the governorship again, and he was elected, despite New Deal support for Schmedeman. His Legislature is opposed to him, although he actually controls the lower house through an alliance of Progressives plus liberal Democratic Roosevelt legislators against the Republicans, and elected a Progressive chairman. In the Senate, there is a line-up of 14 Democrats, 13 Progressives and 6 Republicans. The April, 1935, elections to fill two vacancies in the Senate were a decided victory for the La Follettes, as both seats were filled by Progressives.

Phil put over the State relief bill, with the State matching Federal funds by $10,000,000. This bill provides for a special tax on telephone companies in Wisconsin and was partially vetoed by La Follette, an action which is now before the State Supreme Court for a decision as to its legality.

Phil La Follette has more ability, more charm, more fire than his brother Bob. He is a better speaker and vote-getter. While Bob makes advances to the Roosevelt Administration, Phil stands on his own ideas, concurring when he agrees with the Federal Administration, and boldly dissenting when he is in fundamental disagreement.

New Deal Catches Up With the La Follettes

Yet Bob is right and Phil is wrong, for the truth of the matter is that the New Deal has caught up with the La Follettes, in the sense that there is not much more left that States can do as individual sovereignties. States are rapidly declining in importance and since the FERA and PWA were established they are tending to become administrative subdivisions of the central government instead of free and equal elements in a federation.

Thus governorships no longer provide the opportunities for demonstrative action that they did at the time when the elder La Follette devised the Wisconsin idea. We are rapidly on our way to the condition where States will be only provinces, so far as concerns economic legislation.

We have become a national entity in economic matters and in future no State—not even Wisconsin—can be a proving ground for national experiments of any importance much longer. A State party like the Wisconsin Progressives—a third party with State control—can advocate certain reforms, certain changes, certain methods. It can advocate nationalization of coal mines or all utilities, or nationalization of anything else, but it is powerless to do much inside the realm of the State. For this reason, it should be noted that the La Follette State Progressive program of 1934 is a national program, and coincides very closely with the policies of the New Deal.

Its chief points of divergence are to the left of the New Deal—but not very far to the left—and in the main it is a straight, old-fashioned liberal program for the Nation and not for the State of Wisconsin. The extent of its "radicalism" shows that it is still very close to the New Deal, as its planks include the following proposals:

1. That the distribution of milk should be declared a public utility (and a good many of Roosevelt's closest friends and advisers think the same).

2. That there should be a Government-owned central bank (and that is what the New Deal is driving toward with Eccles as governor of the Federal Reserve Board).

3. That there should be prompt payment of the soldiers' bonus (a good vote-catching device, which happens to coincide roughly with the Administration belief that the main solution of the depression will come through redistributing purchasing power).

4. That the manufacture and sales of munitions of war should be nationalized (another good vote-catcher to which the New Deal is not unfriendly, but which ignores the fact that the munitions industry cannot be segregated from the peace-time chemical industry).

Party Offers Bridge To Unite Liberals

The importance of this program—and the significance of the two young hopefuls who drafted it and who represent the Progressive party in State and national politics—is the fact that it offers the bridge over which the Democrats of the East and South must pass to join forces—or do battle — with the farm radicals of the Prairie States. For Wisconsin is a big State in the New Deal's struggle to hold the farm belt. If the La Follettes go with Roosevelt they cannot assure a New Deal victory in the Middle West, but if they go against him, they can assure the New Deal's defeat in its effort to shape a social and economic policy which will be sufficiently radical to command the support of the discontented farmers of the corn and wheat country.

War Veterans Set to March Past President

Services Are Scheduled at Arlington for Dead of Civil War.

Marching before President Roosevelt, war veterans today will open Washington's Memorial Day observance in honor of soldiers who gave their lives in battle.

Led by the United States Marine Band, the procession will move past reviewing stands in front of the White House and on to Arlington Cemetery, where services, to be attended by more than 75,000 persons, will begin at noon.

This parade and ceremonial, arranged by the G. A. R. Memorial Day Corporation, will be the most impressive of the day's rites for the Civil War veterans who were serving their country three-quarters of a century ago.

Henry Gilbert, 93-year-old veteran, who is the last surviving member of Lincoln's bodyguard, will be an honor guest at today's ceremonies. He will ride at a place of distinction in the parade and at the the Arlington service will occupy a rostrum seat. Another honor guest will be Robert Lincoln Beckwith, grandson of Abraham Lincoln.

The few remaining men of the Grand Army of the Republic will ride in autos in the parade which forms at Thirteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest at 10:30. Behind them will march units of the United Spanish War Veterans, Veterans of Foreign Wars, the American Legion, the Disabled American Veterans, and their respective auxiliaries and affiliated bodies.

Will Lay Wreaths.

Arriving at Arlington Cemetery, where 43,000 of their comrades are buried, the veterans will lay wreaths on the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier, and on the graves of distinguished military leaders. The principal service at noon will be in the Amphitheater, where facilities for a Nation-wide broadcast have been prepared.

Senator L. J. Dickinson, of Iowa, will be the principal speaker, and James C. Yaden, presiden of the Memorial Day Corporation, the presiding officer.

Members of the Vincent B. Costello Post, American Legion, will conduct a memorial service at 11 o'clock at the grave of their founder in Arlington Cemetery. Representative Hermann Kopplemann, of Connecticut, and James O'Connor Roberts, department commander of the legion, will be principal speakers.

Rites at Dewey's Tomb.

Members of the Dewey Congressional Medal Men's Association of Philadelphia will visit the tomb of Admiral George Dewey in the Bethlehem Chapel of Washington Cathedral at 11:30. Several of the men who served with Admiral Dewey in the Battle of Manila will attend these rites in honor of their leader. Canon William L. DeVries, precentor of the cathedral, will offer prayers. A floral wreath will be placed on the tomb.

Memorial Day services, combined with those of Ascension Day, will be observed at the cathedral at 4 o'clock, when the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, will preach in the Great Choir.

Another of the morning services will take place at Hains Point, Potomac Park, where members of Admiral Robert E. Peary Ship, Veterans of Foreign Wars, will meet at 10:15. Representative William D. McFarlane will be principal speaker.

Honor Peace Heroes.

At the Titanic Monument a peace heroes memorial service is planned for 10 o'clock. Several brief talks eulogizing the men who devoted their lives to their country's cause in time of peace will be given. The principal speaker will be Representative Isabella Greenway, of Arizona.

Solicitor General Stanley Reed will be the speaker at exercises at 10 o'clock in the law library at the Georgetown University Law School. The senior class will place a wreath on a tablet bearing the names of 29 law students who were killed in the World War.

The Library of Congress will observe a Memorial Day schedule today, remaining open from 2 p. m. until 10 p. m. The Public Library and its branches will be closed all day.

Downtown stores will be closed throughout the day in accordance with custom.

Mrs. Meyer Is Renamed On Library Trust Board

Reappointment of Mrs. Eugene Meyer tothe Library of Congress Trust Fund Board was announced yesterday at the White House. Mrs. Meyer, whose term expired last March, was named to the board in 1930 by President Hoover.

Dr. Herbert Putnam, librarian of Congress, is secretary of the Trust Fund Board, created ten years ago by an act of Congress. It is empowered to receive gifts and bequests of personal property of which the income is applied to the benefit of the library, its collections or its service. The Secretary of the Treasury is ex-officio chairman of the board.

Pacific Waves Yield Army Flyer's Body

Watsonville, Calif., May 29 (A).—Army aviation officials today identified the body of a man washed up on Monterey Beach yesterday as that of Private Bernard Rygwalski, 29, Cleveland, Ohio, a member of the Ninety-first Observation squadron.

Rygwalksi and Lieut. Russell Laird, 29, Bakersfield, Calif., were killed April 23 when their plane crashed into the sea after motor failure. Lieut. Laird's body has not been recovered.

Pickets Agree To Keep Peace In Ohio Strike

Parley Is Held After Police Fire on Truck as It Crashes Lines.

By the Associated Press.

Canton, Ohio, May 29.—Strike leaders and steel plant officials reached a "peaceful picketing" agreement late today in Canton's turbulent labor dispute.

Representatives of the companies and unions, city and county officials and mediators went into conference shortly after police brought their guns into play for the first time since union steel-workers went on strike Monday at the Berger Manufacturing Co. plant.

Frequent outbreaks of violence have resulted in injuries to more than a score of persons since the strike began and spread to other nearby plants.

Under the "peaceful picketing" agreement, strikers promised to cease coercing employes of the plants who desired to enter the mills and work. The officials of the companies agreed to take guns and tear gas bombs from their special guards and to cease using armed convoys.

The mediators attacked again the problem of attempting to reach a settlement of the strike.

A proposed sympathy walkout which would have spread the strike to the plant of the Timken Roller Bearing Co. was turned down late today.

Walter Huber, president of the Independent Bearing Employes Association, an unaffiliated group, said 1,900 workers had balloted not to join the strike.

Patrolmen Emon Ritz and Sam Marconi opened revolver fire when a metal-sided truck, accompanied by a convoy of two autos, thundered through picket ranks under a tear gas barrage laid down by occupants of the cars.

The policemen said they fired at the metal truck and not at the men who wielded tear gas guns. The shooting, they said, was intended to halt the gas "attack." No one was struck by the bullets.

Think Truck Bore Food.

The truck sped from the United Alloy plant to the Berger plant. Both are Republic Steel Corporation subsidiaries and picket lines have been placed around each of them.

Puzzled by the maneuver, witnesses said they believed the truck contained food for an unknown number of workers confined in the Berger plant since the strike went into effect. Other workers, their number unknown, are confined in the United Alloy plant.

A tear gas projectile, described by witnesses as about 6 inches long and 1½ inches in diameter, struck Charles Minor, 27, who stood among the pickets. He suffered a mouth wound.

Company Guards Held.

Four men were arrested earlier by sheriff's deputies as suspected company guards off company property. Sheriff Joseph Nist yesterday placed deputies around the Alloy plant with orders to arrest guards who left the premises.

The men under arrest gave their names as Steve Wojanis, 28, and Harold Scarneccia, 26, of Massillon, and Frank O'Malley, 25, and Homer Warner, 28, of Canton. Authorities charged them with carrying concealed weapons.

Mrs. Camp Gets Divorce.

Mrs. Genevieve J. Camp, War Department clerk, obtained a divorce in Reno, Nev., yesterday from Carver I. Camp, computer in the Coast and Geodetic Survey, of 1430 Chapin street northwest, according to the Associated Press.

Man Who Hunted for Redfern Doubts Reports Flier Living

Jess Lawrence Skeptical of Colon Dispatches Saying Aviator Escaped Death in Crash; Father Awaits Further Verification.

By the Associated Press.

Rochester, N. Y., May 29.—Jess Lawrence, who searched the Amazon in 1933 for Paul Redfern, missing aviator, today expressed the belief that the pilot perished in the jungle when his plane crashed and that reports he is living in Dutch Guiana as a "medicine man" are unfounded.

"In 1933 we ascended the Amazon River, starting from Belem, Brazil, and were gone eight months," said Lawrence. "The expedition ended prematurely when funds to carry it further were not forthcoming.

"Considering that the point where we were searching is 1,600 miles south of Dutch Guiana and in view of the fact that Roche was responsible for both reports, I can not help but believe the report is entirely without foundation."

Lawrence said today was the first time he had talked of the rescue expedition which came to an end when the lost aviator's uncle, Richard S. Redfern, committed suicide here April 24, 1933.

"I have never said anything before out of consideration for the family, whom I consider to have been cruelly hoaxed into investing money in a forlorn venture. There is no doubt in my mind that Redfern perished in the jungle when his plane crashed."

By the Associated Press.

Colon, Panama, May 29.—Tom Roche, a naturalized, German-American, today asserted that Paul Redfern, aviator who vanished eigh, years ago on a flight from Brunswick, Ga., to Rio de Janeiro, had crashed into a mountain on that flight and now lives as a "medicine man" with the Indians who nursed him back to health in Dutch Guiana.

(Mrs. Paul Redfern, in Cleveland, Ohio, was most skeptical and said she hoped the Roche story had more truth in it than others current in the last few years.)

Roche said the airman's legs and one arm were broken in the crash and he was cared for by the Indians. Redfern identified himself, Roche said, and told of the crash.

Redfern asked him, Roche asserted, to take a message to his father, Dr. Carl Redfern, and his wife, Gertrude.

Roche offered to lead a rescue party to bring the flier out of the jungle village.

A man who gave his name as Roche was detained by Brazilian authorities at Para in 1933 after he was reported to have told a story of finding Redfern alive among the Indians of the Rio Madeira region. He was released by the police, he said, when he promised to leave the city.

By the Associated Press.

Sumter, S. C., May 29.—Dr. Frederick Redfern, father of Paul Redfern, said today reports his son was alive in the jungles of Dutch Guiana were "in line" with information of his progress and plans on the flight.

After repeated disappointments, the elderly professor in Benedict College, Columbia, refused to become elated.

Dr. Redfern left this morning by motor for Washington, and from there planned to motor to Rochester, N. Y. Plans for a trip to Panama would be made in Rochester, he said, if the reports concerning his son are substantiated.

Verdict on Steinmetz Carries 1 to 20 Years

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 29.—Joseph L. Steinmetz tonight faced a possible prison sentence of from 1 to 20 years for the slaying of his 17-year-old bride.

Steinmetz, 22-year-old divinity student, was charged with killing the former Ruth Armstrong, Hollywood high school girl, and the Rev. Joseph J. Leonard, a priest, when he found them together in the latter's hotel room last November 21.

He was convicted of manslaughter early today in connection with the girl's killing and sentence was deferred until June 14. In addition to the manslaughter sentence, which may be suspended, the youth was liable to an additional five-year term because the crime was committed with a deadly weapon—a pistol.

The jury tempered its manslaughter verdict with a strong recommendation of mercy. The jury deliberated almost 15 hours.

Jurors Can't Find Plane Crash Cause

Pilot Attempted to Maneuver Ship, Lineman Says.

By the Associated Press.

Visalia, Calif., May 29.—A coroner's jury composed of airmen today decided the crash of an Army bomber in Sequoia National Park yesterday, in which four men were killed, resulted from "undetermined causes."

Sam Ferguson, CCC telephone lineman, at work in the vicinity of the fatal accident, testified the plane pulled out of formation, and with both motors dead, drifted about a mile before going into a spiral. It fell from about 4,000 feet, he said.

It was apparent, Ferguson declared, that the pilot was attempting to maneuver the plane.

The body of Allyn P. Alexander, 29, newsreel cameraman, killed in the crash, will be cremated and the ashes sent to Chicago. The body of Lewis S. Tappan, 29, his sound technician and partner, will be taken to New York.

Bodies of the two Army aviators, Lieut Edgar W. Root, 29, Birmingham, Ala., and Private Guy F. Porter, 30 Kansas City, Mo., were removed to Hamilton Field the United States Army bombing base 25 miles north of San Francisco, pending funeral arrangements.

N. Y. Explosion Rends Building Injuring Dozen

Entire Section Terrorized as Nearby Gas Tank Is Imperiled.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 29.—A terrific explosion—apparently caused by accumulated gas in an empty asphalt tank—today wrecked a three-story building on the East Side, injuring more than a dozen persons, three critically.

Police and firemen, fearing that six persons were buried alive in the bricks and timber, tore the ruins apart as soon as the fire that broke out with the blast had cooled. No bodies were found and police believed no lives had been lost.

Flying debris injured passersby. One man was tossed from his auto and another was thrown out of the building amid the flying bricks of a tumbled wall. Windows were shattered a block away.

Nearby Gas Tank Menaced.

Firemen prevented the fire from spreading to an eight-story gas tank 15 feet away from the smoldering ruins.

Women fled from their homes carrying children. Near-panic reigned until police and fire department emergency squads arrived at the scene.

The blast killed 100 canaries in a bird and pet shop next door to the auto shop where the explosion occurred. The wrecked building housed several small business concerns.

Janitor Saw Flash.

Among the seriously injured was Edward Lutcha, 44, owner of an automobile repair shop in the building, who was the man blown from the building. His brother, Robert, was burned severely and cut by flying glass.

William Anderson, janitor of the building, who had been working about the asphalt tank, said while using a wrench to remove brass fittings from a pipe leading into the tank he saw a sudden flash but heard no explosion. He crawled from the room, suffering only minor injuries.

9 Burned Critically In Gas Well Blast

By the United Press.

Six Lakes, Mich., May 29.—Nine men were burned critically here tonight when a 10,000,000-foot gas well exploded as they were attempting to cap it and rained flames over their bodies.

Three of the men were not expected to live. They are William Williamson, Milton Sankey and Pearl Trowbridge.

Flames were so intense that the clothing was burned completely off Williamson, Sankey and Trowbridge.

Board Closes Private Dumps In Arlington

New OrdinanceCompelling Vehicles to Be Covered Ordered.

Arlington County's private trash dumps were closed by order of the county board yesterday at the same time that Commonwealth's Attorney Lawrence W. Douglas asserted that all trash dumped there had been brought in from the District of Columbia and other outside points.

Thus Arlington citizens won a fight they had carried on for years.

Not only did the board require that the 1925 dump regulating ordinance be strictly enforced, but it also instructed Douglas to draft a new ordinance compelling all trash-carrying vehicles to be equipped with tight-fitting canvas covers.

Immediately following the board's courthouse meeting, Douglas and County Sheriff Howard B. Fields visited the commercial dumps and instructed the operators to end their business. What trash is now on the dumps may be burned, but no more may be brought there, Douglas and Fields said.

Action followed a public hearing of citizens' protests last Monday night and a special recommendation from a committee composed of County Manager Roy S. Braden, County Health Officer P. M. Chichester and Douglas.

The dumps affected are located at the south end of the Highway Bridge, on the old Georgetown pike next to Memorial Bridge, and at Four-Mile Run. Business will continue as usual at the county's dump near Lyon Park. No protests have been received against the county dump, it being in an undeveloped area.

The board also awarded the contract for collection of garbage, trash and ashes from July 1 on. It went to C. T. Ingalls for $26,940.

Maryland Seniors Get Prizes Tonight

To Receive Honor Medals at Banquet in D. C.

Commencement week at the University of Maryland will be continued tonight with the presentation of citizenship prizes and scholastic medals at the senior banquet in the National Press Club here.

Names of seniors who will receive the honors tonight, and the names of other students who will receive awards tomorrow afternoon at the annual Class Day exercises at College Park, will be withheld until the time of their presentation.

The week of commencement festivities began at College Park last Sunday with the baccalaureate sermon and a dinner in honor of the senior women, given by Miss Adele Stamp, dean of women.

Tuesday night the Junior-Senior "german" was held at the university gymnasium, and last night the Rossburg Club, student social organization, held its final dance. The week will close with the presentation of diplomas Saturday afternoon. Gov. Nice will deliver the main address.

University Selects 'Miss Maryland'

Suspects Defects.

Such a study, he predicted, "would uncover even greater defects in our commercial banking set-up than in that of the Reserve system." The wise approach, he said, is to "look to the soundness of the foundation at the same time that one proposes drastic changes in the superstructure."

He said in any such revision, Congress should work from the bottom up, and not from the top down.

Prof. Willis, whose testimony closely dovetailed with Young's, saw a need for complete codification of banking laws, to solidify and bring closer together the commercial, agricultural and investment banking structure.

But banking in this country, he warned, is an exceedingly dangerous and delicate subject to tamper with. He said business men are not borrowing now because they have doubts about the future and are unwilling to make long-term commitments. The Government, he said, is steadily taking business away from the banks.

Business Fears Change.

Business, especially in the durable goods field, is particularly sensitive to drastic changes or threats of changes in the financial superstructure, Young testified. He said business in durable goods was reassured by the failure of the Patman bonus bill.

"It is still apprehensive about the political domination of our central banking system, with the resulting threat to the commercial banking system," he said.

"Whether business should be apprehensive over the bill pending before you (Eccles' omnibus banking bill), or whether it should not, views will differ, but the fact is that business is apprehensive.

"The passage of the bill, therefore, either because it is not understood or because it is, will to some extent retard business recovery.

"If there were any real reason for immediate action on title 2 (centralizing control over banks and bank credit), we should be compelled to enact it and accept the delay in recovery, but seeing no reason for action now, I feel there would be great reassurance to business if a comprehensive study of our whole banking system could be undertaken instead."

Ample Time for Study.

He said there is ample time for study before attempting to centralize power and responsibility "so that we can better control another boom."

His principal objection to the omnibus banking bill, he testified, is that it would actually set up a central bank and destroy the present regional system.

"It may be that the American people want to destroy the regional system and establish a central bank," he said. "I do not know. Members of this committee will not need to be reminded that the last time the issue was presented the people rejected a central bank in favor of the regional system.

"Perhaps their views have changed, but I do not feel strongly that a result so far reaching should not be accomplished indirectly. If we have to have a central bank, then our entire law should be redrafted so as to be suitable to one central bank operation."

Sees Political Influence.

He saw a possibility that a central bank body might be unable to avoid the influence of politics and finance. The bill, he said, seemed to remove all checks and balances from local boards of individual Reserve banks.

"The result," he told the committee, "is that the bill contemplates not only the removal of the regional checks on the central board, but it provides that the most important member of the board (the governor, appointed by the President), shall at least have definite political color."

Young said that "experienced governments" have found it "wiser" to turn control of the bank of issue over to "an independent body, as free as possible from political control or influence."

He said he views "with apprehension not only the standpoint of a central bank, but from that of the sound functioning of government as well, any increase of the powers and responsibility of the executive over the operations of the central bank and to any decrease in the independence of the central authority controlling the bank."

Fredericksburg, Va., May 29.—Miss Helen Bryan, daughter of Mrs. Helen Berger Bryan, of Fredericksburg, and William Jennings Bryan, of Beverly Hills, Calif., has set Saturday, June 1, for her marriage to Robert Touyarot, of Arcahon, France. The wedding will take place at Belvedere, home of Miss Bryan's grandfather, Alexander Berger, near this city. After July 1 the couple wil be at home at Belvedere.

Miss Bryan, granddaughter of the great commoner, William Jennings Bryan, was active in New York amateur dramatics for several years, but recently has been making her home here, where she conducted a school of dancing.

Five Harrison Schools Receive 'Model' Rating

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Clarksburg, W. Va., May 29.—Five Harrison County schools were rated as "model schools" by the State Department of Education after a thorough examination and checking by the county superintendent and his assistants during the year.

The five and their principals are Quiet Dell, Eleanor Cummins; Hartman, D. C. Nichols; Northview, Brady Sims; Owings, J. V. Rowley, and Lost Creek, N. R. Tolley. The schools received a grade of 95 per cent or better.

Memorial Day Throng to Hear Sumner Welles

Assistant Secretary of State to Be Speaker at Upper Marlboro.

Sumner Welles, Assistant Secretary of State, will join with other prominent residents of Prince Georges County today in paying tribute to those who died for the American cause.

Mr. Welles, a resident of Oxon Hill, Md., will address the annual Memorial Day exercises at Upper Marlboro. Judge Joseph C. Mattingly, of the circuit court, also of Oxon Hill, will be the principal speaker at exercises to be held at Hyattsville.

The first of the ceremonies will begin at the Hyattsville National Guary Armory at 10 a. m. under the sponsorship of the Snyder-Farmer Post, No. 3, co-operating with Cheverly and Mount Rainier posts.

Sidney F. Wentworth, commander of the Snyder-Farmer post, will introduce the guests. Lawrence Smoot, vice commander of the State Department for the southern Maryland district; Caesar L. Aiello, of Hyattsville, past commander of the State department, and other legion leaders will be present.

At the close of the exercises at the armory, a parade will form on the Baltimore boulevard and proceed to the World War Memorial Cross at Bladensburg. The parade will be composed of war veterans, Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, volunteer fire departments, the National Training School Boys Band and other units.

Following a roll call of the deceased veterans, a wreath will be laid at the cross by Mrs. Bradley Snyder, mother of Maurice Snyder, one of the men for whom the Snyder-Farmer Post is named. Wreaths also will be placed by the county Kiwanians and other organizations.

A salute will be fired by a squad from Company F, National Guard of Hyattsville. Taps will be sounded. Members of the legion posts will place wreaths on graves of their comrades both in Arlington Cemetery and local cemeteries.

The exercises at Upper Marlboro, held annually by the Strawn-Turner Post, Veterans of Foreign Wars, of Seat Pleasant, Md., are scheduled to begin at 11 a. m. Assisting the Seat Pleasant post will be the John Millard Post, No. 1,800, of Indian Head, Md.; the Takoma Park Post, No. 350, and the Corporal Milton E. Hartman Post, No. 2,562, of Bradbury Heights, Md.

The women's auxiliaries of each of the posts, both for the Veterans of Foreign Wars at Upper Marlboro and for the American Legion ceremonies at Hyattsville, will be present.

After a concert by the Thirty-fourth Infantry Band from Fort Meade, a parade will form at the Crain Memorial on the outskirts of Upper Marlboro. A police escort, grand marshal, the Thirty-fourth Military Band, the veterans' organizations, the women's auxiliaries, school children and civic organizations will form the parade.

The group will parade up the main street of the town to the court house lawn, where the exercises will be opened with the band playing "Maryland, My Maryland." The invocation will be given by the Rev. Allen B. Fisher, of the Forestville (Md.) Methodist Episcopal Church.

The memorial order will be read by Sumner L. Morris, past commander of Post 1,627. "Lead Kindly Light" will be played. E. F. Robberson, of the Strawn-Turner Post, will introduce the guests.

Mr. Welles' address will be followed by a selection to be played by the band. Other speakers to follow in order will be Senator Lansdale G. Sasscer, president of the Maryland Senate; Delegate Charles C. Marbury and Maj. Harvey L. Miller.

A ritual service to follow the speaking will include the playing of "Nearer, My God to Thee" by the band, and the benediction by Mr. Allen. A reception for the guests will conclude the day.

Arm of Policeman Breaks in Handshake

By the Associated Press.

Bates, a Western District officer here, saw Irvin Edelstein, a friend, on the street. They shook hands vigorously and Bates felt a sharp pain in his arm. Physicians at Mercy Hospital found Bates' arm was broken just below the shoulder.

Remington Rand Action Presented

Receivership Sought for Maryland Company.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, May 29.—Alleging it had a claim for patent infringement against Remington Rand, Inc., a Maryland corporation said to be sales agents here for the parent Delaware corporation, the Acme Card System Co., today filed receivership proceedings in Baltimore Circuit Court.

It was claimed that Remington Rand, Inc., the Maryland concern, had petitioned for dissolution last year and that its directors therefore should be held to be trustees for creditors. The proceedings named as defendants along with the Maryland concern, James H. Rand, jr., William H. Brown, Benjamin L. Winchell, Clinton F. Price, Stanley M. Knapp and John A. W. Simson, said to be its directors.

The suit was instituted by Henry S. Blum and J. Kemp Bartlett. Judge J. Frank Supplee, jr., signed an order for the naming of a receiver unless cause to the contrary is shown by June 7.

Virginia Girl Rules Potato Bloom Fete

8,000 Attend Celebration; 75 in Baby Show.

By the Associated Press.

Keller, Va., May 29.—Miss Adelaide Wise Ames, Eastern Shore's first potato blossom queen, was crowned here tonight before a crowd of 8,000.

The colorful crowd, flush with money netted on a successful strawberry crop, was determined apparently to give the lowly potato a big show.

The baby parade was the first event with 75 youngsters passing before the reviewing stand in floats, baby carriages and go-carts. Tomorrow the queen and her retinue and an escort of Eastern Shore horsewomen will lead the parade of all floats. Charles H. Brugh, former Governor of Arkansas and a member of the boundary commission, will be the speaker.

40-Foot Fall Fatal To Maryland Painter

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., May 29.—Earl F. Jones, 28, painter, was killed this afternoon when he fell 40 feet from a light pole at Community Park, while a baseball game was in progress. A light-shade broke, striking him on the head and knocking him from the pole. His neck was broken.

The American Legion leased the ball park and Jones was working for Dewey Emerson, who took a painting contract.

Blair School Is Dedicated In Montgomery

New Building Is Finest in County; Maj. Blair at Exercises.

Montgomery Blair Senior High School, Silver Spring, Md., Montgomery County's finest school building, was dedicated yesterday afternoon with several hundred students and residents of the community attending the exercises.

Guests of honor included Maj. Gist Blair, only son of Montgomery Blair, for whom the school was named; former United States Senator Blair Lee, a nephew of Montgomery Blair, and Dr. Montgomery Blair, jr., nephew of Maj. Blair.

The ceremonies were presided over by Prof. E. M. Douglas, principal of the school, with George W. Davis, member of the county board of education, making the dedicatory address. Davis reviewed the history of high schools in Montgomery County since 1867, when the first high school class in the county was graduated from Montgomery High in Rockville. Montgomery Blair School, he declared, is not only of the finest construction, but has also been built to carry out the most modern methods of education.

The school was accepted by Ben G. Davis, of Takoma Park, former county commissioner. In a speech introducing Maj. Blair, Senator Lee gave reminiscences of Montgomery Blair, who was Postmaster General under Lincoln. The land on which the school stands, he said, was once a part of a large estate owned by the Blair family.

In a brief summary of the life of his father, who died in 1883, Maj. Blair spoke of the part he took in the Civil War and also in aiding the South after the war. He described Silver Spring as it was in the days of Christopher Gist, his great-great-grandfather and also during his own boyhood days.

Songs were given by the school and by the boys and girls glee club. Vocal solos were given by Jeanne Tyser.

State Police Take Oaths Saturday

Department to Assume Broader Authority.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, May 29.—Maj. C. Purdon Wright, superintendent of State police, will administer the oath of office to members of that department Saturday.

The department becomes independent of the commissioner of vehicles then and assumes State-wide police authority except in incorporated municipalities with their own police forces, and in Montgomery, Charles, Calvert and Howard counties.

They may act in those localities when requested by the mayor, police chief or Governor, it was said, and when serving a warrant for an act committed elsewhere.

Twenty-two members of the force, holding temporary appointments, will take no part in the induction ceremony. Along with hundreds of outsiders, these 22 stood examination a week ago. The results will be known shortly after June 1.

Chew Will Seek Board Election In the Primary

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

J. Freeland Chew, of Clarendon, yesterday announced his candidacy for membership on the County board of five subject to the Democratic primary to be held Tuesday, August 6.

Mr. Chew has been a resident of Arlington County for the past 30 years and is at present connected with the official reporters of debates of the United States Senate, a position which he has held during the past five administrations.

He is the former treasurer of the county Democratic committee, having served as a member of that body for eight years, and also was a member of the campaign committee of Harry Flood Byrd for Governor and Senator, and George C. Peery for Governor.

In announcing his candidacy, Mr. Chew says:

"If elected to the office which I seek I shall at all times diligently and faithfully perform the duties of that office and administer the affairs of the county to the best interests of its citizens, giving careful consideration and study to the problems that present themselves, and being at all times mindful of the fact that I am a public servant.

"The county debt has more than doubled during the past two years and I shall endeavor to prevent the future rocketing of our tax rate by insisting upon a rigid adherence to a budgetary system of expenditures.

"Without further pledge at this time, I respectfully solicit the confidence and support of the electorate of Arlington County, and regardless of the outcome of the election I shall always be profoundly grateful to the people for the flattering and complimentary vote they gave me during my campaign four years ago."

Approving the recommendations of the county manager calling for the operation of playgrounds in the county during the summer, the board of commissioners yesterday authorized the appropriation of $2,500 from the budget for the fiscal year beginning July 1.

Braden pointed out that the plans for the operation of the playgrounds will be worked out in co-operation with County Superintendent of Schools Fletcher Kemp.

Mrs. Dorothy Dunn, member of the Arlington County Business and Professional Woman's Club and representing the National Federation of Women's Clubs, urged the board to consider the appointment of trained directors.

The board will hold a special meeting Monday night at 8 o'clock at the courthouse on final plans for installation of sewers within East Falls Church by the county.

John Campbell, resident engineer for the J. N. Chester Engineers, who are installing the system, pointed out that the contractor now working in that section of the county will have completed his contract in two weeks and that it is important that a decision be reached or it means a greater cost to the county.

To better take care of the rapid development in the Fort Myer area, Mr. Campbell reported that the service line will be increased from a 10-inch pipe to a 12-inch.

Mr. Braden reported that bids for the construction of additions to the county courthouse will be opened by himself and the architects June 11 at 11 o'clock and their recommendations submitted to the board at its meeting on June 14.

The board approved total expenditures for the month amounting to $27,871, of which $12,373 represented the county pay roll.

Albert Ilse, of Arlington County, trading as "Village Inn," located on Columbia pike, was arrested yesterday by Sheriff Howard B. Fields on a charge of selling beer without a license.

Ilse, leaving his place of business in company with Fields on his way to the county jail, locked the place up.

All offices, excepting that of Sheriff Howard B. Fields, will be closed at the Arlington County Courthouse today.

The Women's Democratic Club of Takoma Park, Md., will give a card party at the Jessup Blair Community Hall, Silver Spring, Md., June 10.

The arrangements will be in charge of Mrs. Arthur L. Reynold, vice president, who will be assisted by the following committee: Miss Jane Austin, Mrs. E. G. Davis, Miss Helen Davis, Mrs. Walter Griffin, Mrs. Daniel Shade, Mrs. Mildred Burr, Mrs. Harry Dodge, Mrs. Calvin Hassell, Mrs. E. L. Green and Mrs. J. L. McKenney.

Memorial Rites Set for Today In Falls Church

Oakwood Cemetery Services for Dead Will Begin at 10:30 A. M.

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST.
P. O. Box 245, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Clarendon 126-J.

Annual memorial services for those buried in Oakwood Cemetery at Falls Church, Va., will be held today beginning at 10:30 a. m. In event of rain the program will be transferred to the Columbia Baptist Church. The committee in charge includes Dr. George B. Fadeley, Mrs. George Hawxhurst, Samuel H. Styles and W. T. Westcott. The cemetery is managed by a board of 10 trustees for the five Protestant churches of the town.

Music for the services will be furnished by the Falls Church Firemen's Band, with Frank A. Carpenter, leader, and the Dun Loring male sextette.

Following a short business session, the Rev. William B. King, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, will take charge of the memorial services. The principal speaker will be the Rev. U. S. Knox, pastor of the Columbia Baptist Church. Others are to be the Rev. W. Leigh Ribble, rector of the Old Falls Church; the Rev. Edward B. Wilcox, pastor of the Crossman Methodist Church, and the Rev. Alton B. Altfather, pastor of the Presbyterian Church.

The Young Democratic Clubs of Falls Church and Alexandria are holding a joint dance tomorrow night at the Old Dominion Boat Club in Alexandria, Va.

The committee in charge includes J. Francis Jones, Barnett C. Keith, Hugh Stevens and Stewart Pierce, of the Falls Church Club, and Maurice Rosenberg, William Moncure and Miss Agnes Hough, of the Alexandria Club.

Human Nature In Your Milk

THERE is nothing miraculous or supernatural about the milk business.
Its stock-in-trade is transported, processed, and delivered by an organization of men and women.
They are thoroughly human in their sensibilities and reactions.
They like to be treated fairly; they expect to treat others fairly.
They live by creating and keeping the good will of the public they serve.
They know the milk business through and through.
They are proud of it. They welcome visitors in search of light and leading. They keep continuous open house.
The milk business is not done with mirrors. Every act is performed in full view of every one who takes the trouble to observe operations at first hand. There is nothing up our sleeves.
We would like for you to see the human side of the milk business.
Whether or not you are from Missouri, come and be shown.
If you can't come in person, write us any questions in your mind. It will be a genuine pleasure to respond as informatively as we would face to face.

More than 8,000 Electrolux Refrigerators in Service in Washington Homes

News flashed from the remote Canadian village of Corbeil, on the morning of May 28, 1934, astounded the world. For the first recorded time in history, five babies born to one mother were living . . . and thriving.

But human milk—in unusual quantity—was required to feed these newborn babes. From Toronto and Montreal, this milk was rushed to Corbeil. And once received, vital was the need for the kind of dependable food protection that only modern automatic refrigeration can afford.

Forty-eight hours after orders were given in New York, a New Air-Cooled Electrolux, operated with kerosene, was on the job at the Quintuplets' isolated birthplace. Though born almost beyond the reaches of civilization, these babies were thus enabled—during the past year—to have every modern refrigeration advantage of city homes and hospitals.

In Washington this same refrigerator, operated by a tiny gas flame, has become the popular choice. It is the only refrigerator with no moving parts—the only refrigerator with everlasting silence. See Electrolux at our showrooms, NOW, during our special offer, when you can——

Tempered By Mercy.

In the midst of the confusion resulting from the NRA debacle, President Roosevelt has found time to commute the death sentence pronounced upon Charles Bernstein to life imprisonment. An emergency of national proportions was not permitted to interfere with this humanitarian application of the Christian ideal—justice tempered by mercy.

Bernstein (alias Harris) was convicted chiefly through the testimony of two men who swear they saw him at the scene of the crime. But other witnesses swear that he was in New York when Milton Henry was murdered. A long investigation has been conducted by the Department of Justice. Apparently sufficient doubt as to Bernstein's guilt has been raised to warrant application of a lesser punishment. It goes without saying that capital punishment should never be inflicted unless every reasonable doubt as to the guilt of the victim has been removed.

The President's action manifests admirable poise and restraint at a time when the public is aroused over crime and official Washington is perturbed by even more pressing issues. It carries a timely note of warning against straining justice, even in the interest of public protection. An essential part of the war against crime is the emphasis of every precaution against injustice.

A Telling Criticism.

Owen D. Young's criticism of the Administration's banking bill is directed at its basic weakness—its attempt to work from the top down rather than from the bottom up. Mr. Young rightly objects to extensive remodeling of the superstructure—the Federal Reserve System—before an attempt has been made to build a sound foundation. Consequently, he renews his recommendations, made more than four years ago, urging unification of the commercial banking system, and examination and control of banks under one authority. "Then, and only then," he says, "we could develop for the country as a whole a sound commercial banking system and definitely fix responsibility."

Mr. Young repeats his recommendation that all banks should be required to become members of the Federal Reserve System, if banks of deposit chartered under State laws are to be retained. The banking bill, in the form in which it was originally introduced, would have gone far toward achieving that end by requiring all banks participating in the permanent system of deposit insurance to enter the Reserve system.

Unfortunately, that provision was deleted and the measure which passed the House extends the privileges of the permanent deposit insurance plan to non-member State banks. This change not only removes the pressure upon State banks to become members, but actually weakens the incentive to join the Reserve system by building up public confidence in banks unable to qualify for admission.

One of the most desirable changes that could be made in the banking law at this session would be to provide for the establishment of a single national banking system. This step has been blocked by the representatives of some of the weaker small country banks and also by some of the larger State banks and trust companies that have continuously played State against national banking law to secure greater freedom of action for themselves in disregard of proper limitations and safeguards. Such a change could and ought to be made prior to acceptance of the sweeping changes in Section II of the banking bill.

As Mr. Young says, there is no emergency which makes hasty action imperative. The Federal Reserve banks have already been given extensive and extraordinary powers to deal with the present depression. He concludes, therefore, that the "only justification for new legislation now of the character proposed is to centralize power and responsibility so that we can better control another boom. . . . We have ample time for study before that power is needed."

It would be entirely feasible to revise Part I of the banking bill with a view of bringing about banking unification while postponing action upon the highly controversial features of Part II until they have received further study in the light of the criticism and recommendations offered to the Senate committee members.

To allay justified fears and assure thorough-going revision of the whole banking structure along the lines suggested by Mr. Young is a work of time and careful study. The need for haste is not apparent until opportunity has been given to grasp the far-reaching implications of Section II. This, in the words of Mr. Young, "creates a central bank by indirection" and "carries with it the threat and potentialities of political domination of that bank, not by Congress, but by the Executive."

A Shift Of Responsibility.

The Government can not go sharply into reverse in so far-reaching a policy as was embodied in the National Recovery Act without some clashing of gears. It is a tribute to the stability of our political and social machinery that so far the shock has been relatively slight, and cushioned down by common-sense reactions. In the field of industrial relations, however, the effects of the change which has occurred are not yet really felt. And it is here that there is most danger of serious consequences.

Whatever its deficiencies and ambiguities, a definite policy of industrial relations had been developing under the legislation which is now repudiated. Section 7(a) provided a basis for the gradual development of labor organization adapted both to the needs of different industries and to varying social and economic conditions. Under the code machinery wages and hours could be regulated with an eye to general social considerations rather than to the arbitrary power of either the employed or employing groups. All this development is now threatened with complete destruction. It would be ingenuous to suppose that the fabric of our society will not be affected by the collapse.

The profundity of the shock will depend largely upon the policies now pursued by organized labor and organized business, in concert with which the Administration had been seeking to work out constructive social techniques for industry. The action of the Supreme Court releases both of these groups from the coercion of Federal controls. In so doing it is obvious that immediately increased responsibility devolves upon both the liberated parties.

If that responsibility, with all its implications for a restrained and cooperative attitude, is not accepted to the full, the freedom which has been restored to industry will not be lasting. The commerce clause, and probably other sections of the Constitution, will soon or late be amended so as to give the Federal Government indisputable authority to intervene in the greater social interest which must always take precedence over the arbitrary rights of individuals. Movements for such revision are already apparent. The extent to which they take form and substance will be decided by the forthcoming indications as to whether they are superfluous or desirable. These will soon become manifest.

The immediate reaction of both parties to industry has been constructive. Harper Sibley, newly elected president of the Chamber of Commerce, has publicly reiterated the resolution, adopted at the recent annual meeting of that organization, denouncing "any attempt to bar any form of honestly organized labor group from the provisions of collective bargaining." He has further urged employers to make "no immediate changes" in the hours or wages established by the codes.

From the labor side there have been few of the inflammatory threats, about maintaining standards by force, which might reasonably have been expected to result from what President Green of the A. F. of L. restrainedly calls "a very sweeping decision." The threatened coal strike, it is to be noted, is a problem which antedates the death blow to NRA, even though that has intensified the problem.

For American business to retain achieved standards of working conditions after the passing of NRA will not be easy. With fear of prosecution eliminated the chiseler will be encouraged, and under the competitive system it is difficult for the most enlightened employer to hold out against the pressure which chiseling brings. For labor to refrain from strikes when it sees that these standards are menaced will be equally difficult. But it is just because the test for both sides is so severe that the responsibility is great.

In exactly the same measure that the Supreme Court restricted the expansion of governmental prerogative, it tacitly emphasized the importance of the prerogative which industry must now assume. Social responsibility can not be curtailed by Supreme Court decisions. It can only be transferred. If employers and labor are mutually unable to fulfill the social duties which have been unreservedly placed upon their shoulders the Government, in one form or another, will have to take them up again. The Schechter case did not emphasize the rights of industry in any greater degree than it underlined its social responsibilities.

Off To Convention!

Springtime is open season for the great American pastime—conventions. Perennially, each delegate rushes into the fray with badges, smiles, new clothes and pinching shoes that have not been broken in. He leaves the home town with last-minute instructions, profuse promises to write, and high hopes that weather in the convention city will be fair if not warmer. He is a man with a mission; a beaming representative of the brotherhood, by the brotherhood, and for the brotherhood. No crusader ever went to his medieval mission with loftier intent and purpose than that with which the delegate from Podunk Center entrains for a twentieth century convention.

Perhaps no more striking example of these truisms could be found than recently appeared in a Southern newspaper which cryptically observed that "Nashville had several conventions during the week. None of them was very large, but all were regarded as important by the various delegates." It would be an odd convention, indeed, that was not regarded as "important by the various delegates," regardless of its size or character. Butcher, baker, candlestick-maker—they are all the same when it comes to convening in distant places.

The delegate arrives—hunts for a cab, hunts for a room, hunts for food. There are postcards to be selected; souvenirs to be purchased; friends to be telephoned; weary sightseeing miles to be walked, and countless wrong directions to be followed. And oh, yes, lest we forget, the convention itself with sessions to be attended if they can be wedged in between the gadding and the gayety. And so to bed—unutterably weary with aching head and aching feet and the grim knowledge that on the morrow the whole routine is to be retraced.

Yet in spite of this, those back home continue to receive notes saying "Having wonderful time. Wish you were here." As long as that often contradictory feeling flourishes, delegates will, too.

The Jeopardized Franc.

In pre-war days it was taken for granted that the best way to stop panic withdrawals of cash was to meet all demands fully and freely, relying upon a rise in central-bank discount rates to check an outflow of gold. These conventional methods of protecting the banking and currency system of a country, and defending the gold standard, have proved thoroughly ineffective under the peculiar conditions of post-war years. Country after country has abandoned the gold standard with large reserves in the possession of its banks, realizing that mass withdrawals occasioned by fear for the future stability of the currency could not be prevented by depending upon the mild traditional restraints of former days.

However, the Bank of France is now trying to stem the current efflux of gold by resort to the old methods. It has parted with about nine billion francs during the past two months and within the past few days it has raised its discount rate from 2½ per cent to the extraordinarily high rate of 6 per cent, so far with no indication that its efforts to protect reserves will meet with success.

While the bank could theoretically endure a continuous gold drain for a long period, it is evident that the franc can not be saved from eventual depreciation or devaluation merely by employing this method of control. The flight from the currency is due to the unbalanced state of the French budget. And to restore confidence in the franc Parliament must either grapple wholeheartedly with the fiscal problem or else delegate extensive discretionary powers over economic and financial affairs to the executive branch of government.

The fate of the franc apparently depends, therefore, upon whether Premier Flandin succeeds in obtaining parliamentary consent to "take until December 31, 1935, all measures having the force of law designed to restore public finance, revive economic life, defend public credit, and support the currency." In other words, Parliament is being asked to abdicate its prerogatives to permit the government to legislate by decree under vague and extensive grants of power that no democratically constituted state is willing to bestow upon the executive branch of government except in dire emergencies. According to latest reports, the finance committee of the chamber has already voted against his bill.

While Poincare was given large powers to "save the franc" in 1926, there was then a very keen and general perception of the necessity for drastic action to prevent a complete collapse of the currency. The remedy patently lay in declaring a truce to factional disagreements among the numerous parties and minor blocs. In France, as in pre-Nazi Germany, this bloc system makes it very difficult to secure action upon questions calling for resolute and courageous economies or new taxes.

The French multi-party system is also an obstacle to fiscal reforms that are required to stop the panic flight of capital and arrest domestic hoarding. Today, moreover, there is less unanimity of opinion than usual regarding the methods that ought to be followed. Sentiment in favor of devaluation is growing, due to belief that the franc is overvalued in terms of dollars and pounds. Furthermore, the French have taken fright at the result of government by decree in Germany, while the result of our own experiments in administrative lawmaking have doubtless been in the nature of a warning against hasty surrender of parliamentary controls.

No doubt the franc can be saved if that is the wish of Parliament. Otherwise, regardless of the amount of gold in the vaults of the Bank of France or the height to which the discount rate may be pushed, it will for the second time go the way of many other gold currencies.

Whether that outcome would retard or hasten the eventual stabilization of world currencies by international agreement is an open question. The immediate result certainly would be to introduce more confusion. But such action might in the end help to correct the inequalities in wages and prices now prevailing between gold standard and other countries, thereby laying the foundation for an agreement that would be exceptionally difficult to effect under the conditions now existing.

Five-To-Four Decisions.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I am grateful to A. R. D. for pointing out in your issue of May 27 what seems to me and has seemed to me for a long time a vexing problem. Given nine equally equipped men on the Supreme bench, it would look as though a 5-4 decision means that there is practically as much right on one side of the debated question as on the other.

The single odd vote can not but fall to one side or the other. When the line is between liberal and conservative and repeatedly falls as near the middle as is possible, the 5-4 decision of the Supreme Court points rightfully, not to a winning side, but to a compromise between the two. Fair Ratings For Pupils.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

The District school teachers have won their fight against being unfairly rated by the Board of Education. I heartily congratulate them. Now it is the teachers' turn to see to it that they rate the pupils fairly and to be ready to redress any wrong they may have done in this respect, either intentionally or unintentionally.

So far my experience has been that some teachers, aided and abetted by principals, instead of cheerfully admitting their fallibility and redressing the wrongs complained against by parents, proceed to revenge themselves upon the innocent pupils whose parents have lodged a complaint, by singling out such pupils for a medical examination with a view to stigmatizing them as abnormal, making them feel inferior and exposing them to the ridicule of their classmates. By such underhanded tricks they undermine the pupils' character instead of training the same.

Teachers, do unto others as you expect to be done by. You must first develop your own character if you want to be fit to train the character of your pupils.

Advice On Housing.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

In Sunday's Post (May 26) I noticed two excerpts from letters to your paper, both of which had to do with the housing situation here in Washington and which were signed Arthur Weimar and Homer Jones, respectively. Now, inasmuch as the intent of this present letter is to encourage these two more or less advanced social thinkers, I am certain that you will give me space. If only these two intellectual Titans could manage to get together, pool their abilities and collaborate in a real effort, I have no doubt that Washington's housing difficulties would be solved in a jiffy — and Messrs. Jones and Weimar would be certain of the gratitude of posterity and of mortal fame.

In case, however, Jones, Weimar & Co., are suffering from nervous exhaustion as the result of their recent independent ventures afield, I'll offer them a thought. I suggest that they exploit this: Resolved, that the space-limiting authority be composed of landlords, each of whom resides on an estate located outside the city.

Unappreciated Remarks.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Congressman Arthur Mitchell was invited to accompany the members of the House sub-committee of interior appropriations on a tour of Howard University last Thursday. The short addresses made by the five members of the committee were encouraging and inspiring. It is with regret that this particular Congressman—not even a member of the committee, but invited to accompany the group, had to make much-a-do about nothing. The president of the university, always master of any grave situation, poured oil upon the troubled waters and was justified in everything that he said. His stand at that crucial period has placed him exceedingly higher in the esteem of the student body.

The question in the minds of those present is why this distinguished Congressman left so hurriedly after throwing what turned out to be a boomerang. Undoubtedly he sensed the tenor of the president's reply and realized that he "couldn't take it." Could Mr. Mitchell have heard the statements made by the students and friends of the university present, he would have realized that his remarks were not appreciated in any respect.

The various reports and many letters which he alleges to be coming to his office concerning the university and the teachings of academic freedom, free thought and whatnot, no doubt come from those "old has-beens" who feel that they are capable of running a university.

Looking Ahead.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I should like to ask the following questions of the young mothers of today: Have you thought of "Decoration Day, 1955?" Do you realize as you gaze at your precious little son peacefully sleeping in his little bed, that unless you do your part for world peace, by instilling in him a love for peace and teaching him to live and work for peace, you, too, may be one of the Gold Star Mothers, placing flowers on his last sleeping place on Memorial Day, 1955?

Mothers from all over the earth working together can bring peace to the war-weary world. Awake and do your part to save your son and other mothers' sons in the future.

"Beware The Tricky Seas."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I hope that those professors who have changed so much of the construction of the Constitution (in their own minds) will not object if I change one word in Ho, Lib. I, XIV:

"O Franklin, a new storm awaits you. What is to be done? Bravely make for port. Do you not see that your boat has no oars and that the mast is injured by the southwester. The ropes creak and without cords the keel will scarcely be able to breast the mighty waves. Your sails are not sound. The gods are not with you whom you call upon beset with trouble . . . You boasted of a name now useless. The timid sailor does not trust the painted figures on the stern! Once my solicitous care, now you are no small concern. Beware 'the tricky seas around the shiny Cyclades.'"

"Policies For Politics."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Permit me to send you just a word to say how gratefully I read the editorial called "Policies for Politics," written and appearing in The Post at the time of the recent general council of the League of Women Voters. It was so understanding that it was indeed encouraging and I shall not soon forget those closing lines after your comment on one of our titles, "Can 50,000,000 People Have Their Minds Changed About Patronage?"

Whether they can or not remains to be seen. But as long as the league continues to function in its present level-headed, sensible and progressive way, it may be assured that at least 50,000,000 people will be glad to hear what its membership thinks upon the subject.

Memorial.

By Paul H. Oehser.

I can not write a ballad of war's glory.
(How can I ever sing of what is not?)
Today I shall recall another story:
A known, not unknown, grave, and unforgot.

I shall remember how you looked that day
I shall remember how you went away . . .
No one believed that you were going to die.

I shall put flowers in a golden vase
For you—a white rose and some fleur-de-lis—
And then, remembering your livid face,
I'll dash to earth their empty fragrancy.

Then shall I sing a plain and tranquil song,
Marked with the minor of your memory clear,
And I shall sing it faithfully and long,
Until my sons are old enough to hear.

Remembering again the day you went,
I shall put poisoned prayers into their food,
And work for you a lasting monument
Made not of stone or steel, but flesh and blood.

The Post Impressionist

Young—at a Hundred.

Post Office, Thursday.

CAN a cataract be developing over that eager and eagle eye which the editorial writers of this newspaper ordinarily keep peeled for sentimental anniversaries?

You must have noted how, despite their preoccupation with Supreme Court decisions and the like, those commentators cherish a fondness for the centenary of any literary eminence. You can't have failed to remark how, for all their hard-boiled attacks on current economic shams, they keep a corner in their inky hearts for every tender festival.

Yet they have now let pass in silence a centennial which should be as dear to them as it is to literary people—and to all other children.

* * *

At first, the Post-Impressionist assumed that some adequate piece had been written and just temporarily crowded aside by political events. We waited.

* * *

But we waited in vain.

* * *

We may wait no longer.

Now, with June hard upon us, we rush to repair the damage done The Post's reputation by what at last stands clear as a sin of omission. We hasten to remind our editorial neighbors, and you, that, in the early days of the merry month of May, and in the Year of Grace 1835, there was given to the world the first volume of fairy stories by Hans Christian Andersen.

* * *

It was issued at Copenhagen, and the accidentals of its birth were not propitious. It was a cheaply printed affair, scarcely more than a pamphlet. Its blue paper covers reflected the feelings which even the author shared with his publishers for the fate of their enterprise. It sold at about 12 cents the copy—and few copies sold.

It contained "Little Claus and Big Claus," "Little Ida's Flowers," "The Princess and the Pea" and "The Tinder Box!"

Most of the Theodore Halls of those days—less perceptive than the Theodore Hall of today—ignored the thing. Some of those that did not quite ignore it advised Andersen to attempt no more eventyr for children. So far as the Post-Impressionist is aware, there was but one Danish critic (of course the great Johan Ludvig Heiberg) who immediately realized that Andersen had set foot upon "the path which leads to immortality."

* * *

However, Andersen, being no D. H. Lawrence, had no such inferiority complex as D. H. Lawrence. His first fears realized, Andersen conquered them. In 1836 he published a second series of these stories. In 1837 he published a third.

* * *

The critics were now became more vocal.

But they were adversely vocal. They scolded him because all his fables lacked a pointed moral.

Andersen did go so far as to apologize for this when he published what is probably his best fairy tale. "Little Mermaid"; but, though personally embittered, he did not let his chagrin affect his work. Indeed, he calmly wrote:

"In a small fatherland, the artist is always a poor man. Honor therefore becomes the goldfish he must try to catch. It remains to be seen whether I shall catch it by telling fairy tales."

* * *

And he caught it. Denmark was one of the last lands to rank him among her most honored children—Denmark, whose wide embrace could include Albert Thorvaldsen!—yet, by the time Andersen died in 1875, the country of his birth was making a national holiday of his birthday.

* * *

To be sure, in those moments when he gave his tongue free rein, he would sometimes say that his novels were his real work. He probably, at the moment, meant this. Once, in talking with Edmund Gosse, Andersen even bestowed on his fairy tales the opprobrious epithet of smaating. Nevertheless, he would never have permitted anybody else to go so far—and, for everything he wrote, he maintained an opinion which produced a Danish proverb:

"To be very vain is to be as vain as Andersen" . . .

A gentle vanity, though. Finally, it overcame his bitterness, winning its way, as gentleness generally does. The Swedish novelist, Fredrika Bremer, well assured him: "Your soul knows no winter, nor any snow."

* * *

Why shouldn't he have been proud? As Dante introduced spoken Italian into poetry, Andersen introduced spoken Danish into literary prose.

And why shouldn't the Danes be proud of him? The children of the whole world love him, and the Danes, who once complained that he was "not a real Dane," know now that he is as Danish as a birch grove . . .

* * *

Having written which in all sincerity, and in an honest endeavor to fill that breach left unguarded by the negligence of our editorial brothers, the Post-Impressionist will add merely one personal note:

We ourselves remain loyal to our childhood preference for the fairy tales of the Brothers Grimm and of that relative of the present French Ambassador to Washington, de Laboulaye.

Grim Determination.

JOHN L. LEWIS, who, according to the romantic reporters, is the leonine featured, fearless leader of the mine workers, often gets provoked at Willie Green, the Federation of Labor head, who has neither the shaggy mane nor leonine features to suggest fearlessness. He must have been terribly provoked with him yesterday when he woke up and saw the picture in the newspapers of himself, Green and Miss Perkins leaving the White House.

It seems that what Willie doesn't realize is that now is the time to show a grim, determined mood. John knows his moods well. All of his life he has engaged in bitter labor warfare. He bitterly led his charges to ruination several years ago and living wages were not restored to them and Lewis' organization was not restored to its feet until the NRA came along when John really did some good work while other labor leaders slept.

* * * *

But in his long years of strife, of ups and downs, John has learned how to portray every mood for the camera, the mood of satisfaction which he seldom has occasion to use, the mood of determination, the mood of fight, the mood of fearlessness and so on. He knows them all and can switch from one pose to another with an amazing facility.

Well, from his long experience he knows that the mood just now should be one of fearless determination. Immediately the NRA collapsed he knew this was the mood to affect and he had only to reach in his file of moods and pull out Mood No. 3 or 4 as the case may be. It makes no difference that his problem has nothing to do with the collapse of the NRA. The price structure of the bituminous coal industry had already broken down. The NRA—not even it—having been sufficient for the soft coal industry, its operators, or a large part of them, sometime ago turned to the Guffey bill which would declare the industry a public utility, subsidize it with $300,000,000 and have the Government pretty much operate it.

John has thrown the support of his union behind the operators. This has been cited as an excellent example of labor and capital cooperating. It's cooperation all right and one that is likely to dampen the ardor of the proponents of greater cooperation between labor and capital.

Anyway, the present wage negotiations between the operators and John and the talk of a strike are directed at passage of the Guffey bill and have no relation to the collapse of the NRA.

* * * *

But the country is a little tense just now. So John knew that the mood to assume is coming from the White House was one of grim determination. But he either hadn't tipped Willie Green off or else he expected Willie to know the proper mood without being told. The result is we have the picture of John looking grim and determined, reflecting the great crisis which is at hand, and of Willie smiling just as broadly as you please. Miss Perkins is smiling, too, but although she is the labor representative in the Cabinet, she is not called upon to reflect the various labor moods.

It's provoking, it is—to have Willie showing the wrong mood this way. When John woke up and saw the picture he must have exclaimed as angrily as only he can appear: "I'd like to wring Willie's neck."

Willie's smile killed the whole effect of the picture. There is a question, in fact, as to whether it didn't nullify the trip to the White House.

Students of publicity say that a picture is worth 10,000 words, or something like that. Well, the people feeling a little tense just now and seeing John's expression of grim determination would be apt to get really frightened and say "We'd better do something quick to avert this crisis, even pass the Guffey bill."

But then looking at the picture again and seeing Willie smiling they would breathe a sigh of relief and decide that the situation can't be so bad.

The Aisne-Marne American Cemetery.

France Pays Homage To 30,890 Americans Who Lie In Six Cemeteries, Where Poppies, Wreaths And Flags Will Be Placed On Crosses By American Overseers And Children.

By Andre Vulliet.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Paris.

IN the peaceful silence of the French countryside, out where grass is growing where death was in the making and restful cemeteries recall infernal battlefields, poppies and flags today are waving over 30,000 American graves like a gentle beck flung forth in the wind by those who have not failed "their rendezvous with death."

Although Memorial Day, or, as they used to call it, Decoration Day, seems to be particularly asociated with America soil, those grief-stricken parents, sorrowing comrades and friendly compatriots who are mourning today in the six American cemeteries in France might forget that they were in a foreign land when they see the piety and devotion with which small children from the nearby villages scatter wild flowers on the American tombs.

If the city dwellers are prone to forget the dreadful days of 18 years ago, those who live in the invaded sections where the decisive battles were fought and won, the peasants of Thiaucourt and Montfaucon, the citizens of Sedan and St. Mihiel keep ever present in their minds the seemingly miraculous arrival of thousands upon thousands of strangers from overseas who, like brothers, were prepared to die besides the sons of France.

* * * *

THE story has been often told of how, when hope had almost fled, when resources were exhausted, suddenly, the whole face of the situation was altered and, in the place of France's war-worn troops reduced to the very skeleton of their former effectives, the youthful soldiers of a youthful nation appeared, ready to fight for this strange land as though it were their own.

It has been often told. But it is a pious duty to say it again at least once every year, on Memorial Day, on the right spots where 80,000 A. E. F. boys had, according to Alan Seegar, "that rare American military cemeteries of Romagne near Montfaucon, Beleau Wood near Chateau Thierry, Thiaucourt near St. Mihiel, Bony near St. Quentin, Fere-en-Tardenois near Reims and Suresnes near Paris.

Today, as usual, delegations of Americans and Frenchmen are recalling the heroism, suffering and sacrifices of those khaki-clad regiments before endless rows of white marble crosses that fade out in the distance where golden crops are rising.

* * * *

EVERY American who visits any of the above cemeteries or their commemorative chapels or such battle monuments as Montfaucon, Montsec, Bellicourt, Blanc Mont, Chateau Thierry and Cantigny should be proud of the impressive work and beautiful keeping up done by the American Battle Monuments Commission, headed by Gen. John J. Pershing.

And on May 30, they should be grateful to the American Overseas Memorial Day Association for decorating each of the more than 30,000 graves with a poppy, a wreath and small French and American flags. This reverential task is performed by official American superintendents.

About 40,000 bodies were taken back to the United States, on their relatives' request, at the Government's expenses. There also are about 70 isolated graves, the most celebrated of which being that of Quentin Roosevelt, President Theodore Roosevelt's son, who was buried where his plane fell, near Fere-en-Tardenois.

These isolated graves are usually decorated by members of the Paris posts of the American Legion or by local French citizens, frequently the mayor of the locality concerned.

THE general locations of the most imposing memorials are enduring reminders of the three historic battlefields where the American forces mostly contributed to the final victory. These are known as the St. Mihiel battlefield, with its Montsec monument and Thiaucourt Cemetery; the Meuse-Argonne battlefield, with the Montfaucon memorial, and the Romagne Cemetery and the Aisne-Marne battlefield, with the Chateau-Thierry memorial and the Belleau wood graves. The St. Mihiel area was in Lorraine, that section of eastern France which had been set aside by the French high command as the concentration area for the American Army.

At Thiacourt, the third largest American military cemetery in France, the 4,152 marble headstones gleam white as the sun marks the time on a large stone sundial carved in the form of a resting American eagle, with the following inscription: "Time will not dim the glory of their deeds."

On the hill above Chateau-Thierry, where Joan of Arc rode by in 1429 and where Jean de La Fontaine wrote many of his immortal fables, now stands a memorial to the glory of the American troops. Commanding a sweeping view of the Marne Valley, the monument's twin rows of majestic columns rise at the right and left of two figures of symbolic size representing France and America.

Down in the valley, not far from the memorial, nearly 2,300 American soldiers rest in peace in curving rows around the base of the Belleau Wood hill while 6,000 others sleep in honored glory in the second largest American cemetery abroad, at Fere-en-Tardenois.

* * * *

BUT the foremost chapter in the history of the American participation is written forever in the French sky, above the Argonne Forest and the Montfaucon Hill, in the form of a colossal rose granite Doric shaft which towers the ruins of the war-time Montfaucon village by more than 175 feet.

There, between the heavily fortified Argonne Forest and the strongly defended Meuse Heights, the battle raged from September 26 to November 11, with more than 900,000 Americans participating at one time, slowly and gallantly making headway until, on November 7, they held the heights overlooking Sedan.

During the battle 123,000 were killed, wounded or missing and a little further down, in the valley, at Romagne-sous-Montfaucon, facing a huge lily pond, a verdant hill and quiet trees, more than 14,200 white marble crosses and stars of David for the Jewish soldiers speak for those who acted the drama and saw not its end.

There, undoubtedly, the most impressive of memorial ceremonies abroad is justly taking place today, as the Meuse-Argonne combat will go down as one of the most glorious pages of American military history.

* * * *

THERE, among still waves of graves unfurling in endless wake, a comrade of those heroes, who constantly kept the French high command in touch with their doings, Gen. de Chambrun, will evoke the glory of their deed and pay due tribute to those among the dead whose name is "known but to God."

"Was it not one of those very heroes whom we glorify today," Gen. de Chambrun will say, "fallen somewhere near Varenne or Malencourt, in Belleau Wood or in the Bois des Forges, whose obscure action and last drop of blood were the decisive factors in the trend of the war?"

"Is it then astonishing that each nation, recognizing in the common soldier the veritable victor of the war, should have consecrated to his glory, its most impressive monument?" the general will continue.

In Paris, this evening, if you walk up the Champs Elysses toward Napoleon's triumphal arch, at that time when the sun sinks behind its pillars, you will probably find that the imperial arch opens against the sunset like a doorway to infinite beauty. Yet, there, in the center of Parisian activity, an unextinguished flame burns over a bronze tomb and adds new grandeur to the gigantic vault. And that permanent contrast between in constant flow of Paris life and the unknown dead is one of the grandest achievements of man.

"Guess what, dear! Mother's going to stay another week!"

Memoirs.

YOU can't pick up a newspaper or magazine these days without finding in it some reference to science, especialy some lay explanation of a new development or discovery. But not so many years ago science was as secretive as a bootlegger over his income tax. No one knew about it who did not have 16 letters after his name; it was practically a private possession of the scientific guild.

The man who changed all that—who was the first one to popularize science in the public press, the first to write about dinosaurs and bacteria for the layman, the first to publicize the Department of Agriculture and other Government bureaus, and indeed almost the first to invent the very notion of syndicated material for the papers—lived most of his life here in town. Many of you must remember Rene Bache (he died in 1933 at the age of 72), strolling about the streets of Washington, always dressed in white in summer, always with a wide-flaring cape in winter, almost always accompanied by his St. Bernard. Certainly there is not a leading scientist of long standing here who did not know him, and like him enormously. For Rene Bache would walk in, pump them dry on some new topic in their field, charm them with his wit and geniality, leave them chuckling—and go off to write it all up with an accuracy and engagingness which has never been seen here since.

His sister-in-law, Violet Biddle, knew him at close hand most of his life, now writes a most pleasing memoir: "Rene Bache" (Dorrance, $1.50). From the days when he drew devils for the Harvard Lampoon, wrote his future wife three and four times a day, married her when he became a telegraph editor in Chicago, turned down Hearst's offer of the magazine editorship of the San Francisco Examiner, and discovered the possibilities in syndication, all the way down to his friendship with Profs. Hrdlicka, Hough, Humphreys, Howard, Talman and other Washington figures, she narrates the informal story. Mostly it is personal and intimate—his jokes and amiability and astounding effervescence. I liked his remark over the disks, like giant tack heads, which mark pedestrian lanes in the streets here: "There are so many thieves about nowadays that the city is obliged to nail down the streets."

But then, too, there is a solid appreciation of the versatility, the brilliance and all-ranging curiosity which came down the line and bloomed in Benjamin Franklin's great-great-great grandson.

* * * *

IF you don't exactly know that a "nubbin" is a defective ear of corn set aside to feed chickens, or that "cracklins" are the remains of hog-fat after the lard has been drawn off, used to shorten cornbread, or that a "swarf" is the swathe cut by a handreaper's cradle advancing through the wheat, then Buckner Magill Randolph's "Ten Years Old and Under: the Story of a Boyhood in the South" (Hill, Boston, $1.50) will be like a foreign land to you.

Which is deplorable. For even in this machine age (in Dr. Randolph's youth in Virginia, 1873-1880, "machine" meant only the thresher), these old terms have a solid reality and a savor which we seem to need. Read this easy, fresh-eyed account of a boy's growing up on a farm devastated by the Civil War, of "catnipper" bogies (kidnapers) and "leaving something on the plate for manners," of trips to the flour mill at Fredericksburg and hog-killings and bush-burnings, of rabbit traps and sling-shots and "tewnamints" out of "Ivanhoe," and you will see what I mean.

And if you were brought up with "Yankee" as about the worst word you knew, and with bayonets used as pokers for the kitchen fire (the words were synonomous to the young Randolph), and with hog jowl and spare ribs and black-eyed peas as your daily fare, this book will take you straight back to your own private good-old-days. Dr. Randolph usually writes about such things as "Sarcoma of the Left Lobe of the Brain," but in these pages it is pretty plain what he likes best.

"CALIFORNIA JOE" (Caxton Printers, $3) by Joe E. Milner and E. R. Forrest. One of the prime scouts and trappers of the Old West has his story fully and glowingly told by his grandson (Mr. Milner) and by a Western historian.

"Yo' big long-hair, if yo' want to laugh at me step out here and we'll shoot it out," said California Joe to Wild Bill Hickok at their first encounter. But they became fast friends, as Joe did with Custer, Kearny, Jim Bridger, Jim Baker, Buffalo Bill, Texas Bob Heckle, and other old giants. Many rare photographs, and an account of Custer's last stand by an officer present at Sitting Bull's surrender, top off this A-1 volume for lovers of Western lore. And it's grand going even for the uninitiated.

Auditorium Dedicated At Pennsylvania School

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Bedford, Pa., May 29.—The Bedford High School auditorium was dedicated tonight at community Memorial Day exercises. The dedication address was by Dr. James N. Rule, State superintendent of public instruction, Harrisburg. The speaker was introduced by County Superintendent Lloyd H. Hinkle. Representative Charles W. Allen spoke for the Bedford Board of Education. Music was furnished by the junior and senior high school Glee Clubs, Bedford Male Chorus and the American Legion Junior Band. Exercises were followed by the memorial services in charge of Post No. 113, American Legion.

Commencement exercises will take place in the new auditorium Friday night.

Woman Rider Critically Hurt At Horse Show

Mrs. Cary Jackson Thrown From Mount Taking Difficult Jump.

Mrs. Cary Jackson, prominent horsewoman, of Keswick, Va., was seriously injured yesterday afternoon during the running of the cross-country class event at the Devon Horse Show, Bryn Mawr, Pa., the Associated Press reported.

The accident occurred just as Mrs. Jackson's mount, Alcatraz, had taken a jump half-way around the course. The horse fell, tossing Mrs. Jackson to the ground. Spectators said that the animal stepped on her face.

After a preliminary examination, before she was taken to the Bryn Mawr Hospital, physicians said that she may have received a fractured skull. She was unconscious when taken to the hospital.

Mrs. Jackson had been in the Philadelphia suburb since the show opened last Friday, accompanied by her husband. She is 27 and the mother of two children.

In the same event, 15-year-old Peter Hayden, of Chester Springs, Pa., was hurt at a jump similar to the one causing Mrs. Jackson's fall. Several other horses fell during the race over the rugged course, but Mrs. Jackson and young Hayden were the only ones reported to have been taken to the hospital.

Officials of the show later said the footing apparently was treacherous, and that the horses were unable to approach the fences properly. As a result, the next event, a jumping competition, was taken from the outside course into the center ring.

Veracity Is Issue In Liquor Trial

Defense Witnesses Quizzed at Roanoke, Va.

By the Associated Press.

Roanoke, Va., May 29.—The distinction between "reputation" and "general reputation as to truthfulness"—a distinction which the court drew at various times—provided the Government with ammunition as it kept two defense character witnesses under fire for more than an hour in the trial of alleged Franklin County liquor conspirators here this afternoon.

Attacking the credibility of 25 Government witnesses, 36 defense witnesses had testified at the end of the day, with the Government centering particularly on the last two, Capt. J. L. Manning, retired Roanoke police chief, and R. E. Callis, Roanoke patrolman.

Both Manning and Callis declared the general reputation for truthfulness of Roanoke bootleggers, including Willie Carter Sharpe, woman "pilot"—bootleggers who testified for the Government—was "bad." But under prosecution prodding, Manning told the court that he was talking about "reputation in general," and Callis said he could not recall anyone "in particular" who had discussed the woman's veracity.

Leslie Howard Interviewed

By

Wm. Lyon Phelps.

OF ALL the numerous and popular British actors who appear on the New York stage, there is none more popular or more admired than Leslie Howard.

Like many very busy persons, he was reluctant to give interviews either to professional or amateur reporters; so he hit upon the excellent plan of granting one interview to several hundred at once—more agreeable for him and a more speedy method of disposing of all present and future requests. This specimen of mass-production interviewing came off at the Broadhurst Theater, in New York, on the afternoon of Friday, April 5, 1935.

* * * *

Mr. Howard came out in mufti on the stage, leaned against a small desk, lit his pipe and prepared for the worst. In the orchestra chairs and other parts of the auditorium were about 300 youthful amateurs of both sexes, ready to ask questions.

I do not see how he could have more truthfully answered a question that several hundred thousand ambitious boys and girls have in their minds. How can one helpfully answer a question like this: What is the way to succeed as a poet? As a novelist? As a playwright? What can one say?

Mr. Edward Arlington Robinson used to say that if you had real poetry in you, it would come out, and if you didn't, you might write verse, but you would never write poetry. This is not comforting or helpful, but it is very near the truth.

So when Leslie Howard was asked about the probabilities of success on the stage for the young and obscure, he said, "It's a pure gamble."

* * * *

With reference to the ever-living question as to whether the actor himself should feel emotion while playing, Mr. Howard said it was of no importance either way. The only important thing was that the actor should make the audience feel emotion; what difference did it make how he accomplished this?

He expressed a general dislike of three things: First, propaganda on the stage, because he thought the theater should be primarily for entertainment; second, long runs, because he thought they had a stupefying effect on the actor; third, Sunday performances.

He enjoys the stage more than the films, but likes both; and he liked best of all his roles in both arts that in "Berkeley Square." I was not surprised that he expressed that preference.

Milk Truck Is Used As Ambulance for Boy

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., May 29.—The small son of Ott Getridge is out of danger as a result of a hurried trip to the Washington County Hospital early today in a milk truck, which was converted into a makeshift ambulance.

D. H. Crumbacher was making his rounds at 3:30 a. m., when he stopped at the Getridge home to deliver milk. Finding the child unconscious, he took him and his parents to the hospital.

Brief Ordered From Davidson Will Caveators

Statler Heiress' Classmate Permitted to Become Party to Case.

By the Associated Press.

Carthage, N. C., May 29.—Judge Felix E. Alley today signed an order requiring the caveators to the purported will of Mrs. Elva Statler Davidson, filed in Moore Superior Court, to file a bill of particulars within 45 days from the adjournment of this term of court.

He also signed an order permitting Isabella Baer, of Minneapolis, Minn., to become a party to the case. Miss Baer was a classmate at Radcliffe College of Mrs. Davidson, 22-year-old adopted daughter of the late E. M. Statler, hotel magnate.

In a will dated prior to that filed here Miss Baer was named executrix and was bequethed the tangible personal property of her college chum.

The will in contest leaves the bulk of her estate, estimated at $560,000, to her husband, H. Bradley Davidson, of Washington and Pinehurst.

Mrs. Davidson died at Pinehurst February 27 of carbon monoxide poisoning.

The purported will was filed a few days later by Davidson's attorneys, and a contest was immediately brought by the Statler interests. No grounds for the contest were set forth, and Judge Alley's order to the caveators today is for these particulars.

Dr. James A. Wright to Preach Baccalaureate.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Harrisonburg, Va., May 29.—Harrisonburg High School finals will open Sunday with the preaching of the baccalaureate sermon at the First United Brethren Church by Dr. James W. Wright and will close next Wednesday evening when Dr. Henry A. Porter, of Charlottesville, addresses the 48 graduates.

Class day exercises will be held Tuesday afternoon. This program and the graduation will take place in Wilson Hall at the State-Teachers College.

11 Revenue Agents Stay at Richmond

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., May 29.—Eleven investigators attached to the alcohol tax unit of the Internal Revenue Department in Virginia, who have been idle pending outcome of recent examinations, have passed and will be reinstated, John H. Wickham, investigator in charge here, was advised today.

Wickham said these men's return would be worth upwards of $30,000 daily to the Government in their war on moonshiners and bootleggers who otherwise would escape tax of $2 a gallon.

Grand Jury Will Hear Charges Against Judge

Danville, Va., May 29 (AP).—A Federal grand jury will consider the case of Charles Warren, Pittsylvania Country trial magistrate, who is charged with interfering with Federal Officer H. B. Hook by having him locked in the Chatham Jail for three hours on April 3. He was ordered held under $500 bond after a hearing today.

The clash between the county official and the officer of the Virginia alcohol tax unit of the Internal Revenue department took place while Hook was attempting to seize an automobile which he said had been used for illegal transportation of liquor.

Attack With Pistol Charged.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Westminster, Md., May 29.—Edgar Harry, of Mount Airy, was arrested yesterday on a charge of assault with intent to kill William C. Jones, also of Mount Airy. According to officers, Harry said he fired a target pistol into the air "just to scare Jones." Harry will have a hearing before Police Magistrate Sherman E. Flanagan Friday.

"Mama," whispered little Willie as the great conductor took his place in the orchestra pit and the famous soprano began her aria, "what's the man shaking the stick at her for?"

"Shut up!" Mama explained. "That's his baton. He isn't shaking it at her."

"Then what's she hollerin' for?"

That, we are sad to report, is little Willie's reaction to good music. The case of his sister is even worse. She just loves to prattle about how much she adores good music, but when she has an opportunity to listen to a great symphony she stays home and tunes the radio to Cab Calloway's band. She thinks that arpeggio is an island in the Pacific and that Chaikovski was a Russian general. You see, little Willie and his sister have not read the excellent articles by Ray C. B. Brown in The Washington Post; and, therefore, are not en rapport with things musical. But there is hope for them even now, and we are starting a subscription to The Post for them in order that they may learn the intellectual pleasure to be derived from listening to classical music.

Mr. Brown is one of America's best known music critics, and his authoritative, intelligent, sensitive articles are required reading for music lovers. Washington is becoming more and more music conscious, and The Post is proud of the part Mr. Brown has played in explaining the works of great composers to new listeners. For two years he was managing editor of Musical America and his writings are studied closely by students. In his "Postlude" column, discussing the programs presented by symphony orchestras, choral groups and others, he strikes a new note in criticism.

Like his good friend, Dr. Sigmund Spaeth, the "tune detector," Mr. Brown can listen to Tin Pan Alley's latest song hit and tell you instantly the symphony from which the theme was stolen, and, if you question him closely, he might remember the older work from which the symphony composer borrowed a few bars!

In The Sunday Post you'll find an entire page devoted to music, and the leading article, always written by Mr. Brown, will give you a deeper, more sympathetic understanding of all things musical. Nowadays, when Stravinski's "Firebird" suite is discussed at the dinner table along with the New Deal and Europe's war scare, you'll find Ray C. B. Brown's brilliant articles of great help in convincing your hostess that you, too, can recognize Bloch's "Schelomo" and that you can discuss Hindemith with the best of them. If you are a lover of good music you'll appreciate his clear, authentic criticisms; if you are just learning to listen to the great symphonies you'll demand his help. You'll find it in

Mary Giffin Is Married At Academy

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

A wedding of interest to Washington took place yesterday afternoon in Annapolis when Miss Mary Giffen, daughter of Capt. and Mrs. Robert C. Giffen, became the bride of Lieut. Shirley Miller, U. S. N., son of Mrs. Irvin Miller, of Eustis, Fla. The ceremony was performed at 6 o'clock in the Naval Academy Chapel by Chaplain William N. Thomas, in the presence of several hundred guests from Annapolis, Washington and other cities.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of ivory satin fashioned on princess lines with a long circular train, a collar of stitched satin, and long fitted sleeves. Her veil of tulle was caught on each side of the head with clusters of tiny calla lilies and she carried a sheaf of calla lilies.

Miss Hodgman Maid of Honor.

Miss Anne Thomas Hodgman, daughter of Commander and Mrs. William A. Hodgman, was maid of honor. She wore a frock of pale rose tulle fashioned with a dropped shoulder line, short puffed sleeves, and a full circular skirt. Her hat was of horsehair straw of the same shade banded with satin ribbon, and she carried a muff of pink sweet peas. The bridesmaids were Miss Camilla Yvonne Moore, daughter of Commander and Mrs. Samuel N. Moore; Miss Rose LaRue, of Washington and Florida; Miss Ruth Hall, daughter of Commander and Mrs. Robert A. Hall; Miss Katherine Philbrick, daughter of Capt. and Mrs. Manning Philbrick; Miss Louise Bruce, daughter of Capt. and Mrs. Gryson Bruce, and Miss Margaret Anderson, of Cedar Rapids, Iowa.

All the attendants wore frocks like that of the maid of honor, two in yellow, two in orchid and two in green, and carried muffs of sweet peas.

Mr. Chester A. Snow, jr., of Washington, was best man for Lieut. Miller, and the ushers were Lieut. George Anderson, Lieut. James Haley, Lieut. Donald Griffin, Lieut S. G. Mitchel, Lieut. William Pye and Lieut. Peter Albach. The groomsmen were in white uniforms, and the young couple passed from the chapel under an arch of crossed sabers.

Reception Held at Home.

After the ceremony there was a reception at the home of the bride's parents at the Naval Academy, where Capt. Griffin is director of athletics.

Immediately after the reception Lieut. and Mrs. Miller left for a cruise aboard the Madelon, the cruiser which Mr. Snow has placed at their disposal. The bride wore a suit of brown and white crepe, with a white hat. On their return they will be at home at 170 Duke of Gloucester street, Annapolis.

Mrs. Miller was graduated from Vassar in 1932, and Lieut. Miller, a graduate of the Naval Academy class of 1927, is in the Air Corps, and at present is on duty at the Naval Academy Postgraduate School.

Miss A. K. Keane Becomes Bride Of Dermot Nee

Announcement is made of the marriage of Miss Antoinette Katharine Keane, daughter of Mrs. Thomas F. Keane and the late Mr. Keane, and Mr. Dermot Anthony Nee, son of Mrs. Peter Joseph Nee and the late Mr. Nee, which took place yesterday at noon at the Shrine of the Blessed Sacrament in Chevy Chase. The Rev. Thomas G. Smyth performed the ceremony in the presence of members of the immediate families and a few close friends, with the bride being given in marriage by her uncle, Mr. Lawrence D. Keane.

The bride wore a white satin gown of princess style. Her tulle veil fell in soft folds over her shoulders and was caught to her head with sprays of orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet of white orchids and lilies-of-the-valley. Her only attendant was her cousin, Mrs. Edward Josef Madill, who wore pink mousseline de soie with a regency hat in the same shade and carried delphinium and pink gladioli. Mr. John A. Bogan was Mr. Nee's best man.

Mrs. Keane's gown was a silk and lace combination in aquamarine. The mother of the bridegroom wore flowered chiffon. Both had corsages of orchids.

Following a breakfast at the home of the bride's mother, the couple left for New York. They will sail Saturday for a trip through Ireland, England and Scotland. Mrs. Nee's going-away costume was a light navy suit with blue fox collar. Her hat was a white and navy blue felt tailleur.

Mrs. Nee is a graduate of Trinity College, Mr. Nee attended Georgetown University.

Out-of-town guests at the wedding included Mrs. W. G. McLaughlin, of Westhampton, Long Island; Mr. George H. Sherlin, of Brooklyn; Mr. and Mrs. Marcel Mallet and Miss Agnes Gahy, of New York.

Letts Garden Added to Tour For Saturday

Chevy Chase Club Sponsors Trip; Hayes Manor in Itinerary.

The garden of Mrs. John C. Letts, 3200 Ellicott street, has been added to the list to be visited Saturday in the annual tour of the Garden Club of Chevy Chase, Md., announced Mrs. J. W. Murphy, chairman of the tour, yesterday.

Hayes Manor, Mr. and Mrs. G. Thomas Dunlop's home, which the Secretary of the Interior and Mrs. Harold L. Ickes are taking over next month, will have an especial interest to the historically minded. It was acquired by the Dunlop family in 1782 and six generations of Dunlops have lived in the manor, built before the Revolution by Parson Alexander Williamson, who is buried in a corner of the grounds. The story is that the parson was unfrocked because of his Tory leanings.

The Dunlops always have specialized in old-fashioned gardens, with roses, iris, peonies, wistaria, lilies of the valley, flag lilies and the chief blooms. On the grounds of the estate are stately trees, particularly tulip, poplar and oaks.

Among other interesting gardens to be shown are the more modern and formal gardens of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Southgate and Mr. and Mrs. William S. Corby. An unusual feature of Mrs. Southgate's garden is the irregular arrangement of rock garden plants around a formal pool. The wild-flower garden nearby contains many plants and flowers that theoretically will not grow except in their native haunts.

Mrs. Corby's garden, on the other hand, typifies the more formal treatment. A long, narrow pool contains many rare water plants. Boxwood, trimmed in the continental manner to simulate various animals and unique figures, gives the estate an air of originality.

Fifteen gardens and estates are included in the tour, which will leave Chevy Chase Circle at 1 o'clock Saturday. An information booth there will be provided with maps of the tour and other data.

All proceeds will be donated to the Social Service League of Montgomery County.

Washington Couple Feted in New York

The Alleys, Recently Wed, Are Supper Guests.

Alley, of Washington, whose marriage took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Larz Anderson May 16. Mr. Alley is general counsel for the Reconstruction Finance Corporation at Washington. Mrs. Alley was Mrs. Esther Hall Lowe.

Earlier in the evening the party attended a performance of "Accent on Youth." Guests at the supper included Mr. and Mrs. Austin L. Babcock, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Ahearn, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Linder, Mrs. Bernice Fleming Holland, Miss Theodora Morris, Mr. Rayford W. Alley and Mr. Frederick P. Smith. Mr. and Mrs. Alley will return to Washington early next month after passing their honeymoon at his country home on Long Island.

Nevins-Bingham Wedding Held In Connecticut

Bridegroom Is the Son of Former Senator; They Will Live in N. Y.

The marriage of Miss Norris Nevins, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Wells Nevins, of Long Island, N. Y., and Mr. Mitchell Bingham, of Salem, Conn., and New York, son of former Senator and Mrs. Hiram Bingham, of Washington, was solemnized yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock. The ceremony was performed at the home of the bride's aunts, the Misses Nevins, at Shaw Farm, Waterford, Conn.

The bride wore a frock of white mousseline de soie fashioned with a V neck and a full ruffle on the skirt. Her veil was of white tulle caught with cap effect with orange blossoms, and the bridal bouquet was of gardenias and lilies of the valley. The bride's only jewelry was a string of pearls. Mr. Nevins, father of the bride, gave his daughter in marriage.

Attending the bride was Miss Dorothea Brown, of Salem, Mass., as maid of honor, who wore a frock of aquamarine chiffon with a finely pleated skirt and a wide horsehair hat and slippers of the same shade. She carried blue delphinium and daisies. Farr Bingham, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles T. Bingham, of Brookline, Mass., and a niece of the bridegroom, wore yellow crepe de chine and carried a basket of blue flowers. Mr. Fuller Potter, of New York City, acted as best man, and the ushers were Mr. Alfred Bingham, Mr. Jonathan Bingham and Mr. Charles Bingham, brothers of the bridegroom.

After a wedding trip, Mr. and Mrs. Bingham will make their home at the London Terrace Apartments in New York and at the cottage of Mr. Bingham in Salem.

Mrs. Bingham is a graduate of the Katharine Gibbs School in New York and Mr. Bingham, a graduate of Groton, has studied art abroad and is studying in New York at present.

Custis Home Scene of Rites

Marker Will Be Unveiled at Abingdon Shrine on Saturday.

The program for the ceremonies at Abingdon, the birthplace of Nellie Custis on the Mount Vernon highway, to be held on Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock, will include a number of interesting features.

The invocation will be by the Rev. William J. Morton, D. D., of Christ Church, Alexandria. Mr. Wade H. Ellis, of Washington and Rippon Lodge, will be the presiding officer. Miss Agnes Peter, representing the Custis family, and Miss Frances Swann Sinclair, representing the Alexander family, will unveil the marker.

Mr. R. Walton Moore, Assistant Secretary of State, will give an address on Abingdon and the Custis family.

Music will be played by the Fort Myer band.

This celebration is under the auspices of the Washington Branch of the Association for the Preservation of Virginia Antiquities, Mrs. E. Rust Smith, director.

There will also be the dedication of a scarlet oak tree in memory of the late Mrs. J. Taylor Ellyson, who served as president of the association for 32 years.

All persons interested in historic shrines are invited.

Moriarty Home Is Scene of Nuptials; Pair to Live at Warrenton.

Miss Elizabeth Mae Weaver, sister of Mrs. R. J. Moriarty, of The Plains, Va., became the bride of Mr. Thomas Weston Thompson, of Warrenton, Va., son of Mrs. T. W. Thompson, formerly of Fauquier County, Va., and now of New York, yesterday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock at a quiet ceremony at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Moriarty in the presence of the families and a few close friends. The Rev. Glen Cooper, Warrenton Methodist Church, officiated.

The bride, given in marriage by her brother-in-law, Mr. Moriarty, wore a gown of white mousseline de soie with a hat to match, and carried a bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley.

The bride was attended by Miss Eleanor Poole, of Washington, and Miss Audrey Bishop, of Warrenton. Miss Poole wore a gown of tea rose mousseline de soie with a hat to match, and Miss Bishop wore a gown of blue mousseline de soie with a hat to match. Both carried bouquets of tea roses and blue delphinium. Mr. John R. Benner, of Warrenton, was best man.

Devotion to Social Justice Is World's Greatest Need, Sir Willmott Tells Club Women

Simple Dryer Handy Article For Knitters

By Ruth Anne Davis.

FOR ALMOST six months Mrs. Knitter had been working on her suit. Time after time she'd travel bits of it, and start over. But finally it was finished. Months of picking it up and putting it down were plainly evident. Her suit was far too soiled to wear. "We'll just wash this out," she said, "and I'll wear it yet!"

That is the preface to her story, a story of tragedy which only knitters will appreciate. She washed her suit, and hung it up to dry. Every half hour or so, she'd stretch it out, for she wanted to take no chances it would shrink.

The next day there was a luncheon, and she was going to wear this new suit. Her hat and her shoes, bought to go with it, would certainly make it look like a million-dollar outfit. That she knew.

When she put on her suit, imagine her despair to find it tight in some places, large in others, shapeless—and useless. Tears were of no avail in washing away her disappointment.

That is the story of one young woman, but doubtless there are thousands who, like Mrs. Knitter, have spent time, effort, and money on suits and sweaters which they patiently knitted day in and day out. Lest they, too, find themselves in her predicament let them inquire immediately about the sweater dryer featured in the housewares department of a local store. This clever little apparatus is adjustable to anything that's knitted, from golf stockings to a three-piece suit.

It's the easiest thing in the world to use. Three seconds, and it's up and ready. And after you've used it you can fold it into a single compact unit that can be tucked away in the corner of the closet.

Raffia "Halo" for the Beach.

Maybe you thought halos were reserved for saints and angels. Not this season. Just let summer come—and it looks as if it's on the way for sure this time—and you'll find haloed maidens on every beach.

You see, this season, you walk up to the store counter and buy your own halo. Brown, black, red, green, whatever color you desire. Your halo will cost you only 79 cents, and it will be a dandy thing to keep the sea-breezes from mussing your hair.

These novel coiffure aids are made of raffia. They are absolutely waterproof, so you can wear them in and out of the surf without the least bit of bother.

Double Duty Dresses.

It looks like a big time at the beach this summer for all the kiddies who are lucky enough to own one of the play suits—or more literally—double duty dresses featured in a downtown store.

They are guaranteed to make any girl, from the one who is knee-high to a duck to one who is half past ten or twelve, look like the fashion pictures she clips for paper dolls.

Double duty dresses will please the busy mother, too. She'll find they'll make the family wash lighter and also lighten her daughter's wardrobe problems.

The dresses include an overdress, with shorts and top to match. At the beach the little miss can slip off her frock, and presto she's ready for all the sand-battles and splashings she likes. Then, when she goes home, on goes the top dress and she's as spic and span as she was when she left the house that morning.

These ever so handy and attractive ensembles cost only $2. They come in almost every kind of cotton material, in plaids, strips, prints and plain.

Cleansing Tissue Boxes.

You'll gasp with amazement when you find out they are only 39 cents! We refer to those attractive cleansing tissue boxes on display in the toilet goods department of a downtown store. You'd probably think the boxes themselves would sell for twice as much.

They are made of a sturdy metal and covered with a glossy rayon silk, pink, blue, green and orchid. Inside is a spring base which keeps the tissues at the very top so that you can pull one out with the greatest of ease.

Don't wait too long to shop for these extra special bargains. There are just so many on hand, and when these are gone there'll be no more—at least at this price!

Swanky Washable Slacks.

Every man will want to include a pair or two of washable slacks in his summer wardrobe. Why not? He can buy some swanky looking ones for only $2.95. They come in plain whites, stripes, and checks, in tan, gray, and brown. Remember—they take to the washtub like a duck to water!

Mrs. Chavez Abandoned A Career for Marriage

Underwood & Underwood.

Watching political conflicts from the sidelines, Mrs. Dennis Chavez, wife of the newly appointed Senator from New Mexico, counts victories and defeats, plaudits and snubs as all part of the political game. "But I do feel that Senator Cutting himself would not have approved of the recent demonstration against my husband," she said.

Wife of Senator From New Mexico Is Glad She Followed Spanish Traditions Instead of Tracing Them.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

IF IMELDA ESPINOSA has lived up to her brother's ambitions for her, she would probably be widely known today as an authority on remnants of Spanish customs in New Mexico. But instead of tracing Spanish traditions, she followed one by giving up her career in favor of marriage. Thus she became Mrs. Dennis Chavez, wife of the successor to Senator Bronson Cutting.

Now, after 23 years, she is glad she left the career for somebody else to complete and regrets only that there wasn't enough time to finish her college course at the University of Chicago before she married.

She admitted this yesterday as she told something of her life in New Mexico and recounted some of her experiences in Washington.

A small, dainty person with black straight hair always parted in the middle and drawn down to a knot at the back of her neck, Mrs. Chavez is, in appearance, typically Spanish. She was particularly attractive yesterday in a turquoise blue dress that matched her silver and turquoise earrings, which, according to her, weren't Spanish but Navajo. ("I always wear earrings of some sort," she said. "Perhaps it's because I'm Spanish that I never feel really dressed without them.")

More Concerned With Present.

Although she is a descendant of Capt. Marcelo de Espinosa, an officer in Onate's army at the conquest of New Mexico in 1598, and is of true Spanish (rather than Mexican) descent, Mrs. Chavez is not interested in discussing her ancestors nor in talking about her illustrious family tree.

She is far more concerned with living relatives. She mentioned with pride her brother, Dr. Aurelio Macedonio Espinosa, professor of Spanish at Stanford University. She talked of her three children—her 9-year-old baby, Maria de la Gloria; her son, Dennis, jr., who is now studying law at Georgetown University; and her daughter, Mrs. Stanley Miller. She also talked of her husband, his success as an attorney in Albuquerque, his political career, and his latest political triumph.

Was Mrs. Chavez actively interested in poltiics?

"Not in a good many years," she said, her dark eyes twinkling as a smile illuminated her face. "And this is why * * *"

It seems that once both she and her husband were elected delegates to a State convention. There, each selected favorite candidates without consulting the other. "Afterward, I discovered that for one office my husband and I had voted for different men and that Mr. Chavez had chosen the better candidate. But (and this is the sad part) my candidate won—by a single vote! I decided then and there that I was through with taking an active part in politics."

Watches From Sidelines.

Since then she has watched political battles from the sidelines, with as keen an interest, however, as any spectator. She has seen her husband win and lose. And because she has come to expect almost anything, she was not one bit bothered about the pointed demonstration of protest from the Senate Progressive bloc when her husband took his seat in the Senate.

"Maybe the main reason I wasn't annoyed was I didn't even notice it," she said. "Senators are always moving about on the floor, until you can't tell when they're just milling about or trying to stage a snub. I don't believe anybody would have recognized the procedure as anything unusual if reporters hadn't been informed ahead of time about it.

"One thing I'm sure of, Senator Cutting himself wouldn't have approved of what was done. He was a gentleman; and while he was our political foe, he wasn't our personal enemy at all."

Mrs. Chavez also feels that "Senators should be big men, above anything so petty as humiliating a new member of Congress. But since they aren't, it's nothing for us to worry about. Fortunately, it's not for them to say whom our Governor should appoint to succeed Senator Cutting."

As she said this, you discovered the fire beneath her calm exterior and sensed a steel beneath her mild manner that would sustain her in any case—whether her husband won additional political plaudits or was subjected to further rebuffs.

Simple Dishes Please Family On Warm Days

Grilled Plate With Scrambled Eggs Will Save Time In the Kitchen.

By Dorothea Duncan.

IT IS THE housewife's turn to be lazy. If you feel like digging a little longer in the garden or playing hookey all afternoon in a department store, go ahead, no one is going to suffer from your negligence, and it will be a lot of fun.

You know exactly how the other members of the family feel when they come home from a hot day at the office or a none-too-exciting day at school. They are tired and wrinkled and their first inclination is toward the shower.

The first to emerge with a clean face may complain of acute hunger pains, and be inclined to grumble if no more than the silver and glassware appear on the table. Wave him off to the living room or a shaded nook on the porch and let him cool his heels and tone down his appetite with a tall glass of ice-cold tomato juice and crisp crackers spread with a bit of nippy cheese.

Simple Dishes Appreciated.

You have, through your own cunning, dispensed with the first course. The tomato juice and crackers have put lagging appetites into a lusty mood. Don't spoil the effect by offering next a series of elaborate dishes. Believe it or not, at this time of the year, the family will appreciate simple dishes. They want plenty of cold things, but if you are clever, you can work at least one hot dish into every meal, and that should be sufficient.

Play up fresh vegetables and fruit, the ones that are just returning in a blaze of glory to the markets. A plate of tender young vegetables, perfectly cooked and artistically arranged will tempt when everything else fails.

Each day during the last week, another summer fruit made its reappearance. Huckleberries, blackberries, cantaloupe and watermelon are among the latest contributions. When you have run through this course, try strawberries again and then fresh pineapple. When the family thinks that you have sprung the last surprise, try Roquefort or Camembert cheese and crackers served with fresh California cherries or red or green grapes.

Try a grilled plate with scrambled eggs or diced eggs tartar some warm evening when you don't want to spend much time in the kitchen. The recipes follow:

Grilled Plate with Scrambled Eggs.

3 tomatoes, peeled
4 eggs, scrambled
6 rounds toast, buttered
8 slices bacon, broiled
6 slices toast, buttered and cut in triangles

Cut tomatoes in half crosswise. Sprinkle with salt and pepper and place in pan under hot broiler until partially cooked. Place on rounds of toast. Pile scrambled eggs on tomatoes and place slice of bacon on top. Serve on platter; garnish with toast triangles. Serve at once. Serves six. Tomatoes and bacon may be pan-broiled, if desired.

Diced Eggs Tartar.

4 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons flour
½ teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons vinegar
2 teaspoons parsley, chopped
¾ cup onion, finely chopped
1 cup hot water, and 1 bouillon cube (chicken flavor)
⅛ teaspoon pepper
¼ teaspoon mustard
6 hard-cooked eggs, diced
½ cup buttered crumbs

Melt butter in a skillet, add onion, and cook until tender. Add flour and stir well. Add water and bouillon cube. Continue cooking, stirring constantly, until thickened. Add seasonings and vinegar and blend. Place diced eggs in greased casserole. Fold parsley into sauce, pour over eggs, and sprinkle with buttered crumbs. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees Fahrenheit) five minutes, or until crumbs are browned. Serves six. A Dutch oven may be used instead of the regular oven for browning the crumbs.

Sir Willmott was the main speaker at the affair, held yesterday at the Mayflower. Mrs. Wiley presided. Mrs. Ickes was among the guests of honor.

Human Right to a Happy Life Is Inseparable From Morality, Journalist Adds in Peace Plea

600 Attend Final Luncheon of Federation's Season; Mrs. Poole Replaces Representative Kahn on Program; Mrs. Wiley Presented President's Pin.

THE GREATEST need in life today is devotion to the principles of social justice, declared Sir Willmott Lewis, journalist, yesterday when he addressed the annual luncheon meeting of the District of Columbia Federation of Women's Clubs.

The affair, held at the Mayflower, was the last social event of the organization's season. Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, whose term as president of the District Federation ends next month, presided over the luncheon, which was attended by approximately 600.

Representative Florence P. Kahn, of California, was scheduled to speak, but sent word that "cataclysmic events of the last few days" prevented her attendance. Her place on the program was taken by Mrs. Grace Morrison Poole, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, whose brief address was in the nature of a farewell. She retires from the presidency within a couple of weeks.

Sir Willmott, correspondent for the London Times, urged the clubwomen to give every ounce of their devotion not only to their own country but to a higher concept of friendship between countries.

Justice, Morality Held Inseparable

In his plea for social justice, he pointed out that justice and morality are inseparable and that an intense interest in the advancement of the two is necessary to bring wars to an end.

Following Sir Willmott's address, Mrs. Lloyd W. Biddle, president-elect of the District Federation, presented the president's pin to Mrs. Wiley, who upon her retirement next month becomes General Federation director.

In outlining the activities in which the District Federation has taken part, Mrs. Wiley made special mention of the recent independent art exhibit sponsored with the aid and sympathy of Mrs. Eugene Meyer and The Washington Post."

Exhibit's Success Cited.

"Last year with our own art chairman, Mrs. Samuel A. Swiggett in charge, we held an exhibition with a few entries," said Mrs. Wiley. "But the magnificent exhibit this year contained 1,700 displays and was visited by 30,000 people. It was so successful that merchants in whose stores the picture were displayed have already asked for it to be repeated next year."

Guests of honor, including Mrs. Cordell Hull and Mrs. Harold Ickes, were introduced by Mrs. Wiley. Also among the honor guests were the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington; Mrs. William Fitch Kelley, president of the League of Republican Women; Miss Laura Berrian, treasurer of the National Woman's party; Mrs. Rudolph S. Allen, president of the Maryland State Federation of Women's Clubs; Judge Mary O'Toole, of the Municipal Court; Mrs. Eugene Meyer, wife of the publisher of The Washington Post; Mrs. Dawson Olmstead, head of the District Branch of the League of American Moptgomery, District Federation Pen Women; Mrs. James Shera music chairman; Miss Martha Strayer, of the News, and Mrs. Sallie V. H. Pickett of the Star.

What TODAY Means

"Gemini."

IF MAY 30 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 10:45 a. m. to 12:45 p. m., from 2:45 to 4:45 p. m. and from 7:45 to 9:45 p. m. The danger periods are from 8:45 to 10:45 a. m., from 4:45 to 6:45 p. m. and from 9:45 to 11:45 p. m.

It might be good judgment not to resort to flattery, so as to gain a point today. Blarney is apt to arouse suspicion as to your sincerity, so be careful how you make use of it. Trifles are likely, to prove the turning pivot on which important decisions may rest, so do not ignore them. Mistaken business policies are likely to be advocated through a lack of understanding the selling angle. The wise businessman will discuss any change in plan of merchandising with his sales force before adopting it. Jealousy, both in business and social life, is likely to be a disturbing factor today, so guard against it.

If a woman and May 30 is your birthday, you are quick mentally, and should be very witty. Your love for teasing should be curbed. You are possibly inclined to have too many irons in the fire, to give anyone of them the right amount of attention. If you will concentrate on one thing at a time, you will be capable of making a success of it. Being of an artistic temperament it is most important you learn the value of money. If you will do this, you may accumulate through your own efforts a considerable sum of currency. Interior decorating, painting, tearoom or gift shop management and journalism are most likely to be the most congenial lines of employment for you to engage in. You should make an excellent wife.

If a man and May 30 is your natal day, you have a marvelous creative mind, which if given free scope and applied to practical ideas possibly will enable you to win a reputation. Engineering, inventing, play writing, journalism, industrial sales, engineering and manufacturing may be among the occupations which it is advisable for you to follow.

Abject Whiners Distasteful to One Who Applauds "Real Man."

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: Lest it should seem to be recorded in your column that the interest of all women is centered in the weakling rather than the independent type of man, I wish to express the pleasure I felt upon reading the letter from "Real Man," on May 23.

* * * *

Regardless of the merits or demerits of "Unemployed," whose letter was printed May 19—and concerning which a good many persons may perhaps be reserving their opinions—the views of "Real Man" were both refreshing and encouraging in a world which sometimes seems to be made up of whining Government clerks, ineffectual sales persons and others who will descend to any state of mental abjectness rather than accept the responsibility of being "masters of their fates, captains of their souls."

UNSENTIMENTAL.

Speaking of Women.

DEAR UNSENTIMENTAL: I think we may take it for granted the race of Americans is extinct, if it ever existed outside mythology, and that every normal woman spontaneously, whole-heartedly and gratefully admires the economically self-sufficient man, providing he is not ostentatiously so. This is a fundamental reaction rising out of woman's immemorial need for economic and social protection while bearing and rearing children.

* * * *

And if the mother instinct in woman is provoked to a demonstration of compassionate and inspirational sympathy at the spectacle of weakness in sons of the race, it may be her concern is more practical than sentimental. Subconsciously she realizes that if she and, through her, the race are to be conserved, she must throw her full support to man, as progenitor and natural protector, in instances where he stumbles, falters or retreats.

* * * *

By bearing in mind the fact that the primary function of this column is to help persons who are without other or better approach to a solution of their problems, one should be able to read its contents without assuming for a moment that here is the whole picture of life. It is, at best, only a fragmentary consideration of life in its most perplexing aspects. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

'Club Program Makers' Manual Is Published

"Helps for Club Program Makers," just issued in a new edition by the American Library Association, is a short cut to many types of program material for the individual or group which may wish to look up subjects ranging from the American theater to vocational education. Over 150 subjects are listed each with citations of study outlines, pamphlets, and magazine articles which put information about the subject immediately at one's disposal.

Thyroid Removal May Aid Ailing Heart

Overactive Gland and Cardiac Ills Related, Dr. Cutter Says.

75 Operations Indicate 50 Per Cent Success, Study Shows.

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

IT HAS long been known that there exists a close relationship between the thyroid and the adrenal glands. The heart as the pumping station for blood is naturally affected by the secretions from both these sources. We are now faced with the suggestion that the removal of the thyroid gland will relieve the heart from considerable labor and therefore permit it to function efficiently even though it is the seat of disease.

A few years ago S. A. Levine made an accidental observation that seemed to him to establish an intimate relationship between a normal or an overactive thyroid gland and a diseased heart. In 1927 a considerable portion of the thyroid gland was removed from a patient because the heart disease from which she suffered was thought to have some relation to excessive secretion of the thyroid. When the gland was examined it was found to be normal. Nevertheless, the patient was relieved of her heart symptoms and remained well for several years.

The remarkable result in this particular case led Levine and others to propose the removal of the major portion of the tyroid gland in certain heart conditions, including angina pectoris. After studying the effects of the procedure on several patients it was found that while there was improvement in heart symptoms for a short time, sooner or later they returned. This led another observer, Blumgart, to suggest that the entire thyroid gland should be removed, and in December of 1932 such an operation was performed on a sufferer from chronic rheumatic heart disease with symptoms of angina pectoris. Following the operation all heart symptoms disappeared and in less than four months the patient was working eight hours each day without the slightest heart embarrassment.

It should be noted that the symptoms for which removal of the thyroid gland was undertaken were in no instance definitely related to the gland itself, but were purely heart symptoms; heart failure or heart pain (angina).

In a recent report Blumgart analyzed the results of complete removal of the thyroid in 75 persons suffering from chronic heart disease. All the patients had been practically incapacitated because of heart symptoms. This in spite of recourse to every known heart remedy. The ages of these patients ranged from 18 to 60 years. Twenty-four have remained well for from 2 to 18 months. In 6 cases the heart symptoms returned, but yielded promptly to the usual heart remedies. Two were not benefited by the operation. Of 32 patients with angina pectoris, 25 presented the symptoms in severe form, and of this group 8 have had no recurrence of heart pain. Five who had been completely incapacitated have had but one subsequent anginal attack. All but four found that they could become more active, and these four have pain only when exercise is indulged in.

It appears, therefore, that removal of the thyroid gland offers better than a 50 per cent relief possibility in intractable heart disease, particularly angina pectoris, and should be considered—at least in those patients in whom other forms of heart therapy have failed to improve the condition.

The question arises: Is the method worth the risk? Are subsequent complications, for example, the development of myxedema (too little thyroid secretion) serious? Those who propose the plan believe that the patient should be maintained at an activity level about 20 per cent under normal. This means that the metabolic rate should be considerably lower than the average. If myxedema develops it can be controlled through the administration of thyroid extract or of thyroxin.

If the method does nothing but relieve the intense paroxysms of angina pectoris, it is worth considering in a few carefully selected cases. Naturally, the whole undertaking must be in the hands of experts, as the operation for total removal of the thyroid gland is a procedure requiring the highest technical skill.

5,000 Cheer as Marcantonio Urges an NRA Amendment; Retailers Rally Behind Codes

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, May 29.—Representative Vito Marcantonio (Democrat), New York, brought the largest labor mass meeting ever held here to its feet roaring today when he shouted for a revised Constitution which would permit such legislation as the national industrial recovery act.

As one of several speakers who addressed the throng of about 5,000 persons jammed in and around the Lyric Theater, Marcantonio, successor in Congress to Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia of New York, advocated a constitutional convention to bring about the revisions.

He urged that "the State of Maryland, through its Legislature, be the first to petition the calling of a constitutional convention, the second in the history of this country, in which we can draw up a Constitution in step with the age in which we live."

Urges Maryland Lead Way.

"It will require but two-thirds of our States to carry out such a procedure," he said. "If Maryland takes the first step, more than two-thirds will follow."

Among other speakers who addressed the assembled laborites were Senator Lewis Schwellenbach (Democrat), Washington, and Joseph P. McCurdy, president of the Maryland and District of Columbia Federations of Labor.

The Senator branded business men a "gang of brigands, racketeers and pirates" and urged his listeners to fight any attempt to break down the New Deal. He said his greatest fear was that the workers will "take it lying down and not fight with their collective power."

Sought Storm Cellars, He Says.

"The same industry that ran to the storm cellars in the dark, dark days of 1933 now sees a clearing of the skies and is yelling that business should be left alone to decide its own affairs," Schwellenbach shouted.

McCurdy struck the keynote of the labor organizations with:

"We are here to let the people know we are not retreating. If anything, we want better conditions—higher wages and a 30-hour week. Our people want living wages and decent conditions of labor, and we want to reduce the hours of labor so the unemployed will have an opportunity for employment."

Portsmouth Authority Asks Retention of Wages, Hours.

Peery Joins Richmond C. of C. in Appeal to Retain Compacts.

By the Associated Press.

The maintenance of present wages and hours of work was urged yesterday by the executive committee of the Richmond Chamber of Commerce while the Portsmouth Retail Code Authority, deploring the United States Supreme Court decision invalidating the national recovery act, unanimously decided to stick to NRA regulations.

Meanwhile representatives of Richmond agencies, fearful of sales warfare among Virginia automobile dealers, met to take stock of the situation. Unless all dealers continue to use the blue book of official prices, a price-cutting war is inevitable, a spokesman said.

He predicted that Negro employes who have been receiving wages up to $22 per week for six or seven hours work daily would suffer pay cuts.

Peery Hopes for Co-operation.

Gov. Peery hoped for voluntary co-operation to "promote fair business practice and fair dealing." Highway Commissioner Henry Shirley said NRA clauses would be dropped from highway contracts, although he did not believe this would have any appreciable effect on wages and hours of work. Dr. John J. Corson, State NRA compliance officer, said he had been instructed from Washington to receive statements from employers who wish to comply with their respective codes.

The Richmond chamber committee's resolution urged members to "bend every possible effort to maintain high ethical standards, present wage levels, hours and working conditions and thus impose no hardship upon employes or competing firms."

Deplores Confusion.

Saying that the court's decision had brought "confusion" to the ranks of business, the resolutions said this uncertainty would continue "until the future of the national industrial recovery act * * * is determined by the Administration and Congress."

Members of the Portsmouth retail code authority asserted that the national recovery act had increased their business to such an extent that the wage increases were not burdensome.

Since the establishment of the Recovery Administration, J. M. Overton, secretary of the Portsmouth Retail Merchants Association and secretary of the chamber of commerce, said 743 employes have been added by members of the local code authority. This authority numbers more than 1,000 members in dry goods, men's furnishings, ladies ready-to-wear, hardware, furniture, variety and department stores.

Claims of Baltimore sea-food packers that a "state of emergency" exists in the crab industry in Maryland because of the collapse of NRA were derided by Richard Armstrong, chairman of the Virginia commission of fisheries, who said the crab scarcity in Chesapeake Bay and elsewhere had nothing to do with NRA.

He said the time for taking sponge crabs in Virginia ends June 14, not June 30, and estimated that by eliminating Sundays and stormy days fishermen would have only nine or ten days in which to take sponge crabs from Virginia waters.

In Roanoke, H. C. Neren, manager of the Viscose plant, reassured rayon workers by saying: "Regardless of the abolition of NRA, the Viscose Corporation of Virginia anticipates the maintenance of present working hours and wages."

At Danville, Anderson Bros., Consolidated, Inc., makers of overalls and other garments, announced the firm would "stay on the reservation" and continue the 36-hour production week.

Representative Hamlin to Speak.

2 Bandits Get $3,000 at Bank In Fork Union

Unmasked Pair, Bearing Machine Gun, Rifle the Vault, Flee in Car.

By the Associated Press.

Fork Union, Va., May 29.—Two unmasked gunmen today robbed Union and escaped with about $3,000 the Fluvanna County Bank at Fork in cash.

The two bandits, with a machine gun and pistol, held up the cashier and assistant cashier, collected cash and currency from the counter, rifled the vault and escaped in a small coupe.

Mrs. Bernice Thomas, the cashier, said she and her assistant, Mrs. Iva White, were the only two persons in the bank building when the men, described as about 30 years old, dashed in the door with the order "Stick 'em up."

"We did," she said, "and one of the men—the one with the big, ugly machine gun—stood at the door.

"The other man came behind the counter and told us to put our hands down, if we wanted to, but to stand still. He took all the cash and currency in the counter drawer and then went into the vault where he got all he could find—the total being about $3,000."

She said the robbers then walked "very calmly" to the door.

The loss was protected by insurance, bank officials said. It was the third robbery in the institution, which was robbed in 1929 and again last October.

Convicted Slayer Faces Life Term

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., May 29.—William V. Binkley, 55, former city councilman, convicted last night of first degree murder without capital punishment, will be sentenced later. The verdict of the jury makes a life sentence mandatory.

Binkley showed no emotion when David O. Pound, jury foreman, read the verdict. The prisoner was convicted of killing David Nichols. Nichols was fatally shot in Binkley's beer tavern the night of March 1.

The defense had sought to show Binkley, who had been drinking, was temporarily insane at the time of the shooting and the court instructed the jury to pass first upon the defendant's sanity at that time and then his guilt if found sane.

Crashes Injure 7 Near Hagerstown

Victims in Hospital After Auto Accidents.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., May 29.—Seven persons were in a local hospital here tonight after two automobile accidents on the National highway west of here, approximately a mile apart.

D. H. Phillips, of Berkeley Springs, W. Va., suffered a broken neck. His car skidded on wet pavement and struck a telephone pole.

The other accident, occurring at approximately the same time, involved the cars of Paul Johnson, Williamsport, and C. E. Cook, Pittsburgh. Johnson is said to have been turning into the Williamsport pike when he collided with the Pittsburgh car. Cook was accompanied by his wife and daughter, and Johnson by his wife and two small children. All six were taken to the hospital for treatment of cuts and bruises. Both cars were badly damaged.

Hurley Flays Reactionary Drive in U. S.

Assails Effort to Replace 'Americanism With Collectivism.'

Former Cabinet Member Address Graduates of Loudoun School.

By the Associated Press.

Ashburn, Va., May 29.—Former Secretary of War Patrick J. Hurley tonight said "demagogues" had capitalized on economic distress in an "attempt to destroy Americanism and replace it with some form of collectivism."

"When an American asserts a desire to remain free," he said, "ballyhoo artists" charge him "with being a reactionary."

"These defamers of America think it is being progressive when they attempt to turn the dial back to midnight and enslave the masses under the autocratic power of a few by calling what they are doing liberalism or progress," Hurley asserted.

Addressing the graduating class of a Loudoun County high school here, he said: "We disagree with every word that these absolutists speak, yet as true Americans it is our duty to defend their right to speak."

Tendency to "Absolutism."

He said the tendency of the American Government today was toward 'absolutism," and that vast power was "nearly always destructive of liberty."

"The words patriotism, mankind, charity, are being used freely by the absolutists who are centralizing power, destroying freedom and adding hundreds of thousands of bureaucrats to the burdens of the taxpayer," Hurley added.

"It should be our purpose to improve, to correct, to strengthen and to perfect our political and economic system by eliminating cruelties and inequalities and by administering swift and even-handed justice to law violators. We should not forget, however, that any attempt to substitute any form of absolutism for Americanism is predicated on the idea that some one man or group of men can govern the American people better than they can govern themselves, or that some man or coterie of men can think better for 130,000,000 free people than they can think for themselves."

Besides those who "defame and condemn our social, political and economic life," he said, there are "those apostles of discontent" who are saying "the door of opportunity has been closed" to youth.

Opportunities Emphasized.

"But your ancestors have given into your keeping the inalienable rights of man as enumerated in your fundamental law," he continued and "they have given to you greater opportunity . . . than has ever been enjoyed by any generation of people at any time or in any place."

Calling the United States a land of multiplied opportunities, Hurley said "there are those who shout at you morning, noon and night that you are under-privileged."

He said people who do such shouting were "false prophets who counsel you to become parasites and belly-achers in a land of plenty."

"Do not let anyone convince you that you should surrender your freedom," or "deprive you of your right to succeed according to your own labors and your own merits," he concluded.

Virginia Myers to Wed Richard N. Chamblin

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Purcellville, Va., May 29.—Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Myers, of Christiansburg, Va., have announced the engagement of their daughter, Virginia Myers, to Richard Newton Chamblin, of Purcellville, Va. The announcement was made at a party given in the home of Mrs. Edward O'Toole, jr., sister of Miss Myers, in Welch, W. Va.

Miss Myers is a teacher in the McDowell County schools of West Virginia. Mr. Chamblin is the son of Mr. and Mrs. S. A. Chamblin, of Purcellville, and has been associated with the Loudoun Light & Power Co., Purcellville, for a number of years.

Blaze in House Nearly Traps Pitkin Family

Wife, Son, Daughter-in-Law of Educator Escape at Centerville, Md.

By the Associated Press.

Centreville, Md., May 29.—Three members of the family of Prof. Walter B. Pitkin, of Columbia University, author of "Life Begins at Forty," barely escaped today as fire swept their farmhouse near here.

Mrs. Walter B. Pitkin, wife of the educator, her son, John, and his wife, fled from the building in their nightclothes as flames spread from a barn to the seven-room dwelling. The blaze, fanned by a strong wind, leveled five buildings with the loss estimated at $5,000.

The Centreville Fire Department was called but the buildings were in ruins when the volunteer firemen arrived.

John Pitkin said nothing was saved except "a suit of clothes, my typewriter, two goats and six pigs." His wife and mother lost all their personal possessions.

They went to the home of R. G. Pitkin, another son, in Centreville. The farm is owned by John McKenny and was leased by John Pitkin. It was part of the Walter B. Pitkin farm development plan under which a number of farms in this section are managed.

Prince William Votes 100-26 for Wheat Cut

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Manassas, Va., May 29.—Prince William wheat growers voted 100 to 26 to continue the wheat adjustment program at the recent poll. Out of 199 present contract signers, whose acreage represents approximately 74 per cent of the wheat of the county, 111 voted on the referendum.

The vote by communities was: Haymarket District, 30 yes, 0 no; Manassas District, 26 yes, 3 no; Brentsville District, 22 yes, 15 no, Occoquan, Coles and Dumfries Districts, 8 yes, 3 no; Catharpin District, 14 yes, 5 no.

Old School May Become Building forCommunity

Luray, Va., May 29 (AP).—The old brick high school building here, which was replaced several years ago by a new $150,000 structure, may be remodeled by FERA labor for use as a community building.

Judge H. W. Bertram, of Harrisonburg, has taken under advisement the proposed transfer of the old building, valued at about $15,000, from the Page County School Board to Page County.

Virginia Ready To Help Artists

State Prepared if Government Will Act.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., May 29.—If the Government will approve a loan of $250,000 under the new Federal works program for the construction of an artists' colony in northern Virginia, the State conservation and development commission is ready to promote the project, Wilbur C. Hall, commission chairman, said today.

The colony would include 100 five-room studio bungalows with a community center. Works of the artists would be sold each year and the revenue used to pay back the loan.

W. Garrett Conant, director of the National Society of American Art, wrote Hall that 100 artists already have indicated they would like to be members of the colony.

Lonaconing to Buy Fire Truck.

Lonaconing, Md., May 29.—At a special meeting of the mayor and council last night, it was unanimously voted to purchase a fire truck at the cost of $7,000 which will be turned over to Goodwill Fire Company, No. 1.

Nice to Lead In Tributes To War Dead

Governor Will Speak in Antietam Battlefield Exercises.

Anchor of Poppies Will Be Sunk in River at Annapolis.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, May 29.—Headed by Gov. Harry Nice and other State and municipal officials, Maryland will honor its dead of all wars on Memorial Day tomorrow.

While there is to be no general State-wide service, each city and county has arranged appropriate exercises. The Governor will speak at Antietam battlefield, in Washington County, scene of one of the most sharply contested battles of the War Between the States.

In those exercises, tribute will be paid to the dead of all wars, including Northern and Southern soldiers.

In Baltimore, members of the American Legion and the Legion Auxiliary have arranged to decorate the grave of every soldier and services will be held at the National Cemetery here. Graves of veterans in private cemeteries also will be decorated.

At Annapolis, an anchor of poppies will be sunk in the Severn River as a tribute to a man who was lost at sea when a troop ship sank during the World War. The anchor, made by Miss Moina Michael, Athens, Ga., fulfills a promise made by Miss Michael to the mother of the Georgian who lost his life. She has made one each Memorial Day since 1918.

Mayor Howard W. Jackson, Baltimore, and J. Hampton Moore, Philadelphia, will be the principal speakers in services at Elkton. An all-day program has been arranged for Chestertown and Frederick. Cumberland, Hagerstown, Salisbury, Cambridge and other cities have planned services.

Tomorrow will be a legal holiday.

Maiden's Kiss Ample Payment For Suitor's Cow, Court Rules

By the Associated Press.

Clintwood, Va., May 29.—Trial Justice Gallie Friend apparently is of the belief that the kiss of a maiden of 17 is payment enough for any moon-eyed cow. Or, at least, that the bargain of a kiss for a heifer is a bargain, indeed.

In a case before him it was testified that George Branham, 55, swapped his automobile for a cow owned by Mrs. Pat Stapleton, of Georges Fork. Later, he met and was smitten with the charms of Mrs. Stapleton's 17-year-old daughter, Jane.

Being a man of action, he offered to exchange the cow for one of Jane's kisses. He got the kiss and soon after, the girl, for his wife.

The honeymoon being over, Branham took the cow to the farm of Charlie Hibbits to be wintered. Later Mrs. Hibbits said she had bought the cow from Branham. But, no, said Mrs. Branham, she had bought that bossie and paid in full. The trial justice upheld her contention.

The Warner Brothers Trick Out Another Musical Item on a Slightly Newer Note

New Romance With Tunes Has Amusing Story

"In Caliente" Has Speed; April "Champions;" Theater Chat.

Reprinted From Yesterday's Last Edition.

By Nelson B. Bell.

The Warner Brothers seem to possess a unique facility in fashioning tuneful and entertaining comedy-romances tricked out with nice melodies and dance evolutions in which seemingly hundreds of beautiful young women participate.

They started the ball rolling with "Forty-second Street"—inaugurating the second incarnation of the musical film, in a manner of speaking—and since have demonstrated an uncanny sense of audience values with "Wonder Bar," "Gold Diggers of 1935" and other productions of like stamp.

Now, in "In Caliente," as was demonstrated yesterday afternoon to four-fifths of the local drama desks, at a private preview in the projection room in the Earle Theater Building, they have come along with a considerable celluloid footage that is essentially musical, yet has a sufficiently connected story to stand up as a straight farcical romance, sans chromatics.

The developments of the colorful tale of a slightly jingled New York editor, who is shanghaied to Agua Caliente by his best friend to sober up and give his magazine a break are as light as thistledown and no more plausible than the "book" of a light musical show need be, but there is throughout the length of the film a gayety, a light-heartedness, a breezy humor and a pungent wit that engage interest and hold attention.

Songs Are Catchy.

Some catchy new musical numbers have been supplied by Mort Dixon and Allie Wrubel, and the De Marcos, as expert a dancing team as there is to be found in America, execute one complicated tango that places them right up there with Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers, or any other dancing duo you may be able to recall as being especially proficient.

Dolores Del Rio, feminine star of the picture, speaking English with far less accent than ever before, proves that she is a singer and danseuse of the first water on her own account, in addition to being an actress whose talents are equal to any ordinary demand.

On this page will be found a likeness of Miss Del Rio in the rubberized silk bathing togs she wears in a considerable length of this gelatin ribbon.

Cast Well Chosen.

Then there are Pat O'Brien, Edward Everett Horton, in one of his best roles—that goes for Pat, too—Winfred Shaw, who sings one of the most tantalizing songs in the score, "The Girl in Red," the number to which the De Marcos do their dance; Phil Regan, who does some agreeable warbling from various balconies, patios and whatnot; Glenda Farrell, the feminine threat; Leo Carillo, congenially cast, and all those dancing girls that Busby Berkeley has kept out of bathing pools this time and permitted to be graceful, but not geometrical in the formation of various designs that would be just a bit out of keeping on a ballroom floor. Mr. Berkeley here proves that he can be effective without being fantastic.

Altogether, I should say that "In Caliente" is almost perfect spring holiday entertainment, light, vivacious, fast-moving, tuneful and amusing.

But don't expect another "One Night of Love" or "Naughty Marietta." This one is just a musical comedy, frivolous and flashy, but a good one of its kind.

So now you know.

Speaking of musical films, it was to be expected that "The Unfinished Symphony" would not be permitted to depart the Belasco screen at the end of a single week. True to every thoughtful expectation, this beautifully done musical romance of the life of Franz Schubert is to be continued a second week on Lafayette Square—a tribute to its excellence which it richly deserves. The romantic tale of a great composer's disappointed love is woven into a tapestry of Schubert's best-beloved melodies. It is, primarily, the story of the B Minor Symphony, handsomely begun, but never completed. Whether the reasons for the incomplete state of this great work set forth in the film are, or are not, authentic, they serve admirably to comprise a "libretto" for one of the most engaging musical films that have come along this season. Hans Jaray plays the role of Schubert with boyish enthusiasm and plaintiveness and Marta Eggerth is the heroine with a beautiful soprano voice notable for the purest and most limpid notes heard from the screen in many a day. One hears that Fraulein Eggerth is Hollywood-bound, which is a consummation devoutly to be wished.

The April "Champs."

Seven pictures qualified as the "box-office champions for April" according to the monthly recapitulation of bona-fide box-office statements from the key cities of the United States compiled by the Motion Picture Herald, foremost of the industry's trade journals.

As is usually the case, first place was uncontested. Three films, however, were in a deadlock for second place. Third place was uncontested and two pictures were tied for fourth.

The undisputed leader was "Roberta," RKO-Radio's picturization of the Jerome Kern musical, starring Irene Dunne, with Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers. The three releases in the stalemate for the place spot were "Life Begins at 40," starring Will Rogers; "Naughty Marietta," costarring Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy, and "Mississippi," with Bing Crosby, W. C. Fields and Joan Bennett. "Gold Diggers of 1935" dropped into the third notch without competition. The two tied for fourth were "Reckless," with Jean Harlow, William Powell and Franchot Tone, and "The Bride of Frankenstein," starring Boris Karloff, with Colin Clive and Elsa Lanchester.

Surprises in List.

There are certain surprises in this list, both as to its inclusions and the order in which actual patronage at the box-office has rated them.

It might be looked upon as a source of wonder that "Roberta" should outrank "Naughty Marietta," for example, and some might feel a bit of chagrin that "The Bride of Frankenstein" should get up there at all.

However, there they are on the basis of preference of the mass public the country over.

The only producing company to get two releases into the list of April "champions" was Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, with "Naughty Marietta" and "Reckless." The remainder score one each for RKO-Radio, Fox, Paramount, First National and Universal.

On last Sunday, Dr. E. V. Wilcox, president of the Shakespeare Society of Washington, and Mrs. Wilcox were hosts in their home, 33 W. Irving street, Chevy Chase, Md., to the cast and director, Arthur Rhodes, of Shakespeare's play of "King Henry VIII," recently presented in the auditorium of Roosevelt High School. On Friday night of this week, May 31, at 8 o'clock, a business meeting of the Shakespeare Society will be held in the Thompson School, Twelfth and L streets northwest. The membership is urgently solicited to be present.

Gentlemen Prefer Them.

On the assumption, no doubt, that gentlemen still prefer them, the loewcal Loew interests have designated next week, beginning Friday, as "Blonde week on F street." This is occasioned in part also by the fact that on the screen at Loew's Fox the pictured star will be the extremely blonde Ann Harding in "The Flame Within," in which Maureen O'Sullivan likewise goes blonde for the first time; at the Palace the fair-haired Mae West will continue to incinerate audiences in "Goin' to Town," and down at the Columbia the biggest blonde of them all will renew her downtown popularity in "Our Little Girl." This most prodigious artiste of any of them would be tiny Miss Shirley Temple.

As a valuable bit of information for those who like to plan their holiday pastiming in advance, it may be set down that Memorial Day attractions in the Warner Brothers' theaters in downtown and residential Washington will be as follows: Earle, "In Caliente," and the Landt Trio and White headlining the stage bill; Metropolitan, James Cagney in "G Men;" Ambassador, Ginger Rogers and William Powell, in "Star of Midnight;" Apollo, George White's "Scandals of 1935"; Avalon, Wallace Beery in "West Point of the Air;" Avenue Grand, "Star of Midnight;" Central, Warren William and Allen Jenkins in "The Case of the Curious Bride;" Colony, Wallace Beery in "West Point of the Air;" Home, Richard Barthelmess in "Four Hours to Kill;" Savoy, Patricia Ellis in "Hold 'Em Yale;" Tivoli, Franchot Tone in "One New York Night," and York, "The Case of the Curious Bride." Now go ahead and do your holidaying.

Miss Marsh, in Person.

So Joan Marsh finally is coming to Washington for a week of personal appearances.

That is to say, she is scheduled to headline the stage bill at Loew's Fox for the week beginning on Friday. Miss Marsh, it will be recalled, was billed to support Conrad Nagel in the sketch he presented on the stage of Loew's Palace Theater during a week of personal appearance in the Capital, but at the last moment was held on the lot by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and a substitute sent down to act as foil for Mr. Nagel's genial pretending. Now, however, it looks as if Miss Marsh really would get here.

Her father, who was a cameraman, was turning the crank on a silent picture when the director discovered that the script called for a baby. Mr. Marsh went home and returned with Joan under his arm. That was her introduction to the movies.

Was Child Actress.

She continued to play child roles until she was 8, when her mother sent her to a private school in Hollywood, where she learned dancing, piano, riding, swimming and acquired many other accomplishments that have stood her in good stead in meeting the exorbitant demands of picture making.

One of her recent important assignments was with W. C. Fields in "You're Telling Me."

Miss Marsh's appearance on the Fox stage not only marks her first personal appearance in Washington, but one of her very few appearances in person anywhere in the United States.

There are three young blondes in Hollywood who frequently are confused in the public mind. They are Joan Marsh, Mary Carlisle and Toby Wing.

Joan Marsh is Joan Marsh, as you will perceive come Friday!

That amiable overlord of Loew's Cleveland district, Old Col. Harry Long, formerly manager of Loew's Eastern division, in which post he was succeeded by that eminent Georgian, Carter Barron, is expected in the Capital on Sunday for a week's spring vacation with his parents, who are residents of this city. Col. Long will find a warm welcome awaiting him from many former business associates and old friends in allied trades—like the newspaper business, for instance.

Double Feature Note.

Our idea of a perfect double feature bill would be to book "I Am a Fugitive from a Chain Letter" with "Mister, Can You Spare a Dime?"

Within three days, make five copies of this, eliminating the top name and putting yours at the bottom, and see what you get.

Community Center

THREE SHORT PLAYS. The Community Center Department presents the Washington Community Players, Bess Davis Schreiner, director, in three one-act plays. At Roosevelt High School. Reviewed Tuesday evening by W. A. Whitney.

THE PROGRAM.

1. "A Sunny Morning," by Serafin and Joaquin Alvarez Quintero, directed by Arthur Rhodes.

2. "The Gods of the Mountains," by Lord Dunsany, directed by Howard Whitfield and Esther Galbraith.

3. "Helena's Husband," by Phillip Moeller, staged by Paul Bradbury Walter.

The Community Center Department last evening closed its indoor series of programs, presenting the Washington Community Players in an almost inspired choice of three one-act plays. Comprising works strictly of characterization, of philosophic pageantry and of satirical comedy, the program was one of the most satisfying to watch and most expertly acted ever staged by the players.

As opener, the Quinteros' reflective drama of Spanish life, "A Sunny Morning," was presented, with Dorothy Lawrence and Richard Midgley, an aged dona and don who finally realize that they had years ago been lovers. With nicely turned lines, punctuated with clever asides, these two players held their audience in tense interest through some 30 minutes of actionless dialogue. Edythe Lazaroff Goldman and Theodore Tiller 2d had minor roles as servants. Arthur Rhodes directed.

Dunsany Play Scores.

The piece de resistance was "The Gods of the Mountains," Lord Dunsany's three-scene fantasy of seven beggers who impersonate the seven jade gods of the mountains. Robert Duke, George E. Wilcox, Thomas Cahill, James M. Rawls, A. L. Diket and H. Stanley Protheroe comprised the group of spurious gods presided over by John Sikken, in one of his most effectively played roles.

Phillip Moeller's satirical comedy, "Helena's Husband," an hilarious burlesque of the elopement of Helena, queen of Sparta, and Paris, prince of Troy, was the last play. In these principal roles were Adele Whiteside and Paul Bradbury Walter, with Jesse Edmund Veitch depicting the plump, proud title role, Kent Dyer the king's librarian, and Jean Smith the queen's maid-servant.

"The Detour"

"THE DETOUR." The Mount Pleasant Players present the drama in three acts by Owen Davis, directed by Dr. Louis W. Currier. In Fishburn Hall May 28.

THE CAST.

Stephen Hardy.....Harry A. Wescott
Tom Lane.....Clarence Moore
Dana Lamont.....Ralph L. Paddock
Dora Lamont..Carolyn Sebastian Kilgore
Ben Glenny.....Louis W. Currier
Weinstein.....Frederick V. Rand
Jake.....Marvin Beers

Owen Davis' three-act drama of very human and ambitious people dwelling a bit off life's high road, "The Detour," was presented last evening by the Mount Pleasant Players in Fishburn Hall as the final production of the season.

Helena Cook, as the mother; Virginia Rand, as the striving daughter; Harry A. Wescott, as the father, and Clarence Moore, as a neighbor, bore the brunt of the drama, with Ralph L. Paddock, Carolyn Sebastian Kilgore, Louis W. Currier, Frederick V. Rand and Marvin Beers contributing the supporting delineations.

Dr. Currier directed the players.

Dance concert in Wardman Park Theater by Evelyn Davis, assisted by Mary Happer, Margaret Kincannon, Anne Noorda, Elizabeth Jenkins, Jenny Turnbull, Conna Shaw, Anita Dunn and Louise Morse. Program of 17 dances to music by Franck, Chopin, Debussy, Ravel, Dohnanyi, Medtner, Tansman and John Alden Finckel. Pianist: Alice Finckel.

Evelyn Davis and her well-trained group exemplify the rebellion of the modern artistic dance against the formalism of the classic ballet. Eschewing pirouettes, fouettees, and dancing sur les pointes, they employ the body as a rhythmic instrument. In their eclectic procedure one sees traces of the techniques of Mary Wigman, Ruth St. Denis, Harald Kreutzberg and other contemporary exponents of plastic musculature.

In such a group one would expect to find a preference for composed dances and a tendency to avoid the "interpretation" of compositions not designed for the dance. The Evelyn Davis dancers are fortunate in having the collaboration of John Alden Finckel, who wrote expressly for them seven of the dances on this program. The results of this working out of themes and rhythms between musician and dancer were eminently satisfactory, particularly in the "Threnody" and the "Dance of Two Themes."

The disadvantages of the interpretative method were evident in the two Chopin pieces, in each of which the tempo of the music far exceeded any possible speed of bodily movement. When the dance was a stylized pantomime, as in the marked Japanese legend to music by Ravel, or the slow patterns of the Franck prelude, one was not conscious of this conflict between the music and the visualization. The inevitable conclusion to be drawn from the comparison is that the composed dance is the best solution of an intricate problem.

Watching Pictures Made.

Hollywood, May 29.

AN ORCHESTRA is on the set of "The Big Broadcast," but they are to be heard, not seen. The camera is strictly for Lyda Roberti, Jack Oakie and a few chorines. The orchestra plays while Miss Roberti sings, "Double Trouble," but their recording is for the microphone only. They are the musicians. A photographic orchestra will have its picture taken later. In most musicals there are two orchestras; the one which looks good, and you see on the screen going through the motions of playing. The other is the orchestra which may not look so good, but can dish out the harmony.

The genine orchestra is now playing. It is a large band, and every member receives $10 an hour while they are recording.

Roberti has been singing the song since 2 o'clock in the afternoon, and it is now near 6 o'clock in the evening. Oakie, standing next to her, has been mugging for the four hours.

• • • •

Oakie will try to convince you that it is more tiring to try to mug for four hours than it is to sing for that length of time. It isn't that Roberti doesn't know the song, or that Oakie doesn't know his mugging; yet for practically every take something goes wrong.

A member of the orchestra blows a sour note, or the sound didn't register perfectly, or Director Taurog wasn't satisfied. It goes on for hours at $10 an hour for over thirty musicians. No orchestra has ever played a song perfectly the first time at this price scale. Late in the afternoon, Oakie passes the orchestra and asks the trombone player what time it is. The trombone player answers: "It is exactly eighty-three dollars and fifty cents."

• • • •

OF COURSE, I went to the set of "The Broadway Melody" to continue my course in how to be a columnist by watching Columnist Jack Benny. Columnist Benny sat in a large, comfortable camp chair, raring to go on. But he had to wait for Eleanor Powell to finish playing a brief scene with Una Merkle before Director Roy Del Ruth would be ready for him. Miss Powell merely had a small speech, about 21 lines, to say and then Columnist Benny would give me my lesson.

"Whatya know?" asked Columnist Benny. "Know any romances or gags?" "Don't know a thing," answered Benny. Don'tya even carry a pencil and a sheet of paper carefully divided into three sections to make notes?" "Nope," answered Columnist Benny. "All I carry is a nice big cigar." I then realized that we columnists have been playing our role all wrong; no wonder we'd never be selected to play the role of a columnist. We're not the type.

• • • •

I was more anxious than ever to take the lesson from Columnist Benny. I waited and waited and waited. Eleanor Powell was still trying to recite those 21 lines perfectly for Director Del Ruth. I left at the end of the day, believing that by the time Columnist Benny got around to giving the next lesson, columnists might be out of fashion.

Later, I learned that two days after I left the set, Eleanor Powell finally said those 21 lines satisfactorily for Director Del Ruth. Three days to deliver this short speech. Three days—that's a long run for a play in the theater. Oh, yes, Eleanor Powell is playing the role of the country girl who gets in a Broadway musical and is an overnight sensation.

GLENDA FARRELL, Joan Blondell, Hugh Herbert and Anita Kerry are playing a sequence of "We're in the Money." Farrell, Blondell and Herbert are three names of the Warner Stock Company you know. Kerry is a newcomer, making her screen debut, but from what I saw of her, I believe you'll get to know her.

Kerry is playing a hard-boiled dame, and she's in with fast company, for Blondell and Farrell are the two best hard-boiled, fast-talking dolls in flickers. They know all the tricks. Kerry was holding her own with them. She didn't appear to be nervous. After the sequence was filmed I spoke to her, and I noticed that she had been holding a handkerchief, clenched in her fist. It was soaking wet. Then Glenda Farrell said: "That Kerry is going to be all right. She's made me and Blondell really go to work."

This is the first flicker, by the way, in several years in which Joan Blondell has appeared, and the cameraman isn't her husband, George Barnes.

• • • •

Onto the set to watch movies being made come Princess Catharine of Greece and her entourage. Presently the Princess fumbles about in her royal purse for a cigarette. She hasn't one and neither has any one in her entourage. The Princess looks about to grub a ciggie. The hairdresser present on the set, Ruth Pursley, offers the Princess cigarettes and matches. The Princess lights her cigarette and puts the borrowed pack into her royal purse.

Now, there's nothing mentioned by Emily Post telling a hairdresser how to ask a princess to return her ciggies. "And," adds Miss Pursley, "I thought the Princess was on a good-will tour."

Nats Crushed by Yank Homers in Fray Curtailed by Rain

This Morning...

With Shirley Povich

WHAT manner of man is this Buck Newsom, who is currently commanding the headlines?

Methinks he is no jabbering lack-wit, nor yet a supreme egoist who is as great a pitcher as he'd have you believe. I think he's a smart guy, a fair-to-middlin' pitcher, a consummate showman who knows how the money can be made in the big leagues.

POVICH.

There's no doubt that he has patterned himself after Dizzy Dean. He has too many of Dean's mannerisms, is too obviously solicitous of sports writers and write-ups to permit different conclusions. In St. Louis, with the Browns, it was easy for him to see how the money was rolling in for Dean. He was a pitcher himself, and something of a clown, too. He'd be the American League's Dizzy Dean.

And he is. He's a card. Once he cast himself into the role, he played it to the hilt. He gives impossible interviews; he cares for the feelings of none. He's big enough to protect himself and he's a pretty good pitcher. A master at alibying, he is never forced to eat his words. When he wins, the other club is a bunch of semipros. When he loses, the other club was lucky. You can't beat him. You can't even tie him.

And he's going to make the dough. He isn't making it yet; as a matter of fact, there are a dozen Nats better paid than Newsom, but they won't be. If he has even fair pitching success, he'll make as much money by indorsements and honorariums as he does in salaries. He has already established himself as a drawing card here, and he's smart enough to make Clark Griffith come across with the oughday.

IT seems we have been wasting our sympathy on Rogers Hornsby and his eighth-place St. Louis Browns. Right now, the guy can show more financial profit for a last-place ball club than any other team in the league can boast. The Browns are $94,500 ahead of the season at this writing, and, despite all of Hornsby's wholesale auctioning of talent, the fellow has a better ball club than he started with. Also don't forget the $94,500.

The fellow's some kind of a financier, all right. Whereas half of the ball clubs in the league lost money last year, Hornsby's Browns operated in the black. They finished $28,000 ahead of the season—in the black for the first time since 1923. During the last ten years of the late Phil Ball's operation of the ball club the team averaged annual losses running from 100 grand to $140,000.

During the past eight months, Hornsby, paradoxically, has built up a ball club by selling players. The fellows he obtained in trade in addition to cash have made the Browns a club to be reckoned with. The only ball player he bought outright was Russ Van Atta and he paid the Yankees only $4,000, the waiver price, for him.

Hornsby's intake is calculated thusly: Twenty thousand dollars from Washington for Irving Hadley; $6,000 from the White Sox for Luke Sewell, whom he obtained from the Nats in the Hadley deal; $7,500 from Cleveland for Outfielder Bruce Campbell; $25,000 from the Red Sox in the Melillo deal, and $40,000 from the Nats in the Newsom trade.

YES, that was the price the Nats paid for Newsom—$40,000, not $50,000. And therein lies a story. After Connie Mack, of the A's, had refused to pay more than $20,000 for the clowning pitcher, Hornsby, knowing that Griffith was interested, broached the subject of a deal for Newsom two weeks ago. Griffith nibbled readily, what with the Nats in desperate need of a pitcher.

Fifty thousand was what Hornsby asked, casually. Griffith countered with an offer of $35,000. Hornsby communicated by long-distance telephone with Louis Von Weise, president of the St. Louis Club, and advised him of Griff's $35,000 offer. Grab it, Von Weise advised Hornsby.

So Hornsby, no cluck, told Griffith that $40,000 was Von Weise's rock-bottom figure. Griffith accepted, and thus Hornsby obtained five grand beyond the expectations of his club owner.

Out of the remnants of his deals, Hornsby has gathered unto himself a fair ball club. Johnny Burnett, whom Cleveland included in the Campbell deal, is making him a pretty good second baseman. Julius Solters, whom the Red Sox included in the Melillo deal, brings sadly needed batting punch to his outfield. When he traded Pitcher George Blaeholder to the A's for Pitcher Merrit Cain and Outfielder Coleman he got two ball players each of whom was of more value than Blaeholder. The Yanks want to buy Outfielder Sammy West from him, and he's asking $30,000, plus Outfielders Hoag and Walker. He may get 'em, plus the $30,000. He's smart.

Gallico Tumbles Off His Limb, Admits His Error About Ross

By Paul Gallico.

EN ROUTE to Indianapolis, May 29.—Well, your devoted commentator is officially a dope again and rather sensitively admits it. The only thing that worries me is will I ever learn? By this time I ought to know that fighters can not change their styles—ever. A punch is not developed in one year, but five or six. Customers who read my prebattle description of the Ross-McLarnin fight certainly didn't see anything remotely resembling it at the Polo Grounds last night. Ross has not yet learned the knack of striking a knockout blow. The ice-box punch seems to be a knack and an art all of its own. Some have it and some haven't. Every time Billy Petrolle tagged McLarnin in that famous first fight he spilled him. Every time Ross nailed McLarnin in their third and most recent fight nothing happened.

Ross hasn't the excuse that he wasn't able to hit McLarnin, because he smashed him as cleanly and as powerfully on the chin as it lay within his power and McLarnin stood up under it without even blinking. Nor do I blame Ross. The boy was self-deluded. He thought he could do it or he would never have made the pre-fight statement that he expected to win by a knock-out. I think he and his directing staff, really dreamed dreams of stretching McLarnin on the canvas and ending the feud once and for all, and decisively it must have been a terrible disappointment to Ross when not alone it didn't work but he had to fight the fight of his life even to win.

No, I have never seen a target more fairly hit, nor with less effect. I was wrong about McLarnin, too. He was a dangerous man last night. He hit hard, he hit often.

Braddock Won't Change.

But at that the latest Ross-McLarnin fight comes as a sort of relief. If I had looked upon it with less imagination and more common sense I would have seen in advance what was so plain to the eye the night of the fight—that the Ross-McLarnin fights will always be the same as long as Jimmy can stand on two legs and feint at Barney. Thus, I am emboldened now to believe that when the bell rings for the heavyweight championship fight next June 13 there will be no new and different Jimmy Braddock in the ring against Max Baer, no speedy heavyweight with a lightning punch, but just the same old, slow, ponderous treacle-witted longshore boy who really has no business in the ame ring with Baer except, possibly, as a sparring partner.

And, too, I am calmer now in the notion that likewise will there be no Carnera when he squares off against Joe Louis, but instead, the same old, game, puzzled, frightened, bewildered fellow who will throw out his arms and bare his breast, belly and chin every time anyone feints at him.

Ruth Is Honored As Braves Nip Phils

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, May 29.—The Braves presented Babe Ruth with a victory for one of the "Babe Ruth days" he has been having around the National League, slamming out an 8-to-6 decision over the Phillies today. The Babe, however, had to be content with a floral offering, two bases on balls, one run and no hits.

Ruffing, Gehrig Hit for Circuit; Downpour Robs Powell.

By Shirley L. Povich.

IT RAINED base hits and raindrops at Griffith Stadium yesterday. The hits—off Yankee bats—beat the Nats, 7 to 4, and the raindrops saved them from further punishment.

It could have been worse. Three runs scored by the Yankees in the seventh which boosted their margin to 10-4, were washed off the record when Hizzoner Bill McGowan, umpire in chief, who was getting very wet in the slanting rain, called off hostilities.

The final score thus reverted to the sixth inning and the batting average of Jake Powell was among the rain's victims. Powell had slammed a terrific home run into the center field bleachers with one out in the seventh when McGowan and his fellow umps fled from the scene with the ruling that the game was over.

Speaking of home runs, that's how the Yankees won the ball game. Red Ruffing, a hitting pitcher if there ever were one, smashed a vicious drive into the left center field bleachers with a man on base in the second inning, and Lou Gehrig emerged from his batting slump long enough to bounce a homer into the left field stands two innings later, also at a time when a fellow was on base.

Burke's Sixth Loss.

The guilty party to all these proceedings was Bobby Burke, who was attempting a comeback on the mound for the Nats after five straight defeats. He met up with his sixth yesterday. The Yanks took advantage of his presence to score in each of the four innings he pitched. While all this was going on, Ruffing was frustrating the Nats with great regularity. Washington, too, had compiled nine hits during the six innings, but when hits were synonymous with runs, they were rarely forthcoming.

Back into undisputed possession of sixth place went the Nats as a result of their defeat, but of more serious import to Manager Bucky Harris is the injury of Catcher Cliff Bolton, who suffered a split finger on his throwing hand and will not return to action for at least four days.

Bolton was hurt by one of Burke's pitches in the fourth inning, despite the fact that Chapman did not offer at the ball. The accident reopened an old wound, but beyond the pain it is not serious.

Yanks Get 3-0 Lead.

The Yanks didn't tarry with Burke. Jess Hill opened the game with a double and scored on Lazzeri's single and when Burke pitched his home-run ball to Ruffing following Hoag's walk in the second, the Yanks had a 3-0 lead. It was 4-0 in the third when Chapman singled, stole second as Bluege dropped the ball, and scored on Gehrig's single.

The Nats wasted Myer's double with two out in the first and Bolton's triple with two out in the second, but with two out in the third they got a run back on consecutive singles by Myer, Stone and Travis.

The Yanks bounced back with three or more runs in the fourth, when Hill opened the inning with his second double. The Yanks were trading only in extra-base hits in that frame. Chapman doubled to center and Gehrig lofted a home run into the left-field stands.

Their supreme bid was made by the Nats in the sixth, which netted them three runs. The bases were full on singles by Powell and

McLarnin Due To Quit Ring Is Rumor

Foster's Feud With Jacobs and Commission Still Rages.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 29.—As Broadway reverberated from his latest sensational duel with Barney Ross, the belief grew tonight that Jimmy McLarnin, toppled from the world welterweight throne, has fought his last fight.

This, with the promise of a new feud between Pop Foster, McLarnin's manager, and Mike Jacobs, promoter for the Twentieth Century Sporting Club, and the State Athletic Commission, formed a striking aftermath to the furiously fought 15-round struggle which left 31,000 fans at the Polo Grounds sharply divided as to the outcome.

Didn't Want Dempsey.

Foster, still breathing fire and brimstone, spent most of today attacking the commission for naming Jack Dempsey to referee the bout, claiming the old champion had disqualified himself by visiting Ross' camp and then picking the Chicagoan to won.

Foster also hinted Promoter Jacobs knew all the time that Dempsey was to referee. Jacobs countered by saying he might ask the boxing commission to invite Pop to prove his remarks.

"He rang me up this morning, called me all the names in the book and a few I'd never heard of," said Jacobs, "I'd be the world's worst promoter if I knew Dempsey was going to referee and didn't smash it in all the papers for publicity purposes.

Jack Draws $200.

"The trouble is Pop just can't take it. Certainly he's old enough to know the boxing commission alone names the referee and it never announces its pick until a few minutes before the fight. I am paying Dempsey exactly $200—the commission's regular fee for working in a championship fight. If I had hired him he'd never have let me off for a cent less than $1,200. Where is Pop's kick? We've paid him about $128,000 in the last year for three fights."

While the roars of the malcontnest last night left no doubt that the unanimous verdict of Dempsey and the two judges was far from popular with all the fans, the boxing experts who saw the struggle from ringside vantage points, voted 3 to 1 in favor of Ross.

Out of 20 polled, 15 picked Ross and 5 favored McLarnin.

Dempsey declined to be drawn into the controversy, except to make the terse comment that "Ross handed the hardest blows and took the most rounds."

Walker Pitches Cards To Win Over Cincinnati

St. Louis, May 29 (AP).—Bill Walker won his fifth victory of the season today as the world champion Cardinals defeated the Cincinnati Reds, 6 to 3, in their series opener here. Alex Kampouris, Cincinnati second baseman, knocked a home run in the fourth inning.

Johnson's Fate as Pilot In Hands of Landis, Says Bradley, Tribe's Owner

By the Associated Press.

CLEVELAND, May 29.—Alva Bradley, president of the Cleveland Baseball Club, said today he was "not trying to dodge any issue" by referring the controversy between Manager Walter Johnson and Infielder Willie Kamm to Judge Kenesaw M. Landis, commissioner of baseball.

"I believe," said Bradley, "that when a manager is involved on the one side, a man who has had the whole-hearted backing of his employers, and a star player like Kamm, who is an idol of the fan flock, one the other side, the highest court in baseball should decide who is in the right."

Asked what he would do if Judge Landis decided Kamm is in the right, the Indians' owner said "there is only one thing I could do and that would be to dismiss Johnson and hire a new manager."

Chicago, May 29.—Walter Johnson didn't wince a bit when he gazed straight into the eyes of his interviewers and, in an unfaltering voice, said:

"No, I haven't resigned, but they can fire me if they will. Yet, I'd do exactly the same things over again a thousand times because, deep in my heart, I know I'm right. I have no regrets."

The "Big Train," whose future as manager of the Cleveland Indians hung in the balance tonight as another storm swirled about him because of his action in firing Glenn Myatt and Infielder Willie Kamm "for the best interests of the team," seemed perfectly relaxed and confident, but ready for the worst.

Has Praise for Bradley.

He said he hadn't been advised to appear before Commissioner Kenesaw Mountain Landis Friday when Kamm will lay his case before the stern dictator of baseball. Neither had he been informed, he said, that President Alva Bradley of the Cleveland Club had announced that he would "Fire Johnson" if Landis, after hearing the case, decided that Johnson was wrong in ousting his infielder.

"Mr. Bradley can fire me in such event, and I'll still say he is one of the very finest men I have known," Johnson said. "He has stood by me and understood me. No man ever had a finer boss. I have done my best, would do the same things over again a thousand times, and leave Cleveland with a light heart."

Commissioner Landis, confined to his hotel suite as a result of a bad cold, refused to discuss the case tonight, but those who know him figure he will give Johnson every possible break in Friday's hearing which has been demanded by Kamm. At Cleveland, Kamm said:

Confident of Winning.

"I know I am right or I wouldn't have asked for a hearing before Commissioner Landis. I am confident Johnson can't find any player to support charges against me."

In sending Kamm home, Johnson charged that his infielder "was affecting the play of the young players with his suggestions and advice."

"Kamm doesn't have to worry about any players appearing against him," Johnson said. "Although I could get many of my boys to support my charges, I intend to see this thing through alone; I'll welcome a talk with the judge. When I tell him my story, I'm pretty sure he will side with me.

Raps Newspapers.

"Everyone knows that since I took over the managership of the Cleveland club almost two years ago, I have been getting a merry ride from a couple of Cleveland newspapers, notably one. Why, I do not know. I have been fair to newspapermen, but some of them just didn't like me and my methods

Cavalcade Due To Meet Test In Suburban

Belmont Feature Today to See Discovery Face His Old Rival.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 29.—Mrs. Dodge Sloane's Cavalcade, 3-year-old champion of 1934, renews his equine feud with Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt's Discovery in the forty-ninth running of the Suburban Handicap at Belmont Park tomorrow.

Five other thoroughbreds, including Mrs. Silas B. Mason's Head Play, C. H. Knebelkamp's King Saxon, undefeated this year; Mrs. John Hay Whitney's Singing Wood, Mrs. D. How's Only One, and Vanderbilt's Identify, were named today for the mile-and-a-quarter test, but the main interest will be in Discovery's attempt to avenge the beatings he took from Cavalcade last year.

Discovery would have been the 1934 3-year-old champion, in all likelihood, had there been no Cavalcade. Mrs. Sloane's great colt won rich fixture after rich fixture last season with Discovery consistently thundering home in second place.

Despite his defeat by Head Play in the Ben Brush Mile a week ago, Cavalcade ruled an 8-to-5 favorite tonight to make his second start as a 4-year-old a winning one. The Vanderbilt entry of Discovery and Identify was held at 9 to 5; King Saxon at 5 to 1 and Head Play, 7 to 1.

Although unbeaten so far and the current sensation of the handicap division, King Saxon, it was figured, would not like the distance. At a mile or less, the Knebelkamp star has been invincible.

Huge Throng Awaits Auto Classic

33 Drivers Trying for $100,000 in Prizes; Gas Limited.

By the Associated Press.

INDIANAPOLIS, May 29.—The multitude massed tonight for the annual speed spectacle in the Indianapolis Motor Speedway, a modern counterpart of Rome's Circus Maximus.

Thrill-seekers came in throngs for the 500-mile automobile race which, unless rain prevents, will start at 10 a. m. (Central standard time) tomorrow in the huge hippodrome that holds 150,000 spectators.

By airplane, by train and by motor they came to watch 33 drivers, goggled and helmeted, dare death in a dash for fame and prize money totaling $100,000. Three men—two drivers and a mechanic—died in preparation for the event, bringing the death toll of the 26-year-old course to a total of 30.

Speedway officials reported the greatest advance sale in the history of the race. Threatening weather failed to stop a last-minute rush for what seats and parking spaces remained.

The forecast was for cloudy and cool weather, ideal conditions for establishing a new record. The present mark is 104.863 miles per hour, made last year by "Wild Bill" Cummings, of Indianapolis. Cummings will try again tomorrow for another victory.

Meyer Is Back.

Louis Meyer, the California comet from Huntington Park, with two victories here included in his long racing career, is another contender. He hopes to run his victory string to three. He won in 1928 and 1933. Fred Frame, of Los Angeles, another former winner, is also in the field.

From several tyros comes a challenge to the veterans. Among the youngsters is the daredevil Rex Mays, of Los Angeles, who set a new 25-mile record when he won the pole position in the classic by averaging 120.736 miles per hour in his qualification run. The field comprises a number of other youngsters and several veterans whose names are familiar to Speedway railbirds.

For three consecutive years the speed average has gone up. Tomorrow's starting field is the fastest in history and with better motors, better tires, and drivers as daring as any who ever tooled a mount around the 2½-mile brick course another new record may be set.

Gasoline Restricted.

The race must be run on no more than 42½ gallons of gasoline and 6½ gallons of oil. Gasoline tanks hold only 15 gallons, necessitating three stops for fuel.

Nine of the speedsters are partstock. Twenty-three entries are powered by 4-cylinder motors and ten by 8-cylinder plants. There are

By Walter Haight.

CHARLES TOWN, W. Va., May 29.—It was only fitting that a horse named Jilted should win the feature race at a track so devoid of cash customers as was this turf plant this afternoon.

Jilted, which derived its name aptly from Papa Snob II and Mama Rejected, was the chief upset of the day at a $53.80 mutuel. The 6-year-old mare, owned by W. Simpson, jr., had only a mild workout in the race and finished with much daylight to spare ahead of Tristrap and Flower Time in a limited field of eight.

While it might be appropriate to say that Charles Town's 32-day session opened to a scant crowd, a skimpy crowd or meager crowd, I'm going to place the attendance at 1,500 and give the track the benefit of the doubt. Those who did appear saw a string of mutuel prices that shocked the eye despite the fact that several favorites did their respective stuff.

Double Pays $115.20.

Although only $768 was played in the daily double, the pay-off was a mutuel of $115.20. Those who collected were the six who backed the chances of Braw Scot in the first race and Toastmaster in the third.

The weather went around the spring cycle, but it was not uncomfortable. The afternoon began with a sizzling sun. A storm bounced over the Blue Ridge Mountains just before the third race, but the skies soon cleared and a cool breeze sprang up.

The Hagerstown Chamber of Commerce is likely to take action against young Jockey L. Garrett, who rode Jilted in the feature. He is said to be a Hagerstown boy who left his home town track, operating in opposition to this course, to ply his trade here.

However, they can't say that he rode a bad race. He took Jilted to the front at the start and stayed there. Tristrap and Flower Time did a lot of futile chasing throughout the 6½ furlongs.

Opener Pays $14.60.

A six-year-old son of Scotch Broom, Braw Scot, staged a stretch drive to take the first race at a $14.60 mutuel. Jockey F. Cusmano brought the ancient plater up to collar Harmoak and Persian Star in the drive for the wire. Persian Star set the pace to the stretch turn before becoming leg weary. However, she held on for the third money in the field of eight. The time of 1:18 4-5 naturally was a track record as it was the first time the course, 120 feet more than six furlongs, has been used.

Pepper Patch won the day's race for juveniles over the 4-furlong route and made it two in a row for the get of Scotch Broom. It was a thrilling nose decision in which the winner came from far back to nip the favored Scout on the wire. Chief Hollis was third. The winner paid $23.40.

The first favorite of the meeting scored in the third race to complete the daily double. It was Toastmaster, the property of R. L. Folsom. The pay off was $5.60.

If Jockey Davis had not stopped riding to try to catch his hat, Mazyniata probably would have won the fourth race. Davis had a three-length lead in the stretch when a gust of wind blew off his hat. He threw one hand behind him in an effort to catch it. In the meanwhile, Jockey N. Brooks had nothing on his mind but a keen desire to win with Flageolet, which was now flying. Before Davis could return to riding, Flageolet was taking the race by a narrow margin. Flageolet paid $4.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—STEPAWAY, $64.90, $23.20, $14.20; SUN TEATIME, $4.50, $3.70; CASH SURRENDER, $13.90.

STEPAWAY displayed good speed, was rated along under slight restraint, was kept in hand when CASH SURRENDER took the lead, but responding gamely to urging, retained the lead in the stretch and held SUN TEATIME safe at the end. SUN TEATIME, slow to settle into his best stride closed going gamely in the last quarter-mile. CASH SURRENDER, quickest to begin, was outrun by the winner but took command again leaving the back stretch and faltered slightly in the drive. TIGER JOHN, in close quarters approaching the far turn, and forced to come to the outside to obtain clear sailing, closed a good gap. GAY CREST was unable to reach the leaders. DOVE OF PEACE, away slowly, was unable to reach the leaders. BETTY GIBSON tired.

SECOND RACE—Five and one-half furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:53. Off at 2:58. Winner, H. Neusteter's b. g. (3), by Stimulus—Golden Heels. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $600; second, $125; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:23 4-5, 0:48, 1:07 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—LAN, $12.70, $5.20, $4.90; DANCING LADY, $3.80, $3.30; FIRE REEL, $7.60.

LAN, in nearest attendance of the early pace established by DANCING LADY, responded gamely to pressure through the stretch, and was up in the concluding stride. DANCING LADY went to the front soon after the start, was rated on under slight restraint, fought it out gamely and just missed. FIRE REEL, unable to keep pace early, came to the outside in the last quarter-mile and finished with good energy. EUCLID closed some ground. AIRLINE, prominently placed, weakened through the stretch. BOBBY BUXTON tired. MODLEN, hard hustled and well up early, dropped back. HEAVY SUGAR was never able to reach the leaders.

THIRD RACE—Five furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 2-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:28. Off at 3:31½. Winner, J. U. Gratton's b. f. (2), by Chance Shot—Hazy Buck Up. Trained by Irving Valo. Value to winner, $750; second, $180; third, $75; fourth, $25. Time, 0:23 1-5, 0:46 4-5, 1:01.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—HIATUS, $7.90, $3.90, $3.00; SHYNO, $5.10, $3.90; MASKED GAL, $3.10.

HIATUS, away fast, was permitted to race along in close attendance of SHYNO until reaching the stretch, took command when called upon and drew out steadily through the closing furlong. SHYNO displayed good speed and held on gamely in the drive though no match for the winner. MASKED GAL lacked speed to keep pace early, moved around on the outside in the last three furlongs, and closed gamely through the stretch. EDDIE C., under pressure from the beginning, showed an even effort. THE FLANKMAN was unable to improve his position under pressure. GLITTER GLOW dropped back steadily.

FOURTH RACE—Five and one-half furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 4:01. Off at 4:04½. Winner, H. T. Archibald's br. f. (3), by Westy Horan—Candy Lady. Trained by G. L. Arvin. Value to winner, $750; second, $150; third, $75; fourth, $25. Time, 0:23 2-5, 0:47, 1:06 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CANDY MAID, $6.40, $3.60, $3.00; TWENTY KARAT, $9.50, $5.40; JESSIE D. M., $7.90.

CANDY MAID, followed in nearest pursuit of the pace while racing restrained, bounded to the front when called upon in the stretch, and drew out as if much the best. TWENTY KARAT, unable to keep pace early, closed with a rush on the outside in the last three-sixteenths. JESSIE D. M. showed most early speed, but broke through the stretch and just lasted to save third. GLYNDON BELLE, prominent throughout, was unable to reach the leaders under punishment. BULL MARKET, outrun early, came with a rush on the inside and was running over his field at the close. HIGH HAND II lacked speed and was outrun throughout. WIZARD was no factor. EARLY DAWN was far back.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. The Harvard Handicap. Purse, $2,500 added. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won ridden out; place, driving. Went to post at 4:34. Off at 4:34½. Winner, J. H. Somerville's blk. f. (3), by Nocturnal—Flattery. Trained by S. L. Burch. Value to winner, $1,930; second, $500; third, $250; fourth, $100. Time, 0:23 1-5, 0:46 2-5, 1:12.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PRETTY NIGHT, $8.80, $4.40, $3.10; SPIXI, $4.90, $2.80; BACHELOR DINNER, $2.60.

PRETTY NIGHT was away well, but in close quarters on the inside. Peters was forced to pull back and, rated along on the outside, made every effort to straighten out and came up in the stretch wearing down the leaders, and was drawing clear at the end. SPIXI had speed from the start, forced the pace of BACHELOR DINNER, assumed a slight lead in the stretch, but was unable to keep pace with the winner challenged. BACHELOR DINNER, quick to begin and showing good speed in pace though unable to draw clear, held on well in the stretch. PURPLE KNIGHT was never prominent.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won ridden out; place, driving. Went to post at 5:08. Off at 5:09½. Winner, Miss L. (4), by Sun Briar—On Top. Trained by H. L. Campbell. Value to winner, $750; second, $150; third, $75; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24 3-5, 0:49, 1:14 1-5, 1:41 2-5, 1:54 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TOP HIGH, $5.40, $3.60, $2.90; POLO BAR, $4.00, $3.20; GRACIAS, $4.60.

TOP HIGH, racing wide all the way, displayed speed from the start, fought it out with POLO BAR and drew out steadily in the last furlong. POLO BAR, prominently placed all the way, took command nearing the stretch, but was unable to cope with the closing bid of the winner. OLAMAY was far back all the way. PLUMAGE did do better than this effort would indicate.

SEVENTH RACE—One mile. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:38. Off at 5:41. Winner, Miss M. White's b. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—JACK CHEVIGNY, $28.80, $16.20, $7.70; PLAYMORE, $18.20, $9.60; BRILLFALON, $4.80.

JACK CHEVIGNY was not hurried during the first half-mile, began working his way up steadily thereafter, assumed the lead in the stretch, and drew out through the closing furlong. PLAYMORE worked his way up steadily and came willingly in the last three furlongs. BRILLFALON, away up, romped back and came again in the closing stretch. LEANN G., on the outside, made the first turn, was placed under pressure, but was unable to reach the leaders. SUN ERIN displayed early speed, but was unable to keep up when the real test came. MR. PETE, well placed, faltered when placed under pressure.

EIGHTH RACE—One mile. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 6:12. Off at 6:12½. Winner, J. L. Nickles b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—ST. OMER, $8.80, $4.70, $3.40; DANCING MACK, $7.60, $4.70; QUEEN VIC, $4.30.

ST. OMER, steadied along in closest attendance of the pace, went to the front in the stretch and, holding on gamely, held DANCING MACK safe. The latter, reserved within striking distance of the pace early, came stoutly through the stretch and was catching the winner at every stride at the end. QUEEN VIC took the lead in the run to the first turn, cut out the running for the first six furlongs and weakened through the stretch. TANNERY closed some ground in the last half-mile.

Eastern Ends 2d Undefeated Year to Take High School Title

Sullivan Fans 17 Western Batters

Pitcher Scores Eighth in Row Against Local Schools.

By John R. Vosburgh.

A SUMMER shower and his seventeenth strike-out victim fell simultaneously yesterday to mark the end of the amazing high school pitching career of Lefty Joe Sullivan, of Eastern High. Running his strike-out total to close to 150 for eleven inter-high series games, the big southpaw turned back Western High's Red-Sox yesterday at Eastern Stadium to win his eighth straight series triumph.

The score was 8 to 2 and marked the second year in a row that Coach Charlie Guyon's Lincoln Parkers have made off with the Clark Griffith Trophy without a defeat. It also gave Tech's last place team some companionship, for the defeat failed Western to a tie for the cellar berth. It was the last game of the 1935 series.

3 Hits for Sullivan.

Sullivan celebrated his final appearance in a high school uniform at the plate as well as on the mound, poling out three hits in four official attempts, including a long drive to center which went for four bases but was reduced to a double when the pitcher failed to touch third base. Two comrades were adorning the paths at the time.

Young Bob Raftery, of Western, starting his first inter-high game, appeared undaunted by the task of facing the champions and but for some faulty base-running and fielding on the part of his team-mates his baptism of fire would have been the cause of no little worry to the confident Easterners. Western found Sullivan for ten hits including a homer by Joe Brennan but the lefty was effective with men on base.

Western handed Eastern a run in the first inning when Borden muffed a fly from Boyce and he scored shortly after advancing on Pepper's single, when Summerbell pegged awry to shortstop. A double by Boyce and a single by Pepper, followed by a walk to Bartoo brought Eastern's second tally in the third. Pepper scoring on an infield out, though Boyce was caught at the plate.

Brennan Stars Afield.

Successive singles by Sullivan and Mikalaski gave Eastern two more in the fourth and Pepper's third single, a walk to Bartoo, and an infield out on Hebrew's grounder which caught Pepper at home brought two more in the fifth and when Sullivan crashed his drive to center for what should have been a homer, Singles by Crinsaful and Hebrew, a walk to Sullivan and a single by Mikalaski brought Eastern's other two runs.

Brennan, in addition to his homer in the fifth, contributed the most spectacular catch of the series when he snared Gordon Bartoo's long fly in the first inning almost astride the steel rail in front of the left-field bleachers, then catapulted over the rail head first into the cinders. He also added two other brilliant catches, one a shoe-string in the third.

Western's other run came in the sixth when an error by Kidwell put Edmonston on first and allowed him to score on Inglesias' single which Taylor threw clear across the diamond into the bleachers.

DARK LAW took command soon after the start to win as his rider pleased. ROYAL LASSIE ran an even race and had no excuses. LOOKBY came from far back in the last half-mile. LADY LAWYER, in hand for three-quarters of a mile, flattened out when put to a drive.

Borries May Miss Naval Commission

Middies' All-American Has Failed in Exam.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., May 29.—Midshipman Fred (Buzz) Borries, All-American football back last season and recognized as one of the strongest all-around athletes ever developed at the Navy Academy, stands in danger of failing to receive his diploma, as well as commission in the service, at commencement ceremonies next Thursday, it was learned tonight.

Officials of the academy stated that Borries was one of five seniors found deficient in examinations recently completed. English and history proved stumbling blocks for the athletic ace, it was said. Borries, with the others, will be allowed a re-examination within a few days, and his future in the service will be dependent upon the outcome of this.

The stalwart Kentuckian has been much hampered during the academic year by attacks of sickness or injuries in athletics. Aside from being the backbone of the football team, Borries also was the main cog of the basket ball squad and played center field on the baseball team.

Polo Game Planned.

Williamsport, Md., May 29.—The Washington County Polo Club will open its season at Fenton Field here June 9, when its team will meet the Quantico Marines team.

W. & L. Team Falls Before Old-Timers

Cy Young Pitches Last Inning of Game.

By the Associated Press.

Lexington, Va., May 29.—A team of former major league stars with the help of a couple of younger professional players from the Pacific Coast tarined their batting oyes on the offerings of two Washington and Lee hurlers here this afternoon and handed the Southern Conference champions a 7-to-3 defeat.

The "old-timers" pounced on McIntosh for three hits and four runs in the first frame and then took things easy the rest of the day. They scored two runs in the sixth and another in the ninth.

Rollo Maple, a former hurler for the St. Louis Browns, kept the Generals' ten hits scattered and struck out five. Cy Young, famed Boston Red Sox twirler, took the mound in the ninth and set the Generals down scoreless.

Allegany Is 6-5 Victor Over La Salle Institute

Cumberland, Md., May 29.—Allegany High avenged that one-hit, 7-to-0 white-washing received at the hands of Phil Fleming and the LaSalle Institute nine by jumping on the Blue and Gold mound ace for five runs in the sixth frame and nosing out Pat Conway's tossers by the score of 6 to 5, today, at Community Park before a gathering of 300 persons.

Booker's Four Wins Steal Spotlight

2,000 at Hagerstown See Colored Youth Score Easily in Feature.

By a Special Correspondent.

HAGERSTOWN, Md., May 29.—Little Ray Booker, ebony-skinned jockey, who is setting the pace for rival riders at this meeting, booted home four winners today to tighten his grip on the leadership. A throng of 2,000 fans saw him return to the winner's circle in four of the first five races.

Booker's performance included winning the daily double, which was worth $66.50 for each $2 ticket. He scored on Edyth M., a $19.60 shot in the Inaugural, and came home aboard Tell It in the third race. The boy was out of the money in the second.

Wins by Six Lengths.

A light rain that fell at intervals throughout the afternoon did no damage, but served only to settle the dust and work the racing strip into almost perfect condition. It also served to whet Booker's appetite for winners. He piloted Scotty Don home by six lengths in the feature Colonial Hotel Purse, and led his fields by comfortable margins in all of his winning efforts.

Rock Spray, owned and trained by Dan Gray, scored the greatest upset of the afternoon when it nosed out Fred's Warning in the second race. Off last in a field of seven, Jockey Sherry brought his mount up to second position at the first quarter, and, after losing ground on the far turn, came with a closing rush that just nipped the place horse.

Md. Baseball Title Won By Washington College

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Chestertown, Md., May 29.—Washington College clinched its hold on the Maryland Intercollegiate Baseball League title today when the Shoremen defeated Mount St. Marys College, 10 to 4. The game was easily won by Coach Tom Kibler's tight defense and heavy battery since the Mounts presented a bad exhibition of fielding, several Shore tallies coming in on wild throws or scrambled short hits.

As has been usual this season, Washington College came from behind to win. Mills and Norris came over the plate for the Mounts in the initial frame. The locals then blasted Sullivan's offerings in the second for four runs as Huffman and Nicholson got on base by well-placed hits, the former advancing on Tignor's base on balls. The three scored on Reinhart's searing liner to left.

Helen Jacobs Wins in Paris Tennis

Champion Only U.S. Entry Left; Hines Bows in Thriller.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, May 29.—Helen Jacobs continued her relentless march through the French hard court tennis championships today, but the only other American representatives, Dorothy Andrus, of Stamford, Conn., and Wilmer Hines, former star at the University of North Carolina, were summarily eliminated.

While Miss Jacobs, the United States champion and finalist in this tournament a year ago, was brushing aside the Italian, Yvona Orlandini, 6—2, 6—0, to reach the quarter-finals, Miss Andrus was beaten by the young Chilean ace, Anita Lizana, and Hines was eliminated by Marcel Bernard, French youngster.

Miss Andrus started her second round match with Senorita Lizana with a 3—1 lead in the first set, gained Tuesday before rain interfered. But on the resumption of play, the Chilean raced through two games to square the match, then outplayed the American by a wide margin to win, 7—5, 6—1.

Hines Almost Wins.

It was under somewhat similar circumstances that Hines found himself shunted to the sidelines. Using a chop stroke with telling effect, he won the first set in easy style and then ran up a 5—1, 4—0 lead in the second set. Here Bernard, named to the French Davis Cup team for the first time today, staged an amazing comeback. He won the next five games in succession to take a 6-5 lead, went on to win the set and then romped through the next two to win, 3—6, 8—6, 6—3, 6—4, as Hines' game collapsed.

Bernard's victory sent him into the fourth round along with the four Australians, Jack Crawford, Harry Hopman, Don Turnbull and Vivian McGrath; the Italian, Giorgio de Stefani; the Czech, Josef Caska, and the Frenchman, Andre Merlin. Fred Perry and H. W. (Bunny) Austin, the British aces, and Christian Boussus, of France, previously had gained berths in this round.

A step ahead of the field, in the quarter-finals, are Gottfried von Cramm, of Germany, the defending champion, and Roderich Menzel, of Czechoslovakia. Von Cramm eliminated Ladislaus Hecht, of Czechoslovakia, 6—3, 7—5, 6—2, while Menzel was disposing of Adrian Quist, of Australia, 6—4, 2—6, 6—0, 6—2.

In the women's quarter-finals, with Miss Jacobs, are Margaret (Peggy) Scriven, of England, the defending champion; Mme. Rene Mathieu, of France; Rollin Couquerque, of Holland, and Hilda Krahwinkel Sperling, of Germany.

Gaithersburg Defeats Sherwood High, 10-1

Gaithersburg High School took a firmer hold on second place in the Montgomery County League yesterday by walloping Sherwood High for the second time in two weeks, 10 to 1, in a seven-inning encounter.

Devilbliss allowed the visitors but two hits while his teammates were pounding Kidwell, also handicapped by seven errors. It marked the winners' sixth victory in the county and virtually doomed Sherwood to the cellar for the year.

Same Owner Wins 3 Kentucky Purses

Knebelkamp's Horses Take Latonia Races.

By the Associated Press.

Latonia, Ky., May 29.—The first triple of the Kentucky season was completed when W. F. Knebelkamp's lightly regarded Lillian Uhl accounted for the Highland Stock Farm Purse, headline attraction of today's mediocre card.

Col. Knebelkamp's Line Drive previously had accounted for the fourth dash and Emileo, owned by his sister, Miss Lillian Knebelkamp, was winner of the second at odds of $371.40. The former jockey, Tommy Murray, saddled all three winners.

Salem Feature Captured by Pretty Night

Scores by a Length Over Bachelor Dinner and Purple Knight.

By the Associated Press.

SALEM, N. H., May 29.—Jockey Maurice "Moose" Peters, leading jockey in 1934, returned to the scenes of his earliest triumphs today and rode T. H. Somerville's Pretty Night to a stirring victory in the Harvard Handicap, the feature race at Rockingham Park.

In the small starting field of five, Purple Knight and Bachelor Dinner, twice a winner here, were the favorites, while Pretty Night was an outsider.

Fight for Lead.

Bachelor Dinner and Spixi fought it out, head to head, for most of the 6 furlongs, with Pretty Knight always within weighing distance. At the head of the stretch the A. G. Vanderbilt colt, Bachelor Dinner, had run himself into the ground and the veteran Peters moved up briskly on Pretty Night, winning by a length over Spixi.

Bachelor Dinner, faltering, held on to the show position.

McKenzie's Bird Victor In Algonquin Club Race

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., May 29.—"Royal Rock," a black check cock owned by Lawrence McKenzie, won the 400-mile race staged by the Algonquin Pigeon Racing Club, from Mitchell, Ind. "Royal Rock" covered the 405 miles in 10 hours 41 minutes, for a speed of 1,111 yards per minute. "Crack Flyer," last week's winner, annexed another diploma for his owner, Francis Meyers, by taking second place.

Having completed the first section of the old bird series, the club will fly over the entire course again beginning with a 100-mile race from West Union, W. Va., Sunday, June 2.

Frederick High School Trips Hagerstown, 4-3

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., May 29.—The Frederick High School baseball team evened the score with the Hagerstown High School by winning from the locals, 4 to 3. Brumbaugh had a shade on Dronenburg of the Frederick team, but three passed balls paved the way for the former's downfall. Hagerstown won from Frederick a week ago.

The score:

Chance to Beat Trojans Given Harvard

Experts See Crimson Threat in College Track Meet.

By the Associated Press.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., May 29.—Of course the wish was father to the thought today when a group of track dopesters, who gathered at the stadium to welcome the large West Coast delegation to the week-end's IC4A championship meet, refused to cast a unanimous ballot for Southern California's reputedly unbeatable forces.

Taking their cue from Brutus Hamilton, University of California coach, who voiced great respect for Harvard's unbeaten team, the Boston experts went into a huddle and agreed that the strongest Crimson team in 14 years had a fighting chance to lead all of the other 37 competing colleges, provided all of its stars stayed up, a few others sprang upsets and the Trojans came to grief in the sprints and hurdles.

"It looks to me," Hamilton told them, "that Harvard is in a position to give the California team a rare battle. If the home forces can perform up to their top standards and a few of them outdo themselves, they will cut deep into the Coast's strength.

If all of the 515 competitors run true to form, Southern California undoubtedly will regain its fifth IC4A victory since 1930 with more than 40 points, with California, Stanford and Harvard putting on a furious struggle for the runner-up's honors.

The Trojans, not due here until late tonight, appear to have but two certain first-place winners, Ken Caryenter in the discus throw and Al Olson in the broad jump. Yale's Keith Brown is expected to prevail over Earl Meadows in the pole vault and if Foy Draper comes to grief in the sprints and Phil Cope and Gil Strother fail to uphold Southern California's hurdle hopes, the Trojans may find themselves back in the ruck.

Only five other competitors in seven events appear to be certain of their specialties. No one disputes the abilities of California's George Anderson to capture both of the sprints, Jimmy Luvalle, star Uclan Negro, to win the 400-meters, Gene Venzke, of Pennsylvania, to register a double in the 800 and 1,500 meter races, Tom Ottey, of Michigan State to lead the 3-000-meters field and Stamford's Jack Mottram to prevail in the javelin throw.

Outside of Hamilton's 13 men, the only other visitors working out in the stadium today were four Stanford men, directed by Bill Ellington, their trainer, in the absence of the ailing "Dink" Templeton, and the sensational Negro flash, Luvalle.

Maryland Guard Takes National Gun Honors

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Frederick, Md., May 29.—For the second consecutive year the First Regiment, Maryland National Guard, with headquarters in this city, has led the Nation in rifle and automatic firing, Col. D. John Markey, commander, announced yesterday. Three units of the regiment, Company A, Regimental Headquarters Company and the band section, are located in Frederick. The regiment, composed of troops throughout the State from Cumberland, on the Western Shore, to Crisfield, on the Eastern Shore, with the exception of Baltimore, led the 82 other units in rifle and automatic firing last year.

Overton's 74 Paces Field of 60 in Indian Spring Golf

3 Prizes Won By Baltimore Contenders

Drewry Cards Net 70 to Capture Award in Class A.

By Dave Herman.

BALTIMOREANS walked off with three of the five prizes in the Maryland State Golf Association tournament yesterday at Indian Spring, with Spencer Overton, bespectacled Rolling Road entry, pacing a field of 60 starters with his medal round of 74.

Overton, long a threat in tournaments in the Middle Atlantic sector, went out in 36, with a brilliant deuce on the ninth hole, and covered the incoming side in 38. He was 3 over par for the 18 holes.

The low net award in class A went to Cooper Drewry, of Rolling road, by virtue of his 38-38—76-6—70.

Winners in Class B were Dr. J. J. Field, of Indian Spring, who had a gross of 39-44—83, and Fred Lang, another of those Rolling Road guys, who captured low net with 47-41—88-19—69.

A. B. Cole, of Argyle, won the lone prize awarded in Class C. He had a brace of 47's for a 94.

Rain Mars Play.

A number of the Washington favorites quit when a torrential storm broke latc in the afternoon.

Volney Burnett, of the host club, had tough sledding, and could do no better than 77. Edgar (Sam) Rice, the reformed big league ball player, shot a 39 on the first nine, and staggered home in 80. Rice's 72 net was two strokes from the winning score.

Playing from scratch and the last seven holes in the rain, Ernie Caldwell, of Hillendale, former Middle Atlantic champion, shot a 77.

Overton's card:

Mrs. Moody Likely To Shun U. S. Play

Ex-Champ, in London, Will Rush Home.

By the Associated Press.

London, May 29.—Helen Wills Moody "probably" will rush straight home to California after she plays in the all-England tennis championships at Wimbledon, she told the Associated Press today, "without waiting for anything at Forest Hills."

The former world champion, attempting a comeback after being on the sidelines for more than a year because of a back injury, will play only singles at Wimbledon. She said she would not compete in doubles, adding, however, that she is "perfectly satisfied" with her condition so far.

Daily Double Price Is $1,332 at Detroit

3 Hold Tickets on Record-Setting Combine.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, May 29.—The daily double at the Detroit Fair Grounds track returned $1,332.60 for $2 today when Glowing Coal paid $15 in the first race and Jesting Queen $137.20 in the second. Three persons held winning daily double tickets.

The price was believed to be the longest ever paid here on a daily double and the price on Jesting Queen was the longest thus far during the spring meeting. She paid $55 to place, and $32 to show after nosing out Dunsprite in the 6-furlong race.

Babe Gets Flowers but No Hits as Team Wins.

The Braves landed on Orville Jorgens, Al Thomas and Euel Moore for seven of their runs in the first two innings. Syl Johnson finally tamed them with one run after the third and drove in three tallies with a double when the Phils rallied in the fourth. Philadelphia didn't get a hit after that inning, however, as Bob Smith came into relieve Dutch Brant and hurl perfect relief ball for five frames. Wally Berger and Jimmy Wilson hit homers in the slugfest.

Macks Bow, 10-9, As Red Sox Rally

8 Runs in 7th Are Decisive in Boston Fray.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, May 29.—Unsteady pitching and fielding marred the free-hitting game which ended today with the Boston Red Sox edging out the Philadelphia Athletics, 10-9. The Hub team used four pitchers in this series opener.

Although outhit, 13-10, by the visitors, Boston combined five hits, two errors and three bases on balls in a wild seventh inning, chasing eight runs across the plate, nullifying a previous 6-1 lead which the Athletics had held.

Elder Miss Barton Enters British Golf Finals.

By the Associated Press.

Newcastle, County Down, Ireland, May 29.—A bitterly fought golfing duel between two sisters marked play in the semifinal round of the British women's championship today. The winner was Pamela Barton, runner-up for the title a year ago; the loser, her younger sister, Mervyn Barton.

Mervyn was five down with only six to go, but staged a dramatic comeback to win the next four holes with 4—3—4—4. She was bunkered off her drive at the seventeenth, however, to give Pamela the victory and a berth in the finals, 2 and 1.

Pamela's rival in the 36-hole championship round tomorrow will be Wanda Morgan, runner-up for the title in 1931. Miss Morgan eliminated Jessie Anderson, of Scotland, 2 and 1.

Marines Lose Game To Local Coal Team

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Quantico, Va., May 29.—Catcher Charlie Doflemyer led the Washington Coal Co. team, of Washington, D. C., to a 6-5 victory over the Quantico Marine nine here this afternoon in a game, replete with brilliant fielding plays. Eddie Webb, of the visitors, and Patterson of the Leathernecks, turned in a pair of truly sensational plays.

Congressional Women Drop In Race

Chevy Chase Now Leads For District Golf Team Title.

CHEVY CHASE, defending champions, overtook Congressional by half a point yesterday at Beaver Dam in the race for the District women's first team title.

While Congressional was winning 8½ points from Columbia, Chevy Chase walloped Woodmont, 9½ to 2½. Up until yesterday's matches, Congressional led by half a point, but it dropped back to second place with a total of 51 to Chevy Chase's 51½.

In the only other match played Army and Navy won from Kenwood, 8½ to 3½.

With only a few more matches scheduled, one next Monday at Army and Navy, another at Manor, indications are that Chevy Chase and Congressional will wage a tight battle right down to the final match for the championship.

"Myatt was through as an active player anyway. We have been carrying him."

Myatt was signed by the New York Giants after his release. Although he hit but .083 in 36 times at bat, the Indians won nine out of ten of their games with him behind the bat. Kamm, playing in only six games, batted .333.

Let's Go Fishing . . .

By M. W. Meier.

AS WE advised readers yesterday, do not delay in placing reservations if you are planning a fishing trip for the week-end. Already, many of the boat captains have been engaged and certain favorite resort hotels booked to overflowing.

There are plenty of big channel bass at Wachapreague, Va. One party landed a dozen huge ones yesterday. King and weakfish also are there in abundance, A. H. G. Mears reports. No blues are on hand, however. No boats or hotel reservations are available there until Saturday night, it is said.

They're landing plenty of weaks along the upper Virginia shore these days—nice big fellows up to 9 pounds, according to report. There are lots of anglers there from New York, after channel bass and blues. The king fish are showing up—plenty of them, although they are small. A number were brought into Washington on Monday. There are also lots of decent-sized croakers.

Ocean City and Chincoteague are also sending in good reports of blues, croakers, weakfish and channel bass. By the way, why do people call 'em sea trout—the weaks, we mean? Won't someone enlighten us?

Minus a reservation, it would appear to be useless to hit Oregon Inlet this week-end. All of North Carolina will be there, a part of Virginia and hundreds of sportsmen from as far up as Boston. That is the most highly publicized spot in America now for fishing.

If you do go down there, remember what we said about picking boats and boatmen. There have already been one or two near-tragedies down there from boats turning turtle because their captains lacked knowledge of steering a boat among seas. The North Carolina coast is a wicked place for an amateur mariner to cut his eye-teeth. We know—by bitter experience. Play safe, gentlemen!

For Angling Vacations.

WE'VE had a few calls from men planning angling vacations next month. They wanted to get as far from civilization as they could. Whenever possible, we'll be glad to give the "low-down" on the places we are familiar with and help contact you with men who intimately know those that we don't. Washington is filled with men who have just about fished the waters of the earth.

We've had some splendid reports of fishing in Maine, New Brunswick and Ontario. The trout season in Maine is expected to be the best they've ever had and unusual catches have already been reported.

A combination canoe-and-fishing trip to Maine waters is surprisingly cheap when split up among four to six men. In a day or so we're going to brief the log of one made by Dr. Paul Hatch, of Washington, which cost only $15 for four never-to-be-forgotten days on Mane's best and wildest trout stream, the Alagash. That cost included his share of guide expense, canoe hire and grub from Caribou!

If you can afford as much as two hundred dollars and fourteen days, we can also tell you what we told another happy angler—where to get the most thrilling salmon fishing the world offers up near British Columbia.

Then right down off the coast of North Carolina is an island called Ocracoke where one can spend about forty dollars and get two weeks of channel bass and blue fishing that will live forever in your memory. A lovely, wind-whipped, lonely spot of historic lore, fierce storms, primitive people. There is a little fishing village there and surprisingly decent hotel accommodations. And what surf fishing!

We're fast gathering together a library of nation-wide fishing data, game laws and what not, and column readers are invited to make use of it.

Line Care Important.

VERY few anglers seem to take proper care of their fishing lines and they frequently pay dearly for this neglect when an unexpected big 'un connects with their bait or lure.

A good cuttyhunk line costs a lot of money. So does a tapered trout line. Never wind them up in a wet condition to dry out on the reel. They rot out every time. Dry them out on a line-dryer or else stretch them out in the air. If you have been using them in oily or polluted water, it is best to wash off in a pail of fresh water or else the bath tub when you reach home. If you wind sand up on a line, it plays hob with it, for the grains are sharp and tight winding will cut the threads.

Line-dryers can be bought cheaply or else constructed at home of a few pieces of wood, wire, or else an old bike rim.

Nats Are Crushed By Yank Homers

Redmond and Lazzeri's error at second base when Pinch Hitter Fred Schulte struck out. Kuhel's fly scored Powell, a passed ball scored Redmond and Manush's double scored Bluege. Myer walked, but Stone could only ground to Gehrig, who was having a busy day in the field.

Held runless for two innings by Belve Bean, the Yanks found young Henry Coppola facing 'em in the seventh. He was no success. Dickey sandwished a single between strike-outs by Lazzeri and Hoag, and Coppola then walked Crosetti. A balk advanced both runners a base and Ruffing smacked a triple over Powell's head. He scored the third run of the inning on Coppola's second balk of the inning, but they were scoring only for exercise, it developed, when the umps called the game before the inning was completed.

Medical Center Wins From Air Men

Bolling Field Bows, 9-7, in Service League Feature Game.

BEHIND the fine relief pitching of Raymond Davis the Army Medical Center Team shook off the losing jinx that has dogged its efforts for the past month and defeated Bolling Field, at Walter Reed, 9 to 7, in yesterday's feature of the Army-Navy Service League games. Fort Washington continued its winning habit by slugging out a 15-to-8 win over Army War College, and Pitcher Redling, on the mound for Naval Air Station, shut out the Receiving Station nine, 11 to 0, in yesterday's other league contest.

Sharing honors with Davis in the Medicos' victory as Cecil (Aggie) Harris, who contributed several brilliant bits of fielding around the shortstop position, and led both teams in hitting with three safeties in five times at bat. The stick work of Willy, English, Windham and McGroarty was conspicuous in Naval Air's rout of the Receiving Station.

Majestics Play Alexandria Tilt Today

Special Dispatch to The Post.

ALEXANDRIA, Va., May 29.—In the Memorial Day feature Alexandria will see the renewal of an old rivalry between the Majestic Radio nine, of Washington, and the St. Mary's Celtics. The Celtics are 1-up on the invaders, having won an encounter earlier in the season.

Doug Morgan has been chosen by Coach Kidwell to do the mound duties. Lefty McIntyre, former Celtic star, will face his old teammates.

The Mount Vernon Independents will meet the Mount Rainier Grays for the Memorial Day attraction at Engleside.

The attraction for the members at the Belle Haven Country Club tomorrow will be the beginning of qualifying rounds for the Belle Haven Bowl.

There will be many golf events beginning at 2:30 o'clock, including a pitching contest and putting match, with each contestant shooting from the reverse side.

In another game tomorrow the Fort Hunt CCC outfit will meet Fort Washington in an attraction beginning at 11 a. m. This team, led by Jack Watt, former Lee-Jackson High School coach, has won ten consecutive tilts and are looking for No. 11. This will be the first of a three-game series to determine the "championship of the Potomac."

Alexandria will see a new team in the local independent sandlot field. After two years' absence from the diamond, the Del Ray All-Stars have organized again. Formerly one of the best teams in this section, they went to Washington Sunday and beat the Clifton Red Sox, 10 to 5, without team practice.

The team desires games with local and Washington clubs. Manager Calvin Rawlett can be reached at Alexandria 2343, or call Alexandria 967-W and ask for "Buddy."

The strong Winston-Salem Black Sox will meet the Washington Royals on Saturday at Baggett's Stadium.

Overton's 74 Paces Field of 60 in Indian Spring Golf

3 Prizes Won By Baltimore Contenders

Drewry Cards Net 70 to Capture Award in Class A.

By Dave Herman.

Overton, long a threat in tournaments in the Middle Atlantic sector, went out in 36, with a brilliant deuce on the ninth hole, and covered the incoming side in 38. He was 3 over par for the 18 holes.

The low net award in class A went to Cooper Drewry, of Rolling road, by virtue of his 38-38—76-6—70.

Winners in Class B were Dr. J. J. Field, of Indian Spring, who had a gross of 39-44—83, and Fred Lang, another of those Rolling Road guys, who captured low net with 47-41—88-19—69.

A. B. Cole, of Argyle, won the lone prize awarded in Class C. He had a brace of 47's for a 94.

Rain Mars Play.

Volney Burnett, of the host club, had tough sledding, and could do no better than 77. Edgar (Sam) Rice, the reformed big league ball player, shot a 39 on the first nine, and staggered home in 80. Rice's 72 net was two strokes from the winning score.

Mrs. Moody Likely To Shun U. S. Play

Ex-Champ, in London, Will Rush Home.

By the Associated Press.

London, May 29.—Helen Wills Moody "probably" will rush straight home to California after she plays in the all-England tennis championships at Wimbledon, she told the Associated Press today, "without waiting for anything at Forest Hills."

The former world champion, attempting a comeback after being on the sidelines for more than a year because of a back injury, will play only singles at Wimbledon. She said she would not compete in doubles, adding, however, that she is "perfectly satisfied" with her condition so far.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, May 29.—The daily double at the Detroit Fair Grounds track returned $1,332.60 for $2 today when Glowing Coal paid $15 in the first race and Jesting Queen $137.20 in the second. Three persons held winning daily double tickets.

The price was believed to be the longest ever paid here on a daily double and the price on Jesting Queen was the longest thus far during the spring meeting. She paid $55 to place, and $32 to show after nosing out Dunsprite in the 6-furlong race.

The Braves landed on Orville Jorgens, Al Thomas and Euel Moore for seven of their runs in the first two innings. Syl Johnson finally tamed them with one run after the third and drove in three tallies with a double when the Phils rallied in the fourth. Philadelphia didn't get a hit after that inning, however, as Bob Smith came into relieve Dutch Brant and hurl perfect relief ball for five frames. Wally Berger and Jimmy Wilson hit homers in the slugfest.

Wilmington Show Attracts Socialites

Hunter Competition Opens Today in Delaware.

The fourth annual Wilmington horse show opens today on the estate of Mr. and Mrs. Norman P. Hood to continue for the remainder of the week.

This show, solely a hunter competition, has attracted entries from ten States in all parts of the East and will find such famous sportsmen as Mrs. John Hay Whitney, Col. and Mrs. M. Robert Guggenheim, Mrs. R. R. M. Carpenter, Mrs. Thomas Somerville, Mrs. Ellsworth Augustus, Mrs. A. E. Reubens and many members of the DuPont family, all competing for ribbons.

11 Holiday Golf Tourneys Set Here Today

Chevy Chase Lists Match Play Event; Bogie at Congressional.

LEVEN District golf clubs will stage tournaments today as part of the Memorial Day program.

Chief interest at Chevy Chase will be in the Victor Kauffmann Trophy Tournament, a match play against par event, 18 holes, with seven-eighths of handicap to apply.

Flag tournaments are on tap at Columbia, Kenwood, Argyle and Indian Spring, with the last two also to put on driving and approaching contests.

Congressional has listed a blind bogey and medal play handicap tournament, while a tombstone tournament will be held at Washington Golf and Country Club.

Macks Bow, 10-9, As Red Sox Rally

8 Runs in 7th Are Decisive in Boston Fray.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, May 29.—Unsteady pitching and fielding marred the free-hitting game which ended today with the Boston Red Sox edging out the Philadelphia Athletics, 10-9. The Hub team used four pitchers in this series opener.

Although outhit, 13-10, by the visitors, Boston combined five hits, two errors and three bases on balls in a wild seventh inning, chasing eight runs across the plate, nullifying a previous 6-1 lead which the Athletics had held.

Elder Miss Barton Enters British Golf Finals.

By the Associated Press.

Newcastle, County Down, Ireland, May 29.—A bitterly fought golfing duel between two sisters marked play in the semifinal round of the British women's championship today. The winner was Pamela Barton, runner-up for the title a year ago; the loser, her younger sister, Mervyn Barton.

Mervyn was five down with only six to go, but staged a dramatic comeback to win the next four holes with 4—3—4—4. She was bunkered off her drive at the seventeenth, however, to give Pamela the victory and a berth in the finals, 2 and 1.

Pamela's rival in the 36-hole championship round tomorrow will be Wanda Morgan, runner-up for the title in 1931. Miss Morgan eliminated Jessie Anderson, of Scotland, 2 and 1.

Marines Lose Game To Local Coal Team

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Quantico, Va., May 29.—Catcher Charlie Doflemyer led the Washington Coal Co. team, of Washington, D. C., to a 6-5 victory over the Quantico Marine nine here this afternoon in a game, replete with brilliant fielding plays. Eddie Webb, of the visitors, and Patterson of the Leathernecks, turned in a pair of truly sensational plays.

Congressional Women Drop In Race

CHEVY CHASE, defending champions, overtook Congressional by half a point yesterday at Beaver Dam in the race for the District women's first team title.

While Congressional was winning 8½ points from Columbia, Chevy Chase walloped Woodmont, 9½ to 2½. Up until yesterday's matches, Congressional led by half a point, but it dropped back to second place with a total of 51 to Chevy Chase's 51½.

In the only other match played Army and Navy won from Kenwood, 8½ to 3½.

With only a few more matches scheduled, one next Monday at Army and Navy, another at Manor, indications are that Chevy Chase and Congressional will wage a tight battle right down to the final match for the championship.

of running a ball club. My chief attackers, the two newspapers, I mean, seem to go into a frenzy whenever we hit a losing streak. I suffer a whole lot more than they do when the Indians lose.

"Myatt was through as an active player anyway. We have been carrying him."

Myatt was signed by the New York Giants after his release. Although he hit but .083 in 36 times at bat, the Indians won nine out of ten of their games with him behind the bat. Kamm, playing in only six games, batted .333.

Let's Go Fishing . . .

By M. W. Meier.

AS WE advised readers yesterday, do not delay in placing reservations if you are planning a fishing trip for the week-end. Already, many of the boat captains have been engaged and certain favorite resort hotels booked to overflowing.

There are plenty of big channel bass at Wachapreague, Va. One party landed a dozen huge ones yesterday. King and weakfish also are there in abundance, A. H. G. Mears reports. No blues are on hand, however. No boats or hotel reservations are available there until Saturday night, it is said.

They're landing plenty of weaks along the upper Virginia shore these days—nice big fellows up to 9 pounds, according to report. There are lots of anglers there from New York, after channel bass and blues. The king fish are showing up—plenty of them, although they are small. A number were brought into Washington on Monday. There are also lots of decent-sized croakers.

Ocean City and Chincoteague are also sending in good reports of blues, croakers, weakfish and channel bass. By the way, why do people call 'em sea trout—the weaks, we mean? Won't someone enlighten us?

Minus a reservation, it would appear to be useless to hit Oregon Inlet this week-end. All of North Carolina will be there, a part of Virginia and hundreds of sportsmen from as far up as Boston. That is the most highly publicized spot in America now for fishing.

If you do go down there, remember what we said about picking boats and boatmen. There have already been one or two near-tragedies down there from boats turning turtle because their captains lacked knowledge of steering a boat among seas. The North Carolina coast is a wicked place for an amateur mariner to cut his eye-teeth. We know—by bitter experience. Play safe, gentlemen!

For Angling Vacations.

WE'VE had a few calls from men planning angling vacations next month. They wanted to get as far from civilization as they could. Whenever possible, we'll be glad to give the "low-down" on the places we are familiar with and help contact you with men who intimately know those that we don't. Washington is filled with men who have just about fished the waters of the earth.

We've had some splendid reports of fishing in Maine, New Brunswick and Ontario. The trout season in Maine is expected to be the best they've ever had and unusual catches have already been reported.

A combination canoe-and-fishing trip to Maine waters is surprisingly cheap when split up among four to six men. In a day or so we're going to brief the log of one made by Dr. Paul Hatch, of Washington, which cost only $15 for four never-to-be-forgotten days on Mane's best and wildest trout stream, the Alagash. That cost included his share of guide expense, canoe hire and grub from Caribou!

If you can afford as much as two hundred dollars and fourteen days, we can also tell you what we told another happy angler—where to get the most thrilling salmon fishing the world offers up near British Columbia.

Then right down off the coast of North Carolina is an island called Ocracoke where one can spend about forty dollars and get two weeks of channel bass and blue fishing that will live forever in your memory. A lovely, wind-whipped, lonely spot of historic lore, fierce storms, primitive people. There is a little fishing village there and surprisingly decent hotel accommodations. And what surf fishing!

We're fast gathering together a library of nation-wide fishing data, game laws and what not, and column readers are invited to make use of it.

Line Care Important.

VERY few anglers seem to take proper care of their fishing lines and they frequently pay dearly for this neglect when an unexpected big 'un connects with their bait or lure.

A good cuttyhunk line costs a lot of money. So does a tapered trout line. Never wind them up in a wet condition to dry out on the reel. They rot out every time. Dry them out on a line-dryer or else stretch them out in the air. If you have been using them in olly or polluted water, it is best to wash off in a pail of fresh water or else the bath tub when you reach home. If you wind sand up on a line, it plays hob with it, for the grains are sharp and tight winding will cut the threads.

Redmond and Lazzeri's error at second base when Pinch Hitter Fred Schulte struck out. Kuhel's fly scored Powell, a passed ball scored Redmond and Manush's double scored Bluege. Myer walked, but Stone could only ground to Gehrig, who was having a busy day in the field.

Held runless for two innings by Belve Bean, the Yanks found young Henry Coppola facing 'em in the seventh. He was no success. Dickey sandwished a single between strike-outs by Lazzeri and Hoag, and Coppola then walked Crosetti. A balk advanced both runners a base and Ruffing smacked a triple over Powell's head. He scored the third run of the inning on Coppola's second balk of the inning, but they were scoring only for exercise, it developed, when the umps called the game before the inning was completed.

Blue Flame, Ballston Slate Twin Bill Today

An attractive double-header is slated at Ballston, Va., today between two leaders of the Post Sandlot League. Ballston, ahead in the Northern Virginia League, and Blue Flame, the National City League runners-up at present, will clash at Ballston. Lefty Stevens and Joe Spankler will twirl for the Blue Flame nine, while Lem Owen and Otis Prince will draw the mound assignment for the Virginians. First game time is 1:30.

Adds to Grid Schedule.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Clarksburg, W. Va., May 29.—Glenville and Warwood High Schools have been added to Victory High School's gridiron schedule for 1935, taking the place of Moundsville and Bridgeport which have been dropped.

Medical Center Wins From Air Men

Bolling Field Bows, 9-7, in Service League Feature Game.

BEHIND the fine relief pitching of Raymond Davis the Army Medical Center Team shook off the losing jinx that has dogged its efforts for the past month and defeated Bolling Field, at Walter Reed, 9 to 7, in yesterday's feature of the Army-Navy Service League games. Fort Washington continued its winning habit by slugging out a 15-to-8 win over Army War College, and Pitcher Redling, on the mound for Naval Air Station, shut out the Receiving Station nine, 11 to 0, in yesterday's other league contest.

Sharing honors with Davis in the Medicos' victory as Cecil (Aggie) Harris, who contributed several brilliant bits of fielding around the shortstop position, and led both teams in hitting with three safeties in five times at bat. The stick work of Willy, English, Windham and McGroarty was conspicuous in Naval Air's rout of the Receiving Station.

Utilities Strong As Stocks Make Readjustments

Power Shares Score New Highs for Year but Others Lag.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 29.—The stock market settled down a little today and went seriously about the business of readjusting equity prices to the changed conditions of a codeless business set-up.

In the process utilities came to the fore on active buying which sent prices of many of the leaders in that division up major fractions to 3 points or so. Most of the pivotal industrials were rather freely offered, however, and the minus sign was the favorite prefix for quotations at the close, taking the list as a whole.

The mixed movements in the day's trading was illustrated by the Associated Press average for 60 stocks, which at 41.3 was .4 of a point under Tuesday's close. The 30 industrials included in the compilation, however, were down 1.1 points at 56.9, rails were .3 of a point lower at 21.9, while the utilities lifted to a new 1935 high at 29.7, up .9 of a point.

The following in utility shares ignored a more than seasonal decline in electric power output for the latest week. They based their bullish frame of mind, Wall Street observers said, on the expectation that Monday's set-back to New Deal legislation measures was likely to induce a careful reconsideration of the Wheeler-Rayburn utility bill now before Congress.

Grains Slump To New Lows

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, May 29.—Jolted by five cents a bushel collapse of wheat prices at Minneapolis, grain markets here suffered sharp late downturns today. Milling interests were reported to have withdrawn abruptly for the time being as buyers of wheat, and there were reports that demand for flour had fallen off except to fill immediate wants. With wheat crop advices generally bearish, Minneapolis wheat values dropped to the maximum limit allowed during any 24-hour period, and Chicago May and July wheat and December corn, as well as all deliveries of oats and rye here, registered new low price records for the season.

Wheat in Chicago closed weak at the day's bottom level, 2¼ to 2¾ under yesterday's finish, July 84¾ to 84⅞; corn ¼ to 1 cent down, July 78 to 78⅛; oats ⅜ to 1⅞ off, and provisions unchanged to 25 cents lower.

Contributing to weakness of Chicago wheat values were setbacks of prices for stocks and cotton, together with uneasiness regarding a downward tendency of the Winnipeg wheat market.

Argentine Trade Balance Increases

Buenos Aires, May 29.—Argentina had a favorable trade balance in April of 40,500,000 pesos ($13,470,000 at the official rate of exchange) as compared with 14,000,000 pesos ($4,700,000) in the corresponding month of last year. Exports for the month totaled 131,500,000 pesos ($43,830,000) while imports were valued at 91,000,000 pesos ($30,330,000).

For the first four months of 1935, the country had a favorable balance of trade amounting to 183,400,000 pesos ($61,130,000) against 165,600,000 pesos ($55,200,000) in the same period last year.

French Franc Deluge Pours Into Belgium

By the Associated Press.

Brussels, May 29.—Hundreds of millions of francs in gold are pouring in from France for exchange into Belgian francs. The brokers in the Brussels exchange market have been unable to satisfy the demand which has been enormous for the last 48 hours.

On the French frontier, residents of the Tournai and Courtrai districts are eagerly exchanging French for Belgian currency, fearing that the French money may be devalued, while Belgian frontier stores have benefited by the heavy buying.

Foreign Trade Turns Against U. S. for April

The First Unfavorable Balance Reported Since August, 1933.

By the Associated Press.

An unfavorable balance in the Nation's foreign trade in April—for the first time since August, 1933—was reported yesterday by the Department of Commerce. Total foreign trade declined in April. Exports, which usually recede about 6 per cent from March, were 11 per cent smaller. Imports, which ordinarily fall about 3 per cent, were 4 per cent lower.

The excess of imports over exports, the unfavorable balance, amounted to $6,217,000. Exports in April were $164,350,000, compared with $184,603,000, in March and $179,427,000 in April, 1934. Imports were $170,567,000 in April, compared with $177,275,000 in March and $146,523,000 in April, 1934.

The Nation still maintained a favorable balance for the first four months of the year. It was $20,853,000, compared with a favorable balance in the first four months of 1934 of $132,250,000.

New York, May 29.—At meetings of standing committees of the New York Stock Exchange today, the following chairmen and vice chairmen were elected: Arbitration committee, Peter J. Maloney, chairman. Edward E. Bartlett, jr., vice chairman; committee on stock list, Frank Altschul, chairman, Herbert G. Wellington, vice chairman.

Market Moves Of the Day Seen In Brief Review

Advances	187	154
Declines	472	567
Unchanged	147	137
Total issues	786	858

Stocks—Utilities advanced to new high averages for the year, while other groups were lower in a process of readjustment.

Bonds — Strond, demand for power issues was a feature of the bond market. Federals remained virtually motionless. Transfers, $8,988,000.

Cotton—Continental selling induced by French situation caused liquidation which carried cotton $3 below the month's highs. May, 11.57.

Sugar—Raw sugar was unchanged at 3.35, while the refined closed at 5.25 for the fine granulated.

Coffee—Spot coffee was steady. Rio No. 7 last at 6⅞, and Santos No. 4 last at 8¼.

Bar silver—Off ⅜ of a cent in New York and closed at 73⅛ cents per ounce. In London, last prices were up 1½d. to 141s. 9d. (73.31 cents).

Code Elimination Held Unlikely to Cause Resumption of Price and Wage Deflation on Broad Scale; Better Profit Margins Expected by Some.

By a Special Correspondent.

New York, May 29.—Serious doubts that the elimination of the NRA codes will lead to a protracted new deflationary movement in commodity prices and in business are expressed by well-informed observers who are seeking to take a long-range view of the effects of the Supreme Court's epoch-making decision.

Certain immediate effects of this character have already appeared. Sporadic cases of retail price cutting have been reported, especially in the tobacco field and in such special instances as the Los Angeles gasoline price war. In wholesale markets, conditions are chaotic, but a considerable number of smaller concerns especially are reported thinking in terms of lowering of prices to attract larger sales volume.

Some deflation of wages seems certain to occur, despite sincere protestations of business leaders that they are strongly opposed to such a development. While actual wage scales may be kept intact, elimination of higher rates of pay for overtime, increases in the standard work week and other such readjustments are being planned to lower unit wage costs of production.

Better Prospects Discourage Severe Cuts.

However, the prospects of more active business beginning with the second half of the year, incident to the launching of the work relief program and further possible increases in private construction activity, will tend to hold such price and wage cutting tactics in check. While the existence of a large surplus productive capacity in many industries encourages vigorous efforts to expand sales, prospects of getting more business without slashes in prices or costs will be a restraining influence. Voluntary trade association efforts, and whatever can be salvaged in the codes, will contribute further to the maintenance of existing price and wage levels in many lines.

Furthermore, in a number of industries the codes have been largely ineffective, so that price and cost deflation have already occurred. This has been true, for example, in the lumber industry since the withdrawal from the Supreme Court of the Belcher case.

A more serious threat to the integrity of the present level of commodity prices would be a finding by the Supreme Court that the processing taxes under the agricultural adjustment act are unconstitutional. Interested lawyers here express the view that there is less than an even chance that the court would bar the processing taxes. If they do, however, a considerable decline in prices of agricultural commodities, and in products fabricated therefrom, would doubtless occur, at least for a time.

All in all, the New Deal has interjected a number of artificial factors which have raised prices and wages. Business would receive a considerable setback if these artificial factors were to be eliminated in short order, despite the influence of easy money and other recovery forces now at work. The view prevails, however, that there will probably be no such drastic elimination of New Deal influences within the near future, despite the legal blow that has been struck.

Relief as Management Regains a Freer Hand.

On the other hand, many a sigh or relief is heard in industries where further extension of Federal regulation has been seriously feared. In the petroleum industry, for example, the Schechter decision is hailed as marking the demise of the pending Thomas bill, which would impose rigid Federal regulation on the petroleum industry and endow it in large measure with a public utility status. Since production control is now exerted chiefly by the individual States and Federal regulation applies only to inter-State shipments under the Connally act, which the industry believes remains constitutional although attached to the national industrial recovery act, elimination of the oil code is not looked upon as an adverse development.

Similarly, the copper industry hopes to retain the advantages of the code by voluntary agreement, as it did before the depression, without an excess of dictation from Washington. Needless to say, the utility industry is elated over prospects that the holding company elimination bill may be held unconstitutional.

In the long run, spokesmen for a number of industries assert, profit margins will be maintained and probably increased moderately as a result of the Schechter decision. In part, this is expected to result from elimination of numerous overtime payments to labor. A second factor will be the lengthening of the average work week which, in the automobile, steel and several other industries, would permit a marked increase in plant efficiency without a reduction in total man-hours of labor employed. If the social security bill should be held unconstitutional, there would be less likelihood of heavy social security taxes on industry. Finally, in some industries lower prices due to code abandonment and moderately more vigorous competition are expected to have a highly beneficial effect in stimulating demand and expanding production and total profits.

Wilbur Moves To Keep Stock Dealers' Code

Measures Being Taken to Hold Regulations in Force After June 16.

By R. Karl von Lewinski.

A movement to keep local investment dealers in line with the principles of the investment bankers' fair practices code until some new plan can be formulated was launched yesterday by Rollin Wilbur, managing director of the code committee.

A telegraphic communication received by Y. E. Booker, chairman of the investment code committee in this territory, asserted that action to keep benefits of the code operative after June 16 would be taken.

In effect, Wilbur said that the codes decision of the Supreme Court rendered the code not binding as law. In view of the fact, however, that all registered securities dealers in this territory had subscribed to a contractual agreement with each other which had not been covered in the court decision it was requested that all rules be kept in force until June 16. A study to clear the point is being made at the present time.

He further requested that pending conclusion of counsel and a study by the code committee of the larger problem whether to continue the important portions of the fair trade practice provisions after June 16 under a voluntary agreement, registered dealers are asked to observe the principles and rules of the code as a matter of principle and fairness.

By so doing it is believed that the benefits which have resulted to the public under the code and its administration will be conserved pending an endeavor to solve the problems.

Active negotiations and conferences are now going on, and any plan which may be worked out will be subject to approval by each registered investment banker.

Wilner Heads Underwriters.

The managers' division of the Life Underwriters of the District of Columbia yesterday elected Bernard L. Wilner to succeed Earle Sapp as president. Wilner is well known in life insurance circles. He is senior member of the firm of Wilner & Wilner, general agents of the State Mutual of Massachusetts.

A native of Washington, Wilner graduated from the Wharton School of Finance, University of Pennsylvania in 1926. He is the author of several insurance articles on agents' time-control methods.

Richard W. Griswold, general agent of the Guardian Life, was chosen secretary of the group.

Baltimore Phones Increase.

Calls over lines of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. during April totaled more than 26,400,000, it was reported to the Maryland Public Service Commission today.

Net opearting income for the month was $230,770, a decrease of $356 as compared with April of last year, while operating revenue was $1,096,208 and operating expenses were $865,438.

Telephones in service on April 30 numbered 207,809, an increase of 6,292 as compared with 1934.

$15,500,000 San Diego Gas Bonds Offered

New York, May 29.—For the purpose of consolidating all of its outstanding bond issues, bearing interest at the rate of 5, 5½ and 6 per cent, into one issue bearing 4 per cent interest annually, the San Diego Consolidated Gas & Electric Co. is making public offering today, through an underwriting group consisting of the First Boston Corporation, H. M. Byllesby & Co., W. C. Langley & Co., Blyth & Co., Inc., A. C. Allyn and Co., Inc., and Edward B. Smith & Co., of a new issue of $15,500,000 first mortgage bonds, 4 per cent series, due 1965.

The bonds, which are dated May 1, 1935 and due May 1, 1965, are priced at 101 and accrued interest.

Railroads Acquire 54 Locomotives In Four Months

Fifteen new steam locomotives and 39 new electric locomotives were placed in service by the Class I railroads of the country in the first four months of this year, according to the Association of American Railroads. The railroads, in the first four months of 1934 installed no new steam locomotives but six new electric locomotives.

New freight cars installed by the Class I railroads totaled 755 in the first four months of 1935. In the same period last year, 1,093 new freight cars were placed in service, and in the same period two years ago there were 893.

The railroads on May 1 this year had on order one new steam locomotive and 53 new electric locomotives. New electric locomotives on order on May 1, 1934, totaled 107.

Shawmut Bank to Cut Capital Stock in Half

Boston, May 29.—The National Shawmut Bank has called a special meeting for July 8 to vote on the directors' proposal that the capital stock be reduced from $20,000,000 to $10,000,000 and that the reduction be transferred to surplus account. The transfer does not contemplate any write-down of surplus because all losses as determined by Federal supervising authorities have been charged off or fully provided for.

An accompanying letter calls attention to the fact that the National Shawmut Bank is one of the banks of the country that has gone through the depression without reducing its surplus account.

Steel Industry Is in Confusion, Survey States

Stability Will Depend Upon Companies; Capacity 42½%.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 29.—The Supreme Court decision on NRA has left the steel trade "in a state of confusion," said Iron Age today in its weekly summary. Concerning the current producing rate, the publication estimated the average at 42½ per cent compared with 43½ per cent a week ago.

"It is commonly conceded that market stability from now on will depend entirely on the voluntary action of individual companies, the review declared. "To what extent months of experience in code operation will tend to forestall a reversion to secret price-cutting and harmful trade practices is, of course, unpredictable. But producers are hopeful that fear of market demoralization will serve as an effective substitute for code control in preventing a return of uneconomical practices.

"The industry's steadfastness in adhering to code standards and practices will face a severe test in coming weeks. It would be hazardous to forecast a prompt collapse of the price structure since most producers and many consumers as well have come to place a high value on the stabilizing influence of code-sponsored wage and working standards, which would be imperiled by a price war."

Scrap Steel $10.83, Fifth Consecutive Rise

New York, May 29 (AP).—Due to a 25-cent a ton increase at Chicago, the Iron Age composite price of steel scrap has risen from $10.75 to $10.83 a ton, its fifth consecutive weekly advance.

Equity Corp. Buys Atlas Subsidiary

Rockefeller, Jr.'s Son-in-Law Heads Former.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 29.—Control of American, British & Continental Corporation, an investment company, has passed from Atlas Corporation to Equity Corporation, it was announced today.

Blocks of preferred and common stock, representing about 65 per cent of the former and 77 per cent of the latter, were sold for cash to Reliance International Corporation, an affiliate of Equity, by National Securities Investment Co., an affiliate of Atlas.

It was announced that the sale was made in accordance with the policy of the Atlas group of simplifying its financial structure. Equity also is engaged in a similar program.

Equity, headed by David M. Milton, son-in-law of John D. Rockefeller, jr., and Atlas, headed by Floyd B. Odlum, expanded rapidly during the depression years by acquiring control of other investing companies.

Power Output Declines.

New York, May 29 (AP).—The Edison Electric Institute reported today electric power production of 1,696,051,000 kilowatt-hours for the week ended May 25, a decrease of 0.8 of 1 per cent from the previous week but an increase of 2.5 per cent from the same period of 1934.

Power Issues Are in Demand In Bond Trades

Street Believes Ruling on NRA Will Affect Utility Legislation.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 29.—A strong demand for utility issues was the principal feature of the corporate bond market today.

Other divisions were hesitant but there was little selling pressure and prices in most cases held within close range of Tuesday's close. U. S. Governments were lifeless throughout the session and ended in a snare of small gains and losses.

Growing belief that the knockout punch administered to NRA by the Supreme Court would have an important bearing upon the Wheeler-Rayburn bill now being considered by the Senate was credited by investment circles with responsibility for the revived interest in utility bonds.

News dispatches from Washington stating that Senator Hastings would move to commit the measure to the Judiciary Committee for study in light of the NRA ruling also received prominent display in bond houses.

Transfers aggregated $8,988,000, par value, compared with $13,485,000 on Tuesday. The Associated Press averages were .4 of a point higher to .3 of a point lower.

Cotton Driven Off $1.40 a Bale

French Situation Starts Continental Sales; July, 11.57.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 29.—Cotton declined $1.30 to $1.40 a bale today, carrying the market more than $3 a bale under the midmonth highs, owing to heavy general selling. The market closed barely steady at net losses of 26 to 28 points.

Uncertainty over the French political situation brought in increased continental selling, while commission houses liquidated contracts, owing to heaviness of other markets and lack of clarification on New Deal policies as a result of the Supreme Court decision on the NRA.

Mill selling was believed to represent hedging against both raw cotton and unsold goods. Buying was limited to scale down price fixing and covering. Final prices were within a few points of the lows for the day.

Foreign Exchange.

By the Associated Press.

Leading foreign currencies moved in orderly fashion in exchange markets yesterday despite the increasing financial tension in France, where rigid control was exercised by Government-controlled agencies. In New York the franc gained 00¾ of a cent at 6.58¼ after the dollar had ended slightly lower in Paris at an equivalent of 6.587 cents to the franc.

In London the dollar was steady. Closing at 4.93⅛ to the pound compared to the overnight New York rate of 4.93¾ and the franc was kept steady by official operations. In New York sterling declined ⅝ of a cent to $4.93⅝.

Once Overs

By H. I. Phillips.

Passing of a Bird.

The Supreme Court of the United States has shot the Blue Eagle.

• • • • •

And not a single justice dissented on the ground that he was a bird lover.

• • • • •

Little Nira was thrown downstairs, with no preliminary arrangements for a net to catch her.

• • • • •

It was such a heartless proceeding that spectators at first questioned whether they were watching a day in the Supreme Court or an hour in an abattoir.

• • • • •

Yes, Virginia, there is a Constitution.

• • • • •

And the attitude of the high court is that while nobody can expect that Congressmen have read it, everybody has the right to assume they have heard of it.

• • • • •

The decision came in the case of a live poultry firm. The question raised by the poultrymen was not, "Why does a chicken cross the street?" but "Has a Democratic administration any right to cross a chicken dealer?"

• • • • •

What it amounts to in a nutshell is that the question, "Wanna buy a duck?" can be asked without interference from the code authorities, and that no government can control flying feathers without first wetting them down.

• • • • •

It was the first victory in history of barnyard poultry over a bird of flight.

• • • • •

For once the highest court in the land wasn't divided. The decision was unanimous that there was room in America for only one Brain Trust, and that that place wasn't in the administrative branch.

• • • • •

It was a great blow to the New Deal. In fact, all followers of Mr. Roosevelt had justification for thinking at first that it was not a Supreme Court decision but a campaign speech by Herbert Hoover.

• • • • •

The need of the minute is a code for dropping codes. The confusion is intense. NRA still insists that there is a maximum distance for throwing a Blue Eagle emblem.

• • • • •

What will be the outcome no one knoweth. The President and the administration urge business men not to scrap the codes completely, and if the business leaders are wise they will make no scramble to put everything back where it was before bird life and government were mixed.

THE BUNGLE FAMILY Goodbye! By Harry J. Tuthill

Good bye, Ches. Sorry to rush away.
Oh we've been here a long time now and...
I'm afraid Josephine, that instead of sharing George's love for the cool quiet here, you like the noisy bustle of the city, eh?
Well I don't mind saying, George, you're on my foot!
Excuse me. Ah... what Jo means, Ches, is that she's a bit homesick and...
Homesick? For a 4 or 5 room dungeon where you have to lean out a window to see the good clear sky?
It's just beyond me. A mystery. Always was.
My theory on why people think they like the city is just this....
Well good bye, Uncle Ches.

The Game of Life

By Princilla Wayne

MAMA sobbed bitterly when Ellen said goodby to her. "I want you to go and Yet I don't want you to go. But it's the chance of a lifetime for you."

"It means that I'm out of amateur competition for the rest of my life."

"And you don't like that?"

"I don't really care," Ellen said, slowly. "If I had it all to do over again I'd never play in a single contest. I'd stay at home—with my baby. I'd make a real home for him, no matter what the cost."

"Oh, darling, don't torture yourself. Dr. Dale told me! It wasn't anything any of us failed to do nor anything that we could have avoided. Miss Compton was devoted to little Mike. All of us watched him carefully—no, darling, don't torture yourself with regrets."

Tortured by Regrets.

"I'll always torture myself with regrets, Mama. I wish with all my heart I'd stayed home, that I had kept house for Michael and raised our baby and given up trying to work outside and get famous. You can't follow two masters—how impossible to follow three. Now that it's too late and I never can have them, I know that most of all I wanted to be Michael's wife, little Mike's mother."

"I'm going to talk to Michael. He loves you, Ellen—oh, I've got my own regrets, dear."

"No, Mama, it won't do any good to talk to Mike. If our baby had lived Michael would have done anything to make a home for him. I muffed my chance there—now it's too late."

Ted Was Wonderful.

"I'll not get famous. I'll just be a professional and professionals don't get famous. But I'll be busy and I'll be away seeing new faces, new sights—it will help me to forget. And you mustn't worry, Mama. Write me sometimes. But you're going to have a happy life. There's your big new home."

"Ted is perfectly wonderful, Ellen. He's going to educate Bob, and Aunt Ellen has promised to come and live with us. We'll be just one happy family. But it won't be complete, Ellen—not until you get back, anyway."

Afterward, Ellen knew that the complete change of scene had saved her sanity. But before the first month of her professional contract was over, Ellen was heartsick for home. Before the third month she longed to quit.

Pelton's Protestations.

It was hard work and not too pleasing work. C. C. Pelton might have been an affable employer if he hadn't managed to fall in love with Ellen the day she signed her contract with him.

And it didn't help matters in Ellen's sight that C. C. Pelton already had a wife and child and that he persisted in telling of the imperfections of his wife. "Now she's blonde," he said once. "Gentlemen prefer blondes! Does that ever panic me? Gentlemen prefer blondes. Huh! Say, Baby, I'll take a brunette any day—especially one with cute little curls like you've got. I bet that ain't no permanent." And he ran his fingers through the riot of her gipsy black hair.

"Please keep your hands to yourself, Mr. Pelton," Ellen said. They argued angrily and finally Pelton said: "Okay by me, Baby, a week from today in Chicago you're through."

Was Going Home.

"And O. K. by me," Ellen said as she packed her bag on the day of her release. Her mind was all made up. She meant to go home just as quickly as she could go. And the first person she meant to see after she got home was Michael Dale.

Oh, it had taken her a long time to come to that conclusion.

But she had had plenty of time to think in the almost three months she had been away and the horrid thing she had once called Pride had left, never to return.

"I love him and I want him," she told herself fiercely. "He loved me once. Surely something of that love remains. I've been a fool. I've pretended that I wanted everything except the very thing I wanted most—Mike's love. But I'm going home. I'm going to tell him that I love him, that I can't ever go away again."

Her heart was lighter than it had been in weeks when she boarded the train in Chicago early in the morning. An all day ride and she would be home.

It seemed to Ellen, now that she was nearing home, that she had never been away. The months she had worked were fading into hateful memories. How foolish she had been to let herself in for anything like professional tennis. Somehow, as Ellen had experienced it, all the joy of the game had been taken away.

She remembered, near the end of her journey that she hadn't told anyone, not even Mary who seemed now closer than anyone else to her, that she was coming home.

Registered at Hotel.

She considered first going to Mary's home on her arrival. But that might be just a bit embarrassing at first—if Michael happened to be there. She dismissed going to Mama's just as quickly. The little old home had been sold, so they had written, and Ellen did not feel at home in the Hardesty mansion.

In the end she registered at the hotel. "Mrs. Michael Dale," she wrote in a firm, boyish hand. "And I live right here," laughing up at the old hotel clerk she had known all her life, "but coming into town unexpectedly like this I thought I'd better stay here. The folks at home won't be expecting me."

"Have you been away, Ellen?" the old man asked.

Mother Was Happy.

Mama was all elated. Her voice sounded youthful and happy. "Why, Ellen, you scamp. When did you get in town?"

"Just a little while ago," Ellen explained, "and I though that I'd come to the hotel tonight and make arrangements tomorrow for a permanent place to stay."

"Well, you check out right away. Ted and I will be down immediately. You be waiting for us in the lobby."

And it was while she waited for her mother and her mother's new husband that Ellen, looking out of the hotel window at the familiar scene she knew so well, saw Michael and Marjorie pass by.

It was a cold evening in late November, but they did not seem to mind the weather.

Marjorie held Michael's arm very tightly. She was saying something to him that must have interested him very greatly for Michael was looking down at her almost tenderly with a smile of interest on his face.

Broadway

By Ed Sullivan

Broadway Looking Glass.

New York, May 29.

Most compelling of the advertisements that you read in your daily paper are those illustrated by the gorgeous professional models of the town. I asked Aldo Ermini, one of the greatest commercial photographers of the country, how many girls he required to fill the varied specifications of cigarette, automobile, hosiery, soap, dentifrice and glove ads, each one of which stresses a different element of beauty. Mr. Ermini tells me that there are 12 classifications which he seeks in photography, either color or black and white, and he listed them. These are the things he likes best in the professional models he prefers: Refreshing youthfulness, Charlotte Young; vivacity, Anita Coonihan; athletic build, Babs (Fisher Body) Beckwith; lovely hands, Helen Ressler (you see her in the soap ads); perfect features, Janice Jarrett (ciggie model, who won a Goldwyn contract); perfect legs, Betty Miller; graceful feet, Winnie Strickland; perfect body proportions, Claire McQuinlan; perfect teeth, Frances Fenimore; sophistication, Frances Joyce; distinguished posture, Betty McLauchlen; poise, the exotic Gwili Andre; charm and perfect grooming, Betty Wyman.

Earl Carroll, they tell me, made a short but forceful speech to the beauties of his "Sketch Book" company in Philadelphia two nights ago: "Ladies of the ensemble," he told them, "when the show returns to Broadway, I would prefer you to make dates with the wealthy youngsters of Park avenue and Wall street. If you must be dated up, don't fall into the common error of being dated by musicians and Broadway characters, for they won't aid you or the show." It is a plea that will be seconded by all the unmarried night-loafers on the Stem. The Broadway musicians generally wind up with all the beauties of the chorus. I asked Ann Graham, one night at the Hollywood, why girls from shows preferred musicians. "That's natural," she said, "their working hours coincide with the working hours of chorines. The ordinary fellow, who has to be at work in the morning at 9 o'clock, can't hang around night clubs until the girls get off at 3 a. m. So the musicians, who also work until 3 a. m., are the natural escorts."

• • • •

How much money do the night club stars receive? That is a common question received in the mail of a columnist. I have one such letter on my desk now. It says: "Dear Mr. Sullivan: I know that you writers exaggerate the facts to make a better story, but just between the two of us, is there any night club performer who makes as much as $1,000 a week?" Just between the two of us then, I'll answer it. Harry Richman, who concludes a four-week engagement at the Versailles Wednesday night, will have received approximately $18,200 for his warbling. That is at the rate of $4,500 a week. His guarantee was $3,200 a week, but he had a percentage above gross receipts of $21,000. Jimmy Savo or Fannie Brice will succeed him at Versailles.

This is the time of year when youngsters about to be graduated from school write in for help on their commencement day addresses. One lad writes in to ask if the business of writing is commercially profitable, and if so, can I give him figures to bolster his speech. That's fairly easy, young fellow, me lad. Famous Dollar Signs of the profession should include M.-G.-M.'s $250,000 check to Winchell Smith for "Turn to the Right," United Artists' $165,000 check to Elmer Rice for "Street Scene," Fox's $100,000 check to Noel Coward for a double sale of "Cavalcade" and "Bittersweet," RKO's $125,000 to William MacGuire for "Rio Rita," and M.-G.-M.'s check of $75,000 to George S. Kaufman for "Merrily We Roll Along." Surprisingly enough, "Anthony Adverse" netted Hervey Allen only $35,000 for the film rights, although the book sales earned him a fortune. "G Men," which will be one of the biggest money makers of the year, was sold for peanuts. But thar's gold in them thar Hollywood hills!

Inside on the Jimmy Walker case is that it never has been truly an income tax violation, in the proper sense of the word. The problem confronting his pals was to reconcile his income tax statements with his conflicting testimony at Albany, when Seabury prosecuted him before the then Governor, Franklin D. Roosevelt. The case now has reached the solution stage, Jimmy's friends will be happy to learn!

Count Haugwitz tells friends here that of all American institutions, he holds greatest respect for American newspapers. His reverence for the papers traces back to an amusing incident. He and Barbara Hutton, while he was abroad, agreed upon a cable code to defy the curious. "Two days after my first cable," the Count explains, "I received a cable from a New York paper, in our code, asking me for an exclusive story."

Better Housing Day Is June 15 for District

In a proclamation the District Commissioners yesterday named June 15 as "District of Columbia Better Housing Day."

The Commissioners called on District residents to join in "marking the day with appropriate observances in order that the benefits of the better housing program may be brought to a still greater number of our people."

Culbertson on Bridge

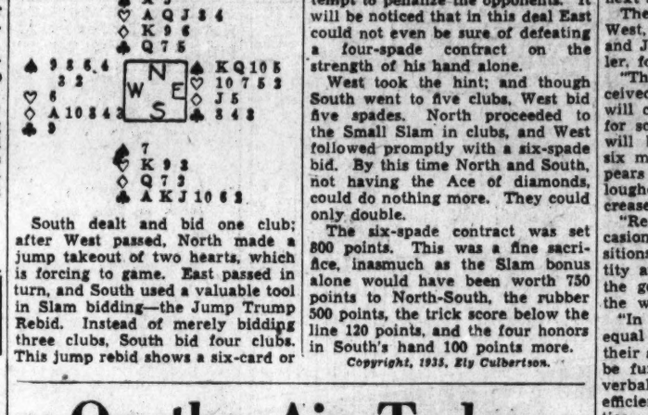
Never Give Up.

IT never pays to give up, no matter how hopeless your hand may seem. When your partner has passed, and your hand is terrible, and both opponents are bidding as though they must surely reach a Slam, it becomes more important than ever to stay wide awake and look for chances to make some bid or double which will aid you in the defense.

Certain doubles on very weak hands are obligatory in the new 1935 Culbertson System. They form an important feature in the regulated method of sacrifice bidding. Always look for opportunities to use this type of double, as did a player in the deal below.

South, Dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.



South dealt and bid one club; after West passed, North made a jump takeout of two hearts, which is forcing to game. East passed in turn, and South used a valuable tool in Slam bidding—the Jump Trump Rebid. Instead of merely bidding three clubs, South bid four clubs. This jump rebid shows a six-card or longer suit containing no more than one loser.

West passed, and North then bid four spades. This was an obvious cue bid, used to show control of the spade suit. North could not make a conventional four-notrump bid, not having the King of any suit which had been bid by his side.

If East—like many players I have met—had become mournful and despondent, he probably would have passed in a dolorous tone, leaving the field open to the enemy. But instead East doubled in firm tones.

This double means: "Partner, I have at least four cards of this suit, headed by King-Queen or Ace-Jack or something else pretty strong. If your distribution makes a sacrifice bid seem advisable, you may at least be assured of strong support in this suit." Thus, the double is a conventional bid rather than an attempt to penalize the opponents. It will be noticed that in this deal East could not even be sure of defeating a four-spade contract on the strength of his hand alone.

West took the hint; and though South went to five clubs, West bid five spades. North proceeded to the Small Slam in clubs, and West followed promptly with a six-spade bid. By this time North and South, not having the Ace of diamonds, could do nothing more. They could only double.

The six-spade contract was set 800 points. This was a fine sacrifice, inasmuch as the Slam bonus alone would have been worth 750 points to North-South, the rubber 500 points, the trick score below the line 120 points, and the four honors in South's hand 100 points more.

On the Air Today

By Katherine Smith.

Three telegrams came in yesterday—"Stoopnagle and Budd join Ford Waring broadcast first week July." . . . "Helen Oelheim of Captain Henry's Showboat engaged for Metropolitan Opera Company starring roles, Edward Johnson, Met manager, announces" . . . and a longer one about Eddy Duchin.

Eddy will conduct a national "open" tournament for singing talent as he tours the country with his orchestra. Auditions will be held in each city when the orchestra arrives, the winners to receive a cash prize and a spot on the Fire Chief broadcast.

One man and one woman will be selected each week. Duchin's initial audition is in Washington, as he opens his tour June 7. Winners from this city will appear on Fire Chief program of June 11.

The Tuesday night winners will be judged, and the two finalists sent to New York for the last contest. The New York radio audience will determine the winner sometime late in the summer when Duchin's tour is over.

If you heard an unannounced speaker last night, around 9 o'clock, who rambled on about what he saw and heard, it was Gordon (Timekeeper) Hittenmark, broadcasting from the alley near the Fox Theater. His "Strange Interlude" was intended to come as a surprise. How did you like it?

By the way, he's putting on Norville W. Sharpe, Shrine publicity big-wig, Friday, 8:15 a. m., WRC. He will explain the Shriners' plans for the convention.

Special events and high-spots:

"Let We Forget" a Decoration Day drama, WMAL, 1:30 p. m.

American's Town Meeting, from Town Hall New York, with "isms" represented—Raymond Moley defends democracy and the New Deal; A. J. Muste speaks for communism; Norman Thomas, socialism, and Lawrence Dennis, fascism. Main topic: "Which Way America?" On WMAL, 9 p. m.

Kate Smith's show moves to a new day and time and is heard tonight, WJSV at 7 p. m. Program includes music, interviews, last minute dramatizations of news events.

"Naughty Marietta" is sung on the Showboat, WRC, 8 p. m.

Miss Eleanor W. Dodd Wins Hygienists' Medal

Miss Eleanor W. Dodd was awarded a gold medal by the Georgetown University Dental Hygienists' Alumnae Association yesterday. The Rev. Coleman Nevils, president of the university, who made the award, named Miss Dodd as the outstanding hygienist in the class of 1935.

At graduation exercises yesterday, the alumnae group announced its annual banquet and dance for June 8. Mrs. Julia Treger Kraisel is taking reservations.

The Federal Diary

Trade-Mark Registered U. S. Patent Office.

By Morgan Baker.

WHILE the future looks uncertain for NRA employes, personnel in another New Deal agency was assured of security yesterday afternoon.

BAKER.

Approximately 2,000 employes of Rental and Benefit Audit Section, AAA received a memorandum announcing that the increase in the number of contracts received per day has dispelled the probability of furloughs or dismissals during the next six months.

The memorandum, issued by E. B. West, acting chief of the section, and John B. Payne, AAA comptroller, follows:

"The number of contracts received per day has increased and will continue at the increased rate for some time. Greater production will be required during the next six months. Therefore, it now appears that no one will be furloughed or dropped because of decrease in work during such period.

"Retention in position (and occasional promotions to higher positions) will depend upon the quantity and quality of work done and the general attitude shown toward the work and the other employes.

"In order to give to all employes equal opportunity to demonstrate their ability, it is intended that they be furnished with all written and verbal instructions necessary to the efficient performance of their duties. Any employe who is in doubt about any matter should contact his immediate superior for instructions. Failure to receive adequate instructions should be reported to the acting chief of the rental and benefit audit section."

Two New Lodges.

Col. Charles I. Stengle, executive officer, AFGE, returned yesterday from the Midwest. Two new lodges, No. 198 and No. 199, were chartered in Louisville, Ky., he announced.

Hearings on the Sirovich bill, scheduled for resumption yesterday, have been postponed indefinitely.

Marriage Clause Forum.

Federal Diary readers are invited to write on this subject (or on any other subject affecting Federal personnel. For each letter favoring or opposing section 213 that is published, a pair of tickets to one of the Loew's theaters will be awarded. The letters will be published in pairs—one for and one against the clause. All communications must be signed with the writer's name and address. Upon publication initials or pen names will be used if requested. Letters must not exceed 250 words.

Here are the best two today:

Opposing Section 213.

Dear Mr. Baker:

"Here are three reasons why I think Section 213 should be repealed:

"1. In cases where reduction has been necessary and married persons forced to resign, only those drawing lower salaries were affected thereby. This was very unfair and certainly not along lines of economy.

"2. Many married couples working in the Government, both drawing small salaries, are buying a home and most of the salary of one of them goes to meet the monthly payments on the property. In case one of the pair is separated from the service before he or she is retireable, they will probably lose the home they cherish, and in case of illness or death of the one remaining in office nothing but poverty will face the survivor.

"3. A man and wife may have worked for years in the Government and are both very efficient and have good ratings. In the enforcement of Section 213, one will be forced to resign in case reductions are necessary, and a less efficient clerk will be placed on the work. It will take years for a less experienced clerk to become as valuable to the office as was the former clerk and the work suffers, and worst of all the merit system is entirely disregarded. Section 213 is unfair in every sense of the word. A MARRIED CLERK (C).

Favoring Section 213.

Dear Mr. Baker:

"Selfishness has never evolved a satisfactory and final solution to any problem. Its practice has always created unhappiness and misery. During the present period of devastating distress, there devolves a duty upon those who are in possession of the reasonably adequate necessities of life to consider and assist those less fortunate. This spirit of fair play, this expression of sympathy for fellow beings, in my estimation, may be demonstrated and practiced by supporting the objective of Section 213 (married person's clause) of the economy act.

"If my observation is correct, much of the unpopularity of this law is not due to the law as such, but to the enforcement thereof. It has been shown that the spirit and intent of the law have been perverted. The ax has been trained on the low-salaried class and away from the high-salaried class. It is my suggestion that the law be amended to the end that it shall not apply to those whose salary is less than $1,420 a year, or perhaps better still, it shall not apply to a husband and wife whose combined salary is less than $2,500 a year. With respect to those whose combined salary exceeds this minimum, the law shall apply with full force and effect.

"Once these or similar restrictions are imposed, the law will lose much of its harshness, and, at the same time, its popularity will mount. Of course, arguments for repeal of the clause, which on their face appear sound, will still be advanced. However, their shallowness, or even fallacy, will be exposed in the light of reason.

"One contention is that the marriage clause tends to bring about the replacement of competent employes with ones less capable or even incompetent. Without entering into any extended discussion, I, for one, believe that there are very few employes who are indispensible to the Government. And since when have those in the service monopoly on ability?

"M. L. W." (C).

Prominent roles will be taken by Government employes in "Where Masks Are Worn," current production of the Columbia Players; Wayne Bobst, Stateher, FERA; Wayne Bobst, State Department, and Wade Robinson, Government Printing Office are important members of the cast. The play will be presented at Pierce Hall June 5 and 6.

Diary Guest Tickets.

IF F, P or C follows your name in this column, call in person and see the Federal Diary editor between 4:30 and 6 p. m. tomorrow. You will receive tickets to one of the following Loew's theaters: F. Loew's Fox (stage, Myrt and Marge and other acts; screen, "Age of Indiscretion," with Paul Lukas and Madge Evans); P, Loew's Palace (Mae West in "Goin' to Town"); C, Loew's Columbia (second week of Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy in "Naughty Marietta").

Memorial Challenge.

Today we pause and turn aside from toil
To pay respects to those, who, duty done
Lie pillowed in the all surviving soil
Upon those checkrowed slopes of Arlington.

For them no more will war-time bugle blast,
Nor call to civil duty come each dawn.
Their service, gladly given now is past
And peace attend their rest on that fair lawn.

But for us who remain a little while——
We who now serve the nation they revered,
Their service, which was fraught with self-denial
Bids us uphold the standards which they reared.

F. C. (F).

Justice Appoints Athlete.

Roger Leverton has been appointed to a position in the Clerical Division of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, Justice. He will assume the post about the middle of June, T. D. Quinn, inspector, announced yesterday.

Leverton, a graduate of Central High School, was an all-around athlete at the University of Richmond, winning 11 Spider letters. He accepted the Federal job in preference to pursuing the study of law or staying at Richmond as an assistant coach.

"Statutory Disclaimers in Patent Law," a book, has been published by P. J. Federico (P), examiner at the Patent Office. Mr. Federico is the author of many articles on patent subjects.

School Club Play Tomorrow.

The Torch, dramatic organization at Holton-Arms School, will present "Alice-Sit-By-the-Fire," by Sir James M. Barrie, tomorrow night in Pierce Hall. The production will be the last play of the season for the group.
